HAPPY HOOSIERS. Wm. Timmons, Postmaster of Idaville, Ind., writes: "Electric Bitters has done more for me than all other medicines combined, for that bad feeling arising from kidney and liver trouble." John Leslie, farmer and stockman, of same place, says: "Find Electric Bitters to be the best kidney and liver medicine, made me feel like a new man." J. W. Gardner, hardware merchant, same town, says: Electric Bitters is just the thing for a man who is all run down and don't care whether he lives or dies; he found new strength, good appetite and felt just like he had a new lease on life. Only 50c. a bottle, at Robbins & McCords drug store. 2

Ed. Binney, while splitting logs with giant powder at Greensburg, was dangerously injured by the premature discharge of the blast. He will lose the sight of both eyes.

What A Pity

that so many otherwise attractive, polite and particular people afflict their friends by the foul and disagreeable odor of their breath. it is mainly caused by disordered digestion, and can be corrected by removing the cause, by using that pure medicine, Sulphur Bitters.—Health magazine.

LIFE'S UPS AND DOWNS

VISITING THE GOOD PEOPLE OF THE WORLD.

A SCORE SLAIN.

Bordeaux special: An appalling accident occurred just outside the harbor of Blaye, on the river Girone, 24 miles northeast of this city. Lying off the harbor was the British steamer Petrolia commanded by Capt. Hubback, which had arrived from Philadelphia. Suddenly there was a flash, a tremendous roar, and the vessel was apparently blown to pieces. Huge fragments of the deck and deck-houses were carried upward to a great height. The shock of the explosion alarmed the town and hundreds of persons rushed to the wharves to discover the cause of the noise, it being thought by many that the magazine of one of the forts defending Blaye had been blown up. The river was strewn with wreckage from the Petrolia, and it was at once seen that the disaster was due to an explosion of gas that had formed from the petroleum comprising her cargo. Burning oil was floating on the water. This drifted with the tide and floating against several vessels laying at anchor near by set them on fire. Two or three other vessels were ignited by burning oil which fell on their decks or rigging.

The Petrolia was soon burning furiously and the heat was so intense that it was dangerous for small boats to approach near to her. Volumes of stifling black smoke hung over and around the burning steamer. Some of the more venturesome of the boatmen, hearing the cries for help, rowed as close as possible to her. They succeeded in picking up sixteen of her crew, three of her engineers, and the second officer. The survivors said that there were twenty others on board the vessel when the explosion occurred and another search was made in the vicinity of the burning ship in the hope of saving more lives, but not a body was found and it is believed that every one of these twenty men perished.

Later information from Blaye shows that a thunderstorm was prevailing at the time the explosion occurred, and that the disaster was caused by lightning striking the vessel.

INTO THE RIVER

Jumps Mrs Beaudry With Her Two Children.

Bay City (Mich.) special: Mrs. Geo. Beaudry, of South Bay City, jumped into the river with two of her children and all were drowned. Mrs. Beaudry rose as usual and began getting breakfast. Her husband and five children were in bed. A few minutes after she went to the bed-room of the two younger and, dressing them, started from the house carrying Victoria, aged 3 years, and leading George, aged 6, who has been blind for several years. Mrs. Beaudry went to the river and sat down on the bank. She pushed the boy into the river, and seeing a man coming down the street, she jumped in herself, with the girl in her arms. The man reached the river in time to see the mother and children about to sink, but not wishing to risk his life in an attempt to save the three, ran back to give an alarm. The bodies were recovered shortly afterwards.

Famous Mrs. Stowe.

Hartford (Conn.) special: Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe, the author of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" and other well-known books, recently celebrated her eighty-first birthday. The event was commemorated by a birthday celebration by the pupils and graduates of the Hartford Seminary, which was founded in Hartford by Miss Beecher in 1827. She received a number of congratulatory telegrams from all over the country.

Another Water Spout in Iowa.

A water spout burst in the northwestern part of Shelby County, Iowa, over a territory two miles wide. It washed out the bridges over the Mosquito creek, drowned many head of stock and washed out the road bed of the Milwaukee railway for about a mile. It was accompanied by a heavy hail storm. No loss of life has been reported.

Dr. Stucky's Purchase.

President Stucky has purchased the interest of Larry Gaito in the Louisville ball club. Dr. Stucky says he does not intend to release Pfeffer as was first reported.

California Shaken Up.

An earthquake of thirty seconds' duration visited Southern California recently. It was especially severe at Riverside, although no serious damage was done.

Blew His Head Off.

Edward Hoff left home at Mascoutah, Ill., with a double-barrel shotgun to go hunting. The remains of the boy were found in the woods. The head was literally torn off by buckshot. Death is supposed to have been the result of an accident.

His Gun Exploded.

While Dell Yasler of Bourbon, Ind., was hunting his gun exploded, injuring his arm so badly that amputation will probably be necessary.

A Pupil Dies of Her Punishment.

Philadelphia special: Nurella Wellby, a little 11-year-old girl living on Moyamensing avenue, was killed by punishment inflicted on her in one of the public schools. During a processional march the teacher observed her treading on the heels of the other girls. For this she was made to stand aside, and after awhile the teacher, by way of punishment, told her to walk up and down a long flight of stairs. The teacher meant only to have her walk for a few minutes but she forgot all about the feeble child and the little one kept on trudging away for several hours. At last when the school was dismissed, she went home. On the way she fell exhausted, and it was with difficulty that her companions got her home. She grew weaker and weaker until she finally died. The Doctor says her death was directly due to the punishment.

AN AWFUL CALAMITY.

A Dozen Men Killed by an Explosion.

A special from San Francisco, dated the 15th inst., says: Residents of Vallejo were startled by a report which shook the town like a sharp shock of earthquake and immediately the fire bells at the navy yard were rung and the conclusion reached was that there was a fire on Mare Island. But down at the magazine there belched forth into the sky an immense cloud of smoke and for half an hour report after report was heard as the shells exploded. Immediately the entire navy yard force rushed for the magazine and a horrible sight presented itself. The burned and charred bodies of the two apprentice seaman were found on the beach, 200 yards from the scene of the explosion. In the midst of the ruins and all around on the side hills were found bodies and pieces of bodies scattered here and there. The bodies were taken out as fast as possible, and when all were put alongside of each other they counted twelve, with Gunner Hittinger of the Boston, at the head. Some were cut in two, others were minus a leg or an arm or head. Twelve men were killed outright and three were taken to the hospital wounded, but dying. The explosion had thrown them into the bay and a boat from a merchantman opposite rescued them and then went through the smoke and ruins for others. The cuticle of almost the entire bodies of these two as well as their clothes were blown off and yet they were conscious and able to move, but they cannot recover. A working party of fifteen men from the United States Steamship Boston, was preparing ammunition and filling shells for the ship. All were at work in the filling room of the magazine under charge of Gunner Hettinger. It is supposed that one of the party dropped a shell and that the concussion caused an explosion. One of the first to go to the scene was Dr. Lewis of the Naval Hospital. Although now and then an explosion of a shell occurred, he braved the danger and went into the midst of it to save life if possible, but the explosion had finished its work. There were three magazine watchmen, named Collins, Burns and Damstedt on duty in other parts of the grounds, who were severely injured. Watchman Collins had a narrow escape. A piece of shell glanced from the top of his head and left an ugly contusion. The first one had shaken him almost senseless and after he was struck he walked for an hour about the ruins. Gunner Hittinger was blown on the roof of shell house No. 1, having been blown clear through the roof of shell house No. 2. Mrs. McDougal of the light house, with her daughters, Misses Bessie and Carrie, was early in giving assistance to the wounded, bringing bandages and doing much that was necessary at the moment. Magruder, Crane, Page, Moore, and Lewis, all of the navy, were on the scene, but there was not much for them to do. The work of identifying the dead has not yet begun as the energies of all have been devoted to getting the remains together and quenching the fire. Almost the entire crew of the Boston, to which ship the dead and wounded belonged, worked hard in the ruins under the direction of Lieutenants Pease, Robinson, and Hughes.

Sweedes and Hungarians Strike.

Marquette (Mich.) special: A riot occurred with striking miners at the Osceola mine. Charles Daniels, a mine captain, and Chris Dungelson, a laborer, were instantly killed. Four hundred Sweedes and Hungarians compose the strikers, and they are growing more bold and excited every hour. The Marquette rifles have been notified by the Governor to be ready to leave for the scene of trouble at a moment's notice and are now under arms. There is every evidence that a strike will be inaugurated among the 3,000 men at the Calumet and Heckla mines within a day or two.

Bay City (Mich.) special: A fierce battle occurred between property owners and West Bay City Electric railway employes. The railway company undertook to lay a switch. The citizens armed themselves with two lines of hose, which they attached to city hydrants and for two hours played upon the working railway men, who, on account of the flood, were obliged to retire and the street was filled to overflowing with water and the main track partly washed out. Citizens are on watch and are prepared to renew the battle.

Cutting Passenger Rates.

Chicago special: The Pennsylvania and Erie claims and the Baltimore and Ohio denies that the latter is cutting rates to the Democratic National Convention. Vice-Chairman Donald is convinced that the Baltimore and Ohio had cut rates and quietly authorized competing lines to meet them. The most definite charge is that the Baltimore and Ohio captured the Jackson Club of Mansfield, Ohio, on a 50 per cent. cut rate. The Erie and Pennsylvania say they will immediately make any rate made by a competitor.

An Awful Fall.

Charles Waite an aeronaut, who gave a baloon exhibition at Tolchester Beach, an excursion resort on Chesepeake Bay, received injuries which are likely to prove fatal. When 1,500 feet above ground he cut loose with a parachute, the ropes of which became tangled, preventing its opening properly. Waite came down like a flash making desperate efforts to disentangle the ropes. He fell in a cornfield. The doctors say no bones are broken.

Increasing Activity of Vesuvius.

Naples special: The eruption of Mount Vesuvius is hourly increasing in violence. Lava is pouring out of the crater in immense volumes like a river of molten metal. The base of the mountain has been shaken by earthquakes, attended with deep rumbling and thunderous noises, which have alarmed even the most seasoned inhabitants of the neighborhood. Earthquakes have also been felt, more or less, all over the south of Italy.

Highwaymen Captured.

A. J. Greer, chief of a gang of highwaymen who have committed many robberies, has been captured by Deputy Sheriff Jackson and jailed at Huntington, Texas. His arrest was brought about by L. F. Francisco, who was assaulted in May by three masked men and robbed of $30,000. He recognized his assailant's voice and offered a reward of $200 for their arrest.

The First in France.

The corner stone of the first "Young Men's Christian Association of France" building was laid in Paris, recently. The edifice will cost a million of francs of which 400,000 were donated by Mr. James Stokes and family, of New York, who, with several other Americans were present at the ceremony. A similar amount has been promised by M. Andre, regent of the Bank of France, and his friends.

A Woman Elected.

In order to settle definitely the result of the School Board election held at Decatur, Ill., three separate counts of the 2,847 ballots was necessary. Mrs. Moris Stafford was declared elected over Mayor W. B. Chambers by a majority of five votes. The Equal Suffrage Club will have a parade and Mrs. Stafford will ride in an open carriage drawn by four white horses.

Fire at Hartford City.

The Crescent paper mills of Hartford City, Ind., burned to the ground. These were the largest of the kind in the State of Indiana and covered many acres of ground. The entire plant was valued at nearly $200,000 and nothing was saved but the pulp mills, which are worth probably $40,000. The owners carried an insurance in the Lumbard agency of Fort Wayne for $65,000.

A Big Find.

H. N. Cox, residing near Nevada, Mo., while digging under a floor of his residence in the course of some repairing, discovered a large kettle full of money supposed to have been buried there during the war. The discovery was made four weeks ago, but the news has only now leaked out. Cox's hired man is reported as saying the find amounted to $30,000.

Wants a State Soldiers' Home.

The ninth annual State encampment of Sons of Veterans, Michigan division, was held at Battle Creek. The usual routine business was transacted and several committees appointed, the most important being one to aid the G. A. R. in securing legislation for the erection of a soldiers' home in Michigan; also one to add an insurance system to the order.

Murderous Wretches.

Mike Pendergast and Henry Stemmick entered the saloon of Nels Anderson at Deadwood, S. D., and ordered drinks. Upon being refused they attacked the proprietor, the former using a revolver and the latter a knife. The shots from the revolver went wide, but Stemmick got near enough to Anderson to cut his throat.

A Fight with Smugglers.

Seattle (Wash.) special: Local customs officers, after a desperate fight with a gang of Chinamen, seized 375 pounds of smuggled opium in a wash house. Three Chinese, one a woman, were badly wounded by the officers. All are now in the hospital. One of the officers was cut by a dagger used by the woman.

A Cloud Burst at Hartford.

A cloud burst visited Hartford City, Ind., and the waters became so high in the city limits that a horse was drowned in a stable. He could not be extricated. Among some driftwood that floated into the place was a sign from a business room in Portland.

Sidney Dillon Dead.

Sidney Dillon died at his home in New York. Mr. Dillon was the President of the Union Pacific Railroad and one of the most distinguished railroad men of the country. His wealth is estimated at $30,000,000, and he had given largely to charities.

A Town Burned.

A special from Pittsburgh, dated the 15th inst., says: Word has just been received here that the town of Chicora. Butler County, is burning down. One hundred buildings have already been burned, and the whole town will be destroyed.

Justice Bradley's Successor.

George V. Massey, who so strongly supported Harrison at the Minneapolis convention, it is rumored, has been officially notified that he will receive the judgeship of the Supreme Court made vacant by Justice Bradley's death.

A Fiend's Long Sentence.

"Jim" Weems, the negro fiend, was taken into Court at Chattanooga, guarded by forty armed deputies. Weems pleaded guilty and was sentenced to twenty-one years in the Penitentiary. The trial lasted just ten minutes.

A Narrow Escape.

Mrs. Thomas Jennings of New Albany, Ind., fell into a well on her premises and was found fifteen minutes afterward nearly exhausted, clinging to the wall. Her recovery is doubtful.

Killed by a Horse.

Mr. Cass McCase, a young farmer residing on Teams Run, near Gallipolis, Ohio, was kicked by a horse and killed. He leaves a wife and three children to mourn his demise.

Two Men Killed by Lightning.

At Paris, Ky., Charles Rea and Will Haden, both colored, were struck by lightning while standing under a tree for shelter. Rea was killed and Haden fatally injured.

Murderer Lynched.

Tornado at Chicago.

Chicago was visited by a terrible tornado, doing much damage to property. Many persons were killed and injured.

Destroyed by Fire.

The whole business portion of Rocheport, Mo., was burned. Sixteen Buildings were destroyed. Loss $75,000.

Two Drowned.

THEIR LEADER DEAD.

PRESIDENT L. L. POLK EXPIRES AT WASHINGTON.

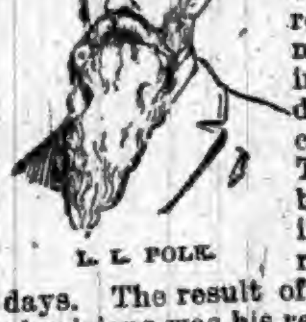
The End Has Come.



L. L. POLK.

Leonidas L. Polk, President of the National Farmers' Alliance, is dead. The end came at 11:15 Saturday forenoon, at the Garfield Hospital, Washington, where he had been removed for treatment. Blood poisoning caused by bladder trouble was the cause of his demise. The patient had been lying seriously ill at his private residence for ten days. The result of a consultation of physicians was his removal to the Garfield Hospital, where an operation was deemed the only means of saving his life. He became unconscious, from which condition he never rallied, and it was decided not to perform the operation.

When the end came Mrs. Polk, who had just arrived in the city, was at his bedside. Telegrams from all parts of the South were received inquiring after Mr. Polk's condition, and he had been daily visited by prominent men of the Farmers' Alliance.

Leonidas L. Polk was a native of Anson County, North Carolina, and was born on April 24, 1837. He was a descendant of the Mecklenburg family bearing that name, and was related to Colonel Thomas and William Polk, brave soldiers of the revolution, and James K. Polk, President of the United States. His parents died while he was a youth. He was married when 21 years of age, and was soon after nominated and elected to the lower house of the State Legislature, serving at the regular and two extra sessions in 1860 and 1861. He enlisted in the Confederate army as a private, declining the offer of a captaincy, and served in the Twenty-fifth and Forty-third North Carolina regiments of infantry till the autumn of 1864, at which time he became the army candidate for the Legislature, and was elected with practical unanimity.

In 1865, against his expressed desire, he was chosen a member of the State Constitutional Convention. In 1877 he was elected Commissioner of Agriculture for his State. He had meantime continued on his farm and left it with great reluctance to attend to his official duties. In every instance the offices bestowed upon him sought the man, not the man the office. He was one of the earliest advocates of the establishment of a department of agriculture. In 1880 he began the publication of the Progressive Farmer, and at the same time began the organization of farmers' clubs, and soon had 500 chartered and in active working order. He also advocated the establishment of an agricultural and and mechanical college and his plan was finally adopted by the State.

He brought the alliance before the people and at its organization in North Carolina he became its State Secretary and through his influence the farmers' clubs previously organized by him became a part of the new organization. He was the first Vice President of the alliance in 1887, and in 1889 was chosen a delegate to the national convention of the order held in St. Louis, in December, 1889, and took an active part in its deliberations. When the Interstate Farmers' Association, composed of delegates from all cotton States, was organized in 1887, Colonel Polk was elected President by acclamation. He was twice re-elected to that position without contest. At the convention in St. Louis in December, 1889, Col. Polk was chosen President of the National Farmers' Alliance, and held that position continuously up to the date of his death. Under his management the order had a marvelous growth, especially in the South and West, and its influence was shown by the election of members of Congress in North Carolina, Georgia, Kansas and Minnesota, and has made great progress in other States, notably Illinois and Indiana, where in a number of districts it holds the balance of power.

Colonel Polk possessed great personal magnetism, and was an excellent organizer, a good parliamentarian, and a pleasing public speaker. He was in the farmers' movement from no motives of personal ambition or profit, for he sacrificed much more than he ever could hope to gain from the success of his ideas and plans. He was earnest, enthusiastic and sincere, laboring with all his energies for the good of his fellow farmers and the nation at large. If he had lived he would undoubtedly have been the candidate of the Alliance for President of the United States at the election in November next.

The funeral was held at Raleigh, N. C., his home, Sunday. The train bearing the body did not arrive until 3 o'clock in the afternoon. It was met at the depot by hundreds of people. The procession was formed and the body was escorted to the First Baptist Church, of which Mr. Polk was a communicant. By 4 o'clock the church was packed, the audience numbering at least a thousand. Among those present were Gov. Holt and all the State officers, members of the Supreme Court, officers of the State Farmers' Alliance, and Grand Sire Buissee, of the Sovereign Grand Lodge Odd Fellows. The services were conducted by Rev. Drs. J. W. Carter, T. E. Skinner and J. J. Hall. The face of the dead was exposed, and after the choir had sung "Abide with Me" the entire audience passed in single file by the casket and viewed the body. The casket was taken into and out of the church by the pallbearers, who came from Washington, and who, with ladies who also came, were given seats in front. At the conclusion of the services the Washington party returned to the train and left for that city.

CHARLES WILLIAMS, Frederick Goddard and John Williams were severely burned in a powder explosion at Hill's stone quarry, east of Greencastle.

WILLIAM LONG, a farmer and member of the petit jury at Columbus, was arrested and charged with assaulting Mrs. Martha Smith, the wife of a tenant.

REUBEN DAILY, editor of the Jeffersonville News, fell from a bicycle in Cincinnati a few days ago and broke his left leg. The bicycle is able to be about.

HARRY JONES, an employe, fell out of the loft at the Muncie Pulp Company's building, and was fatally hurt. Willie McCarty, aged 10, fell off a box car and will die.

A FIFTY-POUND turtle nabbed the bait from a Franklin fisherman's hook the other day and pulled him into the water, nearly drowning him. Subscribed and sworn to before——, etc.

ORA BULEY, a young man from Orleans, was run down and killed by an O. & M. passenger train at Shoals. Deceased was unmarried and had been drinking considerable.

DURING a storm at Noblesville the roof of the new pail factory was blown off and the building collapsed, causing several thousand dollars' damage. The workmen all escaped injury.

JOHN WELTZ, a tramp, tried to commit suicide near Centerton, Morgan County, by beating himself over the head with an old spade. He has a sister at Warsaw, Ind., and a father at Tiffin, O.

THOMAS FITZGERALD, ex-city marshal of Brazil, and Joseph Miller were on a handcar, when a Big Four train struck them. The former died of his injuries and the latter is not expected to recover.

MRS. MARTHA HURDLE of Muncie, is at the point of death, and attempts to get word to her son, George Hurdle, have been futile. He is traveling in advance of an "Uncle Tom's Cabin" show. The family would be glad to receive any information as to his whereabouts.

AT the annual meeting of the Grand Lodge Knights of Pythias, held at Indianapolis, the following officers were elected: Grand Chancellor, Dr. E. L. Siver, Fort Wayne; Grand Vice Chancellor, James E. Watson, Winchester; Grand Prelate, J. M. Hatfield, Huntington; Grand Master of Exchequer, Henry D. Grobs, Union City; Grand Master-at-arms, C. E. S. Neal, Lebanon; Grand Trustee, George W. Powell, Indianapolis.

LIGHTNING-ROD swindlers victimized Joseph Bond and John Ashley, wealthy and aged farmers at Oaktown. Seven men in buggies drove through that neighborhood, claiming to be putting up lightning-rods on the residences of a few prominent men only, as an advertisement for their company. They offered for $7 to rod Mr. Bond's residence, providing he would sign an agreement to recommend it to his neighbors. When the work was done they presented a bill for $250. On Mr. Bond's refusal to settle they drew revolvers and bluffed the old man, who finally paid the swindlers $100 cash as a compromise. By a similar scheme they extorted $225 from John Ashley and then left for parts unknown.

CHICK MITCHELL, a young man about fifteen years of age, was killed by the early passenger train, about two miles east of Shelbyville on the Big Four road. He had been sitting on the car-platform, and fell off. In his pocket was found a pass from Atlanta, Ga., to Cincinnati and return.

LON ATKINSON, a prominent farmer, was terribly injured near Hartford City by the accidental discharge of both barrels of a shotgun. He was leaning on the gun, hands crossed over the muzzle. Holes were torn through the palms of both hands and a terrible wound made on the side of the face. He may recover.

JOHN GINTER, a trackman employed at the Big Four shops at Brightwood, was killed by falling timber. He was unloading a car of heavy timbers when he slipped and fell, one of the timbers falling upon him and crushing him to death. He was a widower with two children, who are living with relatives at Fordville.

THE old Royal Rink at Muncie was destroyed by fire. Loss, $2,000. The Muncie Fencibles used the building as an armory. Their guns and uniforms were all destroyed and the Government will lose between $3,000 and $4,000. The cause is attributed to carelessness in leaving gas jets burn or in throwing cigarette-stubs about.

HEARTS of GOLD
-OR-
THE HEIRESS of MAPLE LEAF FARM

BY GENEVIEVE ULMER.

CHAPTER IX.

THE LETTER.

Ralph Prescott stood spell-bound, overwhelmed. He knew the woman in that room; he had met a surprise most startling; he had recognized the false nurse as the last person in the world he had ever expected to see in those somber habiliments.

"It is she! What does it mean? What can it mean? Oh, this is bewildering, improbable."

She? Yes, the one woman in the world who filled his mind's thoughts to the exclusion of all others. She—Ruth! the disowned, the wife of another, the heiress of Maple Leaf Farm.

There could be no doubt as to her identity; there could be no mistake; there was no need of a second glance.

The same pure, soulful eyes looked forth, only a trifle sadder than of yore; the fresh bloom of roses on the pearly cheek was the same, only a trace of the canker of care had paled it almost imperceptibly. Resolution compressed the lips slightly, anxiety brooded on the fair brow, but—Ruth Elliott was there!

What did it mean?

From wonderment to flashing suspici on the thoughts of the enrapt lurker passed rapidly.

Ruth Elliott was here, had been here for over a week. She had passed the cynosure of curious eyes with her identity unguessed; but had not Geoffrey Forsythe known her—had not he possibly even suggested the disguise?

If so—— In the bewildering jugglery of surmise, doubt, and speculation Ralph Prescott lost himself.

Here, indeed, was a mystery—a mystery with a motive, surely—a motive that had made of a timid, shrinking girl a bold, resolute woman. For sweet love's sake she had undertaken a monstrous imposition; but why and wherefore the tangible issue of it all?

"It's beyond me—I can't understand it," breathed the lurker. "But I will know. Where there is secrecy there is mystery, where mystery, a plot. I thought myself a master hand, and this girl—she has outwitted, defeated, crushed me utterly."

He drew back from the window as he saw that she slept. His sinister face expressed every emotion in the gamut of a scheming rascal's mind—avarice, suspicion, love, hate, vengeful persistency.

For an hour he ruminated alone in the garden. Night influences were about him. The brooding clouds all inspired him to subtlety and plotting.

He approached the broken shutter again. Ruth slumbered.

"I will act with caution," he muttered grimly. "A sudden confrontation might precipitate flight. I will watch and wait—but—I must know what her continued presence here means. I must know her scheme. I must balk its outcome, if possible. The letter she was writing!—that may reveal all. If I could only get a glimpse at that!"

Prescott approached the unshuttered window of the vacant apartment. The door of communication with the adjoining one was closed securely. Ruth slumbered profoundly.

He was an adept at sneaking into the house after late hours, a natural burglar, too.

The next moment he was in the room.

On tip-toe he advanced to the stand where the written sheets lay outspread.

The joy of a great gloating exultation came into his eyes as he read the story of a woman's struggle for the right of a woman's faith in a loved one's fidelity.

For the letter told all—it cast light on darkness, it constituted the history of as singular an exploit as ever fell under the eyes of mortal man.

CHAPTER X.

WHAT THE LETTER TOLD.

It was fortunate for the secret plans of Ralph Prescott that the occupant of the adjoining apartment slept, for so absorbed was he in reading the letter that lay before him that he was impervious to aught for the time being.

That letter was in Ruth's well-known dainty handwriting. It was addressed to Paul Dalton, her husband and it was a chronicle of events rather than an ordinary epistle.

"I do not know where you are," it began. "When we parted at the altar, with faith supreme in your loyalty, I only asked to know that you had gone to make a final effort to clear up the mystery of your life.

"Since then, events have happened that you must know. I have but one clue to your whereabouts. You mentioned Ferndale once. At haphazard, I wrote you there yesterday, asking you to return here speedity.

"To-night, recalling still another town, I write you there also. Come back, for while your fair name must not go uncleared, I have outwitted the man who strove to blast your reputation—Ralph Prescott."

And then, in terse lines, the writer told the story of Ruth the outcast.

An inspiration of faith in her old grandfather, Geoffrey Forsythe, sent her steps thither. She had not mistaken the affection of the old recluse. He had received her with open arms.

He had listened to her pitiful story; he sympathized with her; he questioned her particularly in detail as to the various sums of money that her father had missed, the dates of the abstractions, and much concerning the habits and actions of Ralph Prescott for a month past.

Putting together what he knew and what she revealed, old Geoffrey Forsythe amazed Ruth by denouncing Ralph Prescott as the real thief.

He said that of late he had heard considerable about the schemer's gambling proclivities. He had employed a man to watch him. He knew of almost every money deal of the young man. He now knew that certain amounts he had paid corresponded exactly with the sums John Elliott had lost; in fact, he proved Ralph Prescott to be the thief, beyond dispute.

"I had begun to suspect that he was a hypocritical time-server," he had told Ruth. "My eyes were just beginning to open to the sacrifice I was demanding of you in wedding a man who has no claim upon me, except for a sentimental regard on my part for his dead mother. Ruth, you will stay here. Disguised, you will be my nurse until I can explore still more deeply into this knave's deception. Your happiness is everything in life to me. A woman's heart cannot usually be wrong in estimating the character of the man she loves. I have faith in Paul Dalton, in a man who stood ready to be adjudged a criminal, rather than anger your father against you with a revelation of your mutual love. We will await his return, and if he disproves the charge that he is a convict, your father shall be made to do you both justice, and Ralph Prescott shall be unmasked in his true colors."

But sickness came sooner than old Geoffrey thought. His hours were numbered, and he knew it.

All this Ruth wrote to Paul Dalton; all this, sick at heart, the enraged, baffled, unscrupulous Ralph read.

Now she bade her husband return. He was wealthy now, and what might not money do to untangle the knotted skein of his mysterious life.

Ralph Prescott stole from that room with a pale, perturbed face.

He knew all now, and that information was weighty, vital.

To Ruth his true character was fully revealed, and if he dared openly to persecute her she possessed the means of proving him to be the thief of Maple Leaf Farm. Furthermore, for love of the man she had wedded, she would use that knowledge if he tried to annoy her again.

What should he do? His natural impulse was to seize on all the ready cash he could get his hands on, and, like the craven he was, sneak out of the lives and memories of those he had wronged.

A thought of revenge, however, a subtle suggestion of thought, a hopeful belief that there was yet one weak point in the armor of his foes, awoke a last desperate combativeness in Ralph Prescott's wicked heart.

"If Paul Dalton should die," he glowered in a sinister hiss of hate, "then all the fortune would revert to Ruth. Who knows what may happen? The tramp told me much. Paul Dalton is a convict, let him say what he likes. I will anticipate Ruth. I will go at once to Ferndale. I will dig up this man's past, that I may effectually blight his future. Oh, there is some way out of this labyrinth of mystery, there must be some compensation for all he has made me lose!"

And, hiding the fact that his own evil plottings had been the cause of his misfortunes alone, Ralph Prescott, at early dawn, started on horseback on the trail of the man who had so mysteriously disappeared.

CHAPTER XI.

VICTORY.

Ferndale was nearly eighty miles from Ridgeton, and located in another State, but by dint of hard riding and few stops Ralph Prescott reached his journey's end the next morning.

The plotter's thoughts and calculations were vague. What good he could gain by the present investigation he did not know. Circumstances would guide him, he told himself.

He hoped to learn something more about Dalton's past. A man who had been a forger, a convict, might have many serious flaws in his life. There might be other crimes for which Paul Dalton was wanted—else why had he sought the obscurity of Maple Leaf Farm? If this was true, and he could learn sufficient to be of real weight against Dalton or Ruth, the plotter might terrorize, persecute, blackmail them. He hardly thought as far as ever gaining Ruth. Money and revenge were now the sole actuating motives of his mean nature.

If he had hoped to find Paul Dalton established and publicly known at Ferndale, he was doomed to disappointment.

Inquiries at several places revealed no definite knowledge of the man he sought.

One man thought the name sounded familiar, another started strangely, and repeated it over and over vaguely.

"That name ain't altogether unknown to me," he said, "but I can't fit its owner. Seems to me, though, that old Danby, the miller—yes, that's it—I remember now. You see——"

The man checked himself suddenly.

"Well, go on," insinuated Paul, eagerly.

"No, I may be mistaken, and I don't want to make trouble. You see Danby."

"Where will I find him?" queried the self-appointed detective.

He was directed to a dilapidated mill structure. A somber-faced old man, patching up the worn-out machinery of the place, looked up from his labor irritably as Prescott asked him if he was Mr. Danby.

"Yes, Danby's my name," he replied. "What of it?"

"I am looking for a man I was told you knew."

"Who is he?"

"Paul Dalton."

The effect of that name upon the miller was something extraordinary.

He arose erect as from a shock. His face turned pale as death. With lowering eyes and quickened breath he surveyed his visitor, and, trembling all over with some suppressed agitation, demanded in a hoarse, unnatural tone:

"Who sent you here?"

Prescott retreated, a trifle frightened, for there was a gleam in the old man's eyes that was dangerous.

"Why," he stammered. "I—I came myself."

"No one sent you? He did not send you; she did not send you? Answer me."

"No one sent me."

"Because," went on the miller between his set teeth, "I would treat a messenger from them as I would they themselves—as reptiles; deadly enemies!"

"I simply wanted to find this Paul Dalton. I wished to learn all I could about him. You seem to hate him?"

"Hate him!" echoed the miller, bitterly; "as the viper that stings, as the savage who strikes the hand that tenders him bread. He stole my child away from me—my little Isabel"—and the gruff voice died in a pitiful sob. "He made my home bereft, he well-nigh beggared me. Oh, curse his handsome face and soft ways! Curse him, I say, to all eternity!"

Strange words to inspire joy, and yet a savage delight permeated the heart of the eager listener as he realized that he was learning more than he had hoped for.

Was this Paul Dalton a villain who operated the same at all places—robbing his benefactor, running away with his daughter?

It seemed so; but a still deeper satisfaction was in store for Prescott.

"That was five years ago. One night they disappeared. A week later I received a letter from Isabel. She begged forgiveness. She asked that they both return to the home roof; that her husband was repentful for the theft; that the money had gone in gambling. I went to the town whence she wrote, armed with a horsewhip. I cowhided him for the miserable poltroon that he was. I cursed her as no child of mine."

"And were they married?"

"Ah, I made sure of that. I would have killed him if it had been otherwise. As it was, I left them. They had made their bed. In it they must lie."

Married! Then the ceremony at Ridgeton was a mockery. Ruth was not a wife! Visions of her humiliation, amid which she would gladly accept a new husband to hide the disgrace of the old one, ran riot in the schemer's mind. A broken will—the Forsythe fortune yet won or a threat of prosecution for bigamy—ah, all was not lost yet!

"The hardened villain!" gasped Prescott, in a spasm of high virtuous indignation against a man whose rascality seemed to discount his own. "Married! Then all is safe, provided—one word!" he utters quickly, as the miller turned away. "Is your daughter still alive?"

"Yes."

"She wrote me a year ago. She said her husband had fallen heir to a great fortune. Would I allow her to repay me what he had stolen?"

"And you replied?"

"Not a word! Those two are dead to me."

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

Virginia's Historic Ground.

The large price that the owner of the farm on which the famous "bloody angle" in Spottsylvania is situated has obtained for his property, having made a sale to Northern parties, recalls how important a proportion of Virginia soil has an extensive value on account of its association with historic events. With the possible exception of Greece and England—we doubt whether an exception ought to be made in the instance of these countries—there is no land in the world which contains more localities which derive their interest from the records of history, and which, if put up for sale would bring a larger sum for reasons which have no relation whatever to the question of natural productiveness or general convenience. Fortunately, though these scenes may change hands, they cannot, like Libby Prison, be moved beyond the borders of the old State. Jamestown, Yorktown, Fredericksburg, Cancellorsville, Manassas, the Wilderness, they are here to stay and to call up in the minds of the remotest generations of Virginians the heroic deeds of their ancestors, which are a part of the character of the living.—Richmond Times.

The Capitan Pratt.

Chili's most powerful war vessel has a name not at all suggestive of its formidable size and capabilities. It might not unfitly have been called the Terror or the Thunderer, and it is not a little remarkable that so ardent, not to say flamboyant, a people as the Chilians were content with so prosaic a title as plain Captain Pratt. For actual business the Pratt has the following qualifications: It is 328 feet long; beam over all, 60 feet 7 inches; depth, 34 feet 9 inches. It will mount in its main battery four guns of 9.45 inches caliber, and it has also four guns of 4.72 inches, six rapid fire guns of 1.97 inches, and four rapid fire guns (two Nordenfelt and two Hotchkiss) of 0.78 inches caliber. It has six torpedo tubes of the Canet system. The Capitan Pratt is, in short, a fast and formidable armor-clad vessel, with powerful engines of the latest and most improved description, and a guaranteed speed of eighteen knots an hour.

An Explanation.

The difference between an heir apparent and an heir presumptive is not always clearly understood; here is the case in a nutshell: The heir apparent must succeed if he survives the present holder of the dignity; while an heir presumptive, although the heir at the moment, is liable to have his right to the succession defeated by the birth of another heir. There cannot, therefore, be at the same time an heir apparent and an heir presumptive. To take a modern instance, should the Prince of Wales succeed to the throne of England, his son, Prince George, if then living, will become the heir apparent to the throne. Should Prince George succeed to the throne before he has children, the Duchess of Fife would be the heir presumptive, her right to the succession being always liable to be defeated by the birth of a direct heir to her brother.

British Uniforms.

The most expensive of England's soldiers' garbs is the bandmaster's of the life guards, which cost $125. A sergeant-drummer of the foot guards may well "swell his chest" when he wears a tunic costing no less than $37.50, the total value of his "rig-out" being $122.50. The cheapest uniform of all is that of a private of an ordinary infantry regiment, valued at $21.

The Old Gentleman Knows How.

Samuel Davis, of Whitneyville, Me., who is 84 years of age, shot four foxes in one day, making a total of forty this season. He says that "foxes are uncommon cute critters, but they're easy to get if you know how."

Two Cures for Toothache.

A dust of bicarbonate of soda (baking soda) not only will relieve a burn but, it is said, will soothe a toothache. Oil of cloves will surely do this.

EVERY housekeeper should provide herself with little conveniences for doing her work. A short-handled, broad paint-brush to wash the outside of window sills, and an old tooth-brush for washing around the glass.

SNAP-SHOTS AT "GHOSTS."

Among the latest work of the Bureau of Ethnology which is being prepared for the Chicago exhibition is a set of six large transparencies, enlarged from kodak pictures of the ghost dance.

There have been many accounts of the dance given of late in the papers, and some spirited illustrations, said to have been taken from life, but it can be safely said that they are all the work of a vivid imagination, and that these pictures are the only ones that have yet been taken from life.

They are the work of Mr. James Mooney, of the bureau, who has for two years past made a careful study of the dance in all its phases, and has seen it enacted a hundred times or more, says the Washington Post.

The ghost dance is a purely religious performance, and being particularly secretive in all matters connected with his religious beliefs and observances, the Indian was naturally loath to admit outsiders to a view of this important ceremony; but by discreet and diplomatic approaches this opposition was overcome, and the result is an invaluable collection of snap-shot negatives, taken directly in the dance circle, with hundreds of Indians in all stages of dress and undress leaping and shouting around.

Some of the pictures show the dancers in the state of mesmeric catalepsy into which they are thrown by the nervous excitement of the dance. Both the messiah himself and two of the dance leaders, Sitting Bull (Arapahoe) and Cedar Tree, are expert hypnotizers, and five minutes' work with a black handkerchief or an eagle's feather can throw almost any of their followers into a trance, leaving them standing motionless, with arms outstretched, for half an hour at a time, until they fall unconscious.

Others of the transparencies show the dancers in the state of collapse that follows their exertions, and others again illustrate the attitudes of prayer and supplication.

The pictures are altogether a most unique collection. With them will be sent to Chicago many life-sized casts of the Indians in costumes and various utensils and ornaments connected with the ghost-dance ceremony. There is in the possession of the bureau an original letter from the messiah, explaining the methods and object of the dance to a delegation of Arapahoes and Cheyennes, who carried back the information and spread the dance among all the prairie tribes.

The messiah, or Jack Wilson, as he is called by the whites who know him, is a full-blooded Piute and speaks no English. The credit of preparing the transparencies from the kodak negatives belongs to Mr. J. K. Hillers, the photographer of the bureau.

BAD TEMPER UNDER WATER.

The diver, as the reader may imagine, gets many scares when below, says H. Whitemarsh in the Century. A fifteen-foot shark, magnified by the water, and making a bee line for one, is sufficient to make the stoutest heart quake, in spite of the assertion that sharks have never been known to attack a man in dress. Neither is the sight of a large turtle comforting when one does not know exactly what it is, and the coiling of a sea-snake around one's legs, although it has only one's hand to bite at, is, to say the least, unpleasant. A little fish called the stonefish is one of the enemies of the diver. It seems to make its habitation right under the pearl shell, as it is only when picking them up that any on [illegible] been known to be bitten. I remember well the first time I was bitten by this spiteful member of the finny tribe. I dropped my bag of shells and hastened to the surface, but in this short space of time my hand and arm had so swollen that it was with difficulty I could get the dress off, being unable to work for three days, and suffering intense pain the while. Afterward I learned that staying down a couple of hours after a bite will stop any further discomfort, the pressure of water causing much bleeding at the bitten part, and thus expelling the poison. One of the strange effects that diving has upon those who practice it is the invariable bad temper felt while working at the bottom, and as this irritability passes away as soon as the surface is reached again it is only reasonable to suppose that it is caused by the unusual pressure of air inside the dress, affecting probably the lungs, and through them the brain. My experience has been that while below one may fly into the most violent passion at the merest trifle; for instance, the life-line held too tight or too slack, too much air or too little, or some imaginary wrong-doing on the part of the tender or the boys above, will often cause the temper to rise. I have sometimes become so angry in a similar way that I have given the signal to pull up, with the express intention of knocking the heads off the entire crew, but as the surface was neared, and the weight of air decreased, my feelings had gradually undergone a change for the better, until by the time I had reached the ladder and had the face-glass unscrewed I had forgotten for what I came up.

What Ailed Him.

In the reminiscences of Mr. C. W. Cope, the painter, the author relates what seemed at the time a pretty severe ill-turn which overtook him suddenly in Florence.

I was sitting at a table reading after supper, when I observed that the pendent lamp-tweezers and extinguisher were vibrating. Presently I got sleepy, and then all at once my chair was drawn from under me. I held fast to the table, and thinking a trick had been played on me, I called out, "Boxall, that's not fair;" but no one was in the room.

I felt giddy; I must be ill; and I struggled to bed without undressing. In the morning I was quite well, and supposed that I had been faint; but when I got out I found every one talking about the earthquake. It was a severe shock, and was felt as far as Rome. Many houses fell forward, and had to be propped up to prevent their falling into the street.

GANTER'S MAGIC —CHICKEN— CHOLERA CURE!

Thousands of dollars worth of chickens are destroyed by Cholera every year. It is more fatal to them than all other diseases combined. But the discovery of a liquid remedy that positively destroys the Microbes has been made. Half of the young chickens are killed by Microbes before they are fryers. A 50-cent bottle is enough for 100 chickens. It is guaranteed. If, after using two thirds of a bottle, you are not satisfied with it as a cure for Cholera, return it to the druggist from whom you purchased it, and he will refund your money.

THE GREAT SOUTH AMERICAN

NERVINE TONIC

—AND—

Stomach AND Liver Cure

The Great South American Nervine Tonic

Which we now offer you, is the only absolutely unfailing remedy ever discovered for the cure of Indigestion, Dyspepsia, and the vast train of symptoms and horrors which are the result of disease and debility of the human stomach. No person can afford to pass by this jewel of incalculable value who is affected by disease of the stomach, because the experience and testimony of many go to prove that this is the ONE and ONLY ONE great cure in the world for this universal destroyer. There is no case of unmalignant disease of the stomach which can resist the wonderful curative powers of the South American Nervine Tonic.

HARRIET E. HALL, of Waynetown, Ind., says: "I owe my life to the Great South American Nervine. I had been in bed for five months from the effects of an exhausted stomach, Indigestion, Nervous Prostration, and a general shattered condition of my whole system. Had given up all hopes of getting well. Had tried three doctors, with no relief. The first bottle of the Nervine Tonic improved me so much that I was able to walk about, and a few bottles cured me entirely. I believe it is the best medicine in the world. I can not recommend it too highly."

MRS. ELLA A. BRATTON, of New Ross, Indiana, says: "I cannot express how much I owe to the Nervine Tonic. My system was completely shattered, appetite gone, was coughing and spitting up blood; am sure I was in the first stages of consumption, an inheritance handed down through several generations. I began taking the Nervine Tonic, and continued its use for about six months, and am entirely cured. It is the grandest remedy for nerves, stomach and lungs I have ever seen."

No remedy compares with SOUTH AMERICAN NERVINE as a cure for the Nerves. No remedy compares with South American Nervine as a wondrous cure for the Stomach. No remedy will at all compare with South American Nervine as a cure for all forms of failing health. It never fails to cure Indigestion and Dyspepsia. It never fails to cure Chorea or St. Vitus' Dance. Its powers to build up the whole system are wonderful in the extreme. It cures the old, the young, and the middle aged. It is a great friend to the aged and infirm. Do not neglect to use this precious boon; if you do, you may neglect the only remedy which will restore you to health. South American Nervine is perfectly safe, and very pleasant to the taste. Delicate ladies, do not fail to use this great cure, because it will put the bloom of freshness and beauty upon your lips and in your cheeks, and quickly drive away your disabilities and weaknesses.

The excessive rains have not been favorable to the growth of flowers, seeds and bulbs. Probably most persons have lost something they value in that line on account of too much water. When the rain ceased, the slugs began their work, and the moles make their underground way where they can do the most mischief. Flowers, with an occasional exception, are not as abundant as usual, and do not last as long. It is yet a question whether the late gardens this summer will be a success. The hot sun falling on the wet ground, bakes it hard and prevents the seed from coming up.

THURSDAY............JUNE 16, 1892.

DEMOCRATIC national convention in Chicago begins next Tuesday June 21.

BLAINE is not willing to talk much, but hints that Harrison ought to be elected in order "to beat the common enemy."

OUR inside pages have a full account of the re-nomination of Harrison, with Reid, editor of the N. Y. Tribune as vice-president. The news created no enthusiasm here or anywhere else, as far as we know. We think Harrison an easy man to beat, but we must remember the desperate and corrupt means he used before.

CLEVELAND may be nominated at Chicago next week, after all, as people are getting tired of being bossed by a few democratic leaders. Many believe he could carry the election without New York. The COURIER, while it believes Mr. Cleveland the best and strongest man so far named by the democrats, is willing to support the nominee whoever he may be. And we believe the nominee will be elected.

WE are sorry we copied the people's party platform correctly, because they seem to feel bad about it. That plank condemning the appointment of Judge Woods, as a corrupt act, was plainly printed as a part of it, and we did not know that it had not been adopted. It surely should have been adopted. A party that claims to be pure and perfect, cannot certainly be pleased to see a corrupt Judge promoted for his corrupt course, and by the very man who had profited by the corrupt act. If the people's party cannot write its own resolutions, it ought at least to read over the old dead and forgotten printed ones, that some one had cut out of a paper. How could these resolutions express the sentiment of the meeting, when even the chairman of the committee on resolutions had not examined the thing enough to cut out what he did not want? And what good reason can they give for refusing to adopt a resolution condemning one of the most glaringly corrupt acts of Harrison's administrtion.

The Evans Trial.

Work on this case began Monday afternoon, and at once there was a struggle to get a jury. First one, then another was objected off, without, till 2 p. m. on Tuesday, A. D. Moore, was taken as the twelfth man. The jury then took a few minutes recess while the legal fellows considered the correctness of some depositions. The attorneys for the state are prosecutor Butler, of Angola, deputy prosecutor D. A. Garwood of this place, deputy-prosecutor J. H. Rose of Butler, assisted by James E. Rose of this place. For the defense, are D. D. Moody and E. D. Hatman. The court room was comfortably filled by spectators, among them a number of ladies and by witnesses, among the latter being a number of the negroes who were in the gang brought up from Alabama, one of whom was the man killed. The jury were, A. D. Moore, G. H. Dunn, F. J. Yesbera, D. D. Metcalf, John Harrris, W. Abel, Mahlon Baker, David Butler, Shelley Hines, Wm. Ashelman, Alex King and J. A. Munsell.

James H. Rose began by stating to the jury, the nature of the case.

W. H. Evans foreman for Mr. Patterson had charge of the gang of negroes among whom was the deceased Charles Tanner, from Alabama. They reached Butler at 4 p. m. March 4, and went into Dunn's saloon. Evans came in and drank with several, and the negroes were talking. He asked negroes to go off with him but they did not. About half hour later, he returned after saying he was going to clean out the negroes. He asked Dunn to take his Evans' knife and help. Dunn refused. Evans got a billiard cue, set it down, then got a broom handle, then changed for a heavier cue, came up to Tanner and said "You God d m s of b h, get out of here, and struck him on the temple breaking the cue to pieces. He tried to get another cue, but was stopped. The negro was taken out, and remained unconscious till March 7, when he died. Tanner was not intoxicated, had no dispute, Evans did the deed deliberately. March grand jury indicted Evans for murder in the first degree. (Here Mr. Rose defined the penalty, etc.) Evans has pleaded guilty to manslaughter, but not guilty to murder in the first degree. Witnesses were then called, and sworn. Jas. H. Rose here came in with the broken cue, etc. First witness, Geo. Dunn was a resident of Butler on the 4th of March, was keeping the saloon. Saw the defendant there that day, on street first, then in saloon, in evening about 7 or 8 o'clock Some negroes were there. Did not know Chas. Tanner, but he was there Evans came to bar with another. I set out bottle and he asked me if I had a separate bar for negroes to drink, as he was not in habit of drinking with negroes. But he treated some of them, Chas. Tanner among them. But afterward told them to go away. Billiard cues hung on wall, but there were one or two cues and a broom handle toward rear, near wine barrel. (Here he was shown a plat of the room.) Afterwards Evans went into the front of the room. He asked if I had a club, as he wanted to drive the men out. He asked me to come over the counter. I came and he offered me his knife to help him drive the men out. I went back behind bar, and told him the negroes were not making disturbance and I would not help him. Evans then ordered them out, He soon walked to back of room, took off his coat, took up the broom handle, put it down, and took up cue, said to them "Get out of here you black s of b s. He drew back and struck one of the men. I stopped him, caught him between two tables. He had the small part of the cue in his hand. It had broken when he struck. Here he was shown the cue, and recognized it. Said it was not broken when Evans first picked it up. Evans had the cue in both hands, and drew it back over his head, when he struck. (The piece of cue shown was the large end.) Evans said as I caught him he said, "Let me alone," but I told him we did not allow such work up here. Told A. J. Baxter, who was present, that such a man be locked up, Mr. Baxter and others took him away. Tanner had not said anything that I heard. Several were present. The blow knocked him down, and he was bleeding, and was unconscious. I sent for Dr. Carpender, who ordered him taken to the hotel, which was done. He had lain then nearly ten minutes, and was not conscious when carried away. Witness identified Evans as the man who struck the blow. Ed. Wells testified to about same.

The negroes aid not appear intoxicated nor did Evans appear to be. I saw Tanner again that evening at the Air Line Hotel, and again on Sunday.

Cross ex. by Hartman. Think 7 or 8 negroes were present. Had been about half hour there but only three had drank. They lodged at the Air Line House, two blocks away. Had not been in before this. They had come down here to work on the new road. One of the men brought them in to treat them when they first came. After this several drank. Other parties were in the saloon and talked with negroes. Evans told them twice to go out. Saw Evans drink but once, it was whisky. Don't know how much poured it out himself. Re-direct by Garwood: Evans was in the saloon about twenty minutes. He did not drink with the negroes, but when he treated them he stepped back from the bar.

Cross ex. by Hartman: Said he knew weight of cue only by the marks on them, as all have the weight marked on them. Some have a "load" of iron to give them the proper weight. Don't know whether this had a cork in it, or a load. Saw nothing drop on the floor. I did not pick up the broken cue, some one else did it. Can't say whether this was cracked or splintered before. It has been laid aside because it was one that had no "tip," the small leather point. The wood is hard maple, I think.

Can see that a part of this shows an old check, and the rest new check in the wood split off. Evans got but one drink of me, but my assistant, Mr. Hicks, may have given him a drink. I was there all the time Evans was in.

Leonard Mathews, colored, was sworn. Live in Alabama, was born there, am married, am railroader, been working on grade. Have known Evans two or three years. I work with Patterson. Had been at Kingston, Ala. Knew Chas. Tanner for two years. He was working on bridge. Evans was our foreman. I came to Butler March 4th. Got there about 3 p. m. Went to our stopping place. Then all went out and walked about. Went into Dunn's saloon, and again about half past five, several colored men were there, Evans came in at our second time. Looked around, called us up and treated. But told one man to get back. In 3 or 4 minutes, he said, all go to your stopping place. Some went, but some refused. He told me to get the boys and go. I said I am not ready. He said to others, "d n you, go." But they replied, we 'aint ready. Some words passed. Evans went to cue rack, got a cue, hefted it, put it down, then a broom handle, set down, took another cue, and went around towards Tanner, and said I'll make you d d s n of b s go now. Tanner turned in time to get the blow. Evans started back as if to get another cue when Dunn stopped him, Evans said these are my niggers. I will do as I please with them. Dunn said you might in the south, not here. A doctor was sent for, we carried Tanner to our room. I was with him till he was buried. I was present at the post mortem, and burial. Cross examined by Moody, I have been four years with Patterson, in Alabama. Have worked under Evans nearly two years and the others same. Came from Tuscaloosa to Butler, 13 colored men, 5 women and 25 or 30 white men. Patterson came with us. Evans was Patterson's foreman. I did not go, when Evans ordered the men out. I told him I was free. By Moody. Have you ever been anything else but free? Ans. Yes sir.

Gus. Aber sworn. Colored black smith. My mother is with me here. (He gave same story as others.) We have not space for all. Patterson the contractor, and Dean, another contractor, both testified that Evans was a good foreman, that he had been with them some time. After they testified court adjourned at noon Wednesday. Dr. Carpender had testified, showing the skull. It had a piece broken in, but not loose from the rest. He thought the injury to the brain would prove fatal. The skull was unusually thin, especially for a negro. Afternoon, defendant Evans was put on the stand. He is a fine looking man, and speaks with quite a southern way. He gave a clear account of all the places he had worked at, and what the work was up to date. He said when he came to Butler, he was in charge of the men, as the contractor had asked him to come along, and take care of them. He went into the saloon to get them away so there would be no trouble. Treated them as he thought they were there for that, and would then go away. Did not intend to kill Tanner when he struck, as Tanner was one of the best negroes he ever knew.

Everything about this case is unusual and peculiar. Nothing just like it here before. Judge and attorneys are doing their best to get at the bottom of facts and be fair. It looks now as if Evans would get a pretty good term in prison. But we can tell better next week. Testimony closed at 4 p. m.

THE GLASS BLOWERS.

A Grand Exhibition.

The Glass Blowing Exhibition under canvas, corner of Ninth & Cedar street, drew a good audience last Tuesday eve, it being the opening night of a five days engagement. Every article they make is given away to visitors. Among the many who received large globes of deer, dogs, ships and other masterpieces were Orpha Salyer, Chas. H. Hoff, Mr. S. L. Gibson, Effie Bumpus, Chas. Downing, Z. H. Sears, H. Burns, Ettie Heist, Phil. L. Gibson and Wm. Leonard. It is something that every scholar should see as it is a school for both old and young, Saturday eve will be their last exhibition and no doubt the tent will be crowded both afternoon and eve during their stay here.

Lane's Family Medicine moves the bowels each day. Most people need to use it.

Model Locomotive Engines.

The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad has just placed in service on its Chicago Division three new passenger engines, built at the Baldwin Locomotive Works, after new designs furnished by the Gen'l Superintendent of Motive Power of the B. & O., Company. The engines weigh 113,000 pounds, have driving wheels six feet six inches in diameter, cylinders 19 by 24 inches, and are without doubt the finest passenger locomotives running into the City of Chicago to day. Companions of these new engines have devloped wonderful power and speed in hauling the famous Royal Blue Line trains which run between New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington, over the Philadelphia division of the B. & O. Railroad. The B. & O. has added over forty new high class engines to its motive power, equipment within the last sixty days, and others are under construction. While constantly adding engines of approved design and highest grade to its motive power, and passenger coaches of Pullman standard to its rolling stock, the B. & O. is also expending large amounts for additional second and third tracks and sidings, and improved facilities at terminal points. By the time the World's Fair is opened for the reception of visitors the B. & O. will be well equipped to handle, expeditiously, the large volume of passenger traffic which will naturally seek this picturesque route from the Atlantic sea-board to Chicago

How's Your Liver?

Is the Oriental salutation, knowing that good health cannot exist without a healthy Liver. When the Liver is torpid the Bowels are sluggish and constipated, the food lies in the stomach undigested, poisoning the blood; frequent headache ensues; a feeling of lassitude, despondency and nervousness indicate how the whole system is deranged. Simmons Liver Regulator has been the means of restoring more people to health and happiness by giving them a healthy Liver than any agency known on earth. It acts with extraordinary power and efficacy.

NEVER BEEN DISAPPOINTED.

As a general family remedy for Dyspepsia, Torpid Liver, Constipation, etc., I hardly ever use anything else, and have never been disappointed in the effect produced; it seems to be almost a perfect cure for all diseases of the Stomach and Bowels.

W. J. McELROY, Macon, Ga.

TO OUR MANY READERS

We have grown, and grown, and grown, until our Clothing, Furnishing and Hat business today overshadows all competitors, as the sturdy oak overshadows the grass that grows about its roots. Nor is it accidental success. The secret is not only judicious and practical advertising, but all the accompaniments that go to make our grand song of trade. We have sold BETTER GOODS, and sold them CHEAPER These are the fundamental reasons. They are here today and doing their work just as they did sixteen months ago.

Nerve to Underbuy and Liberality to Undersell!

A knowledge and study of what our patrons want and need, our low price, the largest stock, the most pleasant store! No forced sales allowed, and the most satisfactory business methods ever submitted for the public's approval.

We keep on selling better goods, and selling them cheaper; and that is why, dear reader, we continue to grow, and grow, and grow

G. F. Kerstetter, now at South Haven Mich., writes that there will not likely be a full peach crop there this season, on account of the cold spring. Wheat, oats and grass are good, but corn planting is late. A good prospect for apples, strawberries are injured some. He is at work on a farm, and at good wages.

The jury cleared Hendricks, who has been on trial at Elkhart charged with the murder of Edmund Calkins, at one time acting editor of the Butler Review. The reason given was that at the first trial, he was sentenced on the testimony of Mrs. Calkins, who was probably the one most guilty, but who escaped any punishment.

Prof. Kriebel, at Butler, whose Normal school we mention elsewhere, has earned a high reputation as a teacher since he had charge of the school there. He had determined to keep up the high standard of his work there, and has therefore limited the number of pupils that he will admit to the normal. See what he says in his notice.

VERY MUCH SURPRISED: I have been afflicted with neuralgia for nearly two years, have tried physicians and all known remedies, but found no permanent relief until I tried a bottle of Dullman's Great German Liniment and it gave me instant and permanent relief. 25 cents per bottle. Signed, A. B. Snell, Hamilton, Mich. For sale by Casebeer & Matheny.

Charlie Hoff says a stranger came to his residence last Saturday morning, and very cheekily made himself at home. Charlie questioned him pretty closely, and finding he would like to stay, struck up a bargain, that he might stay provided he would vote the Democratic ticket on and after June 10, 1913. So Charlie, wife, and master Frank are happy.

All the churches were decorated with flowers, etc., Sunday, that being children's day, and the sermons were made with reference to it. At the Presbyterian church, Mr. Healy was particularly interesting in his illustrations, using a series of candles to explain his text, "Ye are the light of the world." In the evening the services were by the children, and were at least equal to anything ever given before.

Rev. N. J. Myers of Circleville Ohio, was here last Thursday; he was on his way to his old home at Webster's Mill, in Noble county, where he will spend his summer vacation. It will give him rest he greatly needs as his health is none the best.

We have an excellent article on the reunion at Fredericksburg, Ohio, written by one of the members, our able correspondant, John A Campbell of Butler. It will appear next week, the many long articles we have this week compelling the delay.

Several dwellings are being overhauled and greatly changed. Mrs. Cowan will have one of the finest, when done. An extensive piazza is being added to Mr. Penfield's brick residence, so as to cover three sides, and then a large addition is put up at the rear.

Success succeeds. And as the Auburn Flouring mills have succeeded in capturing the bulk of the custom work, the success of the mill is assured, and the products, quantity and quality, have been the means of success. Try them and you will succeed in obtaining a yield that will please you. 23t3

BUCKLEN'S ARNICA SALVE.—The best salve in the world for cuts, bruises, sores, ulcers, salt rheum, fever sores, tetter, chapped hands, chilblains, corns and all skin eruptions, and positively cures piles, or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For sale by Robbins & McCord. tf

Charles McClellan jr., now a resident of Washington City, will be here next week, to visit Judge McClellan and family. He will reach here Monday and stay two or three days, and then go to Chicago to look in on the great covention. He is now one of the leading pension agents in Washington, and we suppose those interested will take advantage of his visit here, to interview him as to their own claims.

Judge McClellan is still a member of of the democratic congressional committee, a body of influential members selected from both senate and house, and of this body he is on the executive and campaign committees, on both of which are also such men of national reputation as ex Gov. J. B. McCreary and John F. Andrews, the latter a son of the great war governor of Massachusetts. There are many others equally prominent. The Judge has taken high rank as a member and now having become prominent and valuable, he is, by our two-term plan, to be retired at the end of the next winter's session.

The Lutheran parsonage is finished and Rev. J. D. Brosy and his good wife have moved over and settled down into a neat and cosy home. Happening along West Ninth street the other day we took advantage of a reporter's license to call and see their new home. It is a beauty and so convenient. The rooms are commodious and well arranged, and all finished in the most beautiful of natural pine. Connected with it is a good wood house, and there is a deep driven well that flows almost at the surface, for it forces a strong stream out of the cylinder all the time. We ought to give Mr. Bowers credit for much of this new parsonage, as he has been costantly on hand, as assistant and overseer from first to last, having devoted nearly 100 days to the work.

I. S. Kutzner surprised us yesterday, by handing us a lovely bunch of southern flowers, jasmine, we suppose. They were sent by our young friend, Engineer John Pepple, of Taylor, Texas. "It is sweet to be remembered," and friend John has our thanks, as abundant as his gift was beautiful. Few of our people have seen flowers of this kind.

We publish, to-day, Mr. McIntosh's address to the old settlers, a very eloquent and able article, one of the very best that has been given on these grand occasions when the old people come together and with those of younger years, talk over the times of the long ago. We hope every reader of the COURIER will keep this number and put it away among their household treasures. It is worthy of a place there. A limited number of extra copies will be struck, to accommodate those who are so unfortunate as not to be subscribers. A few will also be sent to old settlers not present and to friends of Mr. McIntosh and the editor.

Publicly Whipped.

Cal. Husselman met Hank Little, the editor of the Garrett Clipper, last Saturday evening, and whipped him with a small rawhide. The Clipper gang had been abusing Husselman for several years, very much as they do other decent people. As usual, the offensive article was false. It stated that Husselman was a financial failure, his farm mortgaged, that he had wrecked the creamery, and would wreck the fair, etc., etc. Mr. Husselman had borne such things till he was out of patience, and so took this way to end it. Nine-tenths of our people justify him, and those who take sides with the Clipper, are mainly those that filthy sheet has overlooked in its search for some one to lie about. Some of these friends claim that Jack Little is the one who should have been licked. No doubt he is as much to blame as anyone, but has somehow always shifted the blame onto Hank. Husselman was arrested and trial comes up before Justice Walborn to-morrow. Baxter and Penfield are Husselman's attorneys and Prosecutor Garwood and Mr. Moody are for Little. This whole trouble is the natural outcome of the disreputable course the Clipper has always followed. It has maligned and slandered everybody its editors could think of, sparing neither the privacy of the family circle, the sanctity of the church, or the standing of reputable business men. An instance of this last, is Mr. Husselman's case. To prove the falsity of their charge, he has a statement of the recorder that no mortgages are against him. Reports have been sent up town each morning that the punished editor was in a bad way. It appears, however, that while the whipping was a severe one, he has not been as sick as he often is, when closing up a week or ten days' drunk. At such times he usually has a week or so of something like tremens. The paper, as the Littles have conducted it, has become a disgrace to community, and decent people hope that this severe lesson will put a stop to the disgraceful course it has always taken. If it don't we presume more trouble will follow.

Old Mrs. Wolfe, the mother of Allen Wolfe, is quite sick, at her home at Franklin Center. She is nearly seventy-three, and has never been sick before.

Willie Campbell went to Ft. Wayne on his bicycle Saturday, returning Tuesday. This gave him a good visit with the family of his uncle, G. W. Campbell.

Ladies! Have you tried the "Lily" brand of flour? If not, do so at once. Those who are using it claim it is the best they have used in a long time. 23t3

Supt. Merica and the M. E. orchestra went up to Fairfield Center last Thursday evening to assist at the school commencement for that township. They went, the next evening, to Franklin township for the same purpose. They furnish good music, and add greatly to the interest attached to these pleasant occasions.

Democratic Club.

The DeKalb County Democratic Club was formed last Saturday, at a meeting in Auburn, with a membership of about forty. W. B. Brown was elected president; N. W. Blackburn of Garrett, vice-president; D. D. Moody, secretary; Reuben Sawvel, treasurer. It is the first democratic club in this county, for this campaign and they propose to make it a solid organization. Democrats from any part of the county are invited to become members, for those who are now in it, represent nearly every section of the county, and are among the most active and intelligent of our people. It is the intention to form subordinate clubs also. Get ready, boys, and join with us. A second meeting to complete our organization, will be called soon after the Chicago convention.

Auburn Bicycle Club.

The lovers of the bicycle met last Thursday and organized the Auburn Bicycle club, with E. D. Beadle, president; Bert Robbins, vice-president; Milo Husselman, secretary-treasurer; Geo. McKay, captain, and John Miller, lieutenant. The regular meetings are the first Monday in each month. There will be a special meeting to consider new applications, June 20. The charter members number fifteen. Persons wishing to join can apply to D. A. Hodge, Ed. Robbins, Walter Hartman or to any officers.

City Government.

Quite a number of our people have been anxious to have our town government changed to a city government, and urge as one reason that it will be more efficient, and will cost no more. As to efficiency, that will depend on the men who are the officers. As to cost as compared with our present system, we may take the following list of salaries just adopted at Columbia City:

Mayor	$250 00
Marshal	540 00
City Clerk	200 00
Treasurer	125 00
Street Commissioner $35.00 per month for the first three months and at the rate $35.00 per month for each day thereafter that he works under order of the common council.
Chief Engineer Fire Dept.	$ 96 00
1st. Assistant Engineer	540 00
Councilmen each	50 00
City Engineer, $4.00 each day he works upon order of the common council or mayor.
City Attorney	$100 00

The Butler Normal, at Butler, Ind.

The normal term of the Butler school will begin Tuesday, July 12, 1892. We gladly refer you to our pupils of the past, as the thoroughness and class of our work. Special classes will be conducted in the interest of those intending to teach. All the branches in which examinations are held for teachers' license, will receive careful attention. Special instruction will be given on the latest and best approved methods of teaching, on the organization, management and government of schools. One can not be too well posted in the art of teaching. It is the aim to educate and train teachers for their educational work. This will be a special select normal of six weeks, and will close just before the teachers' institute. Not more than from twenty to thirty will be permitted to enter, so that it will be necessary to apply early. Pupils can use any text book they have, as all classes will be taught by topic or outline. Tuition, per term, $5 in advance. Anyone desiring further information call on or address,

Rev. C. E. Kriebel, Prin.,

REPUBLICANS MEET.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE CONVENTION.

M'KINLEY IS CHAIRMAN.

STRUGGLE OF THE PEOPLE FOR ADMITTANCE.

Lively Scenes Outside and in the Convention Hall—The Crowds Are Impartial and Cheer Both Blaine and Harrison Indiscriminately.

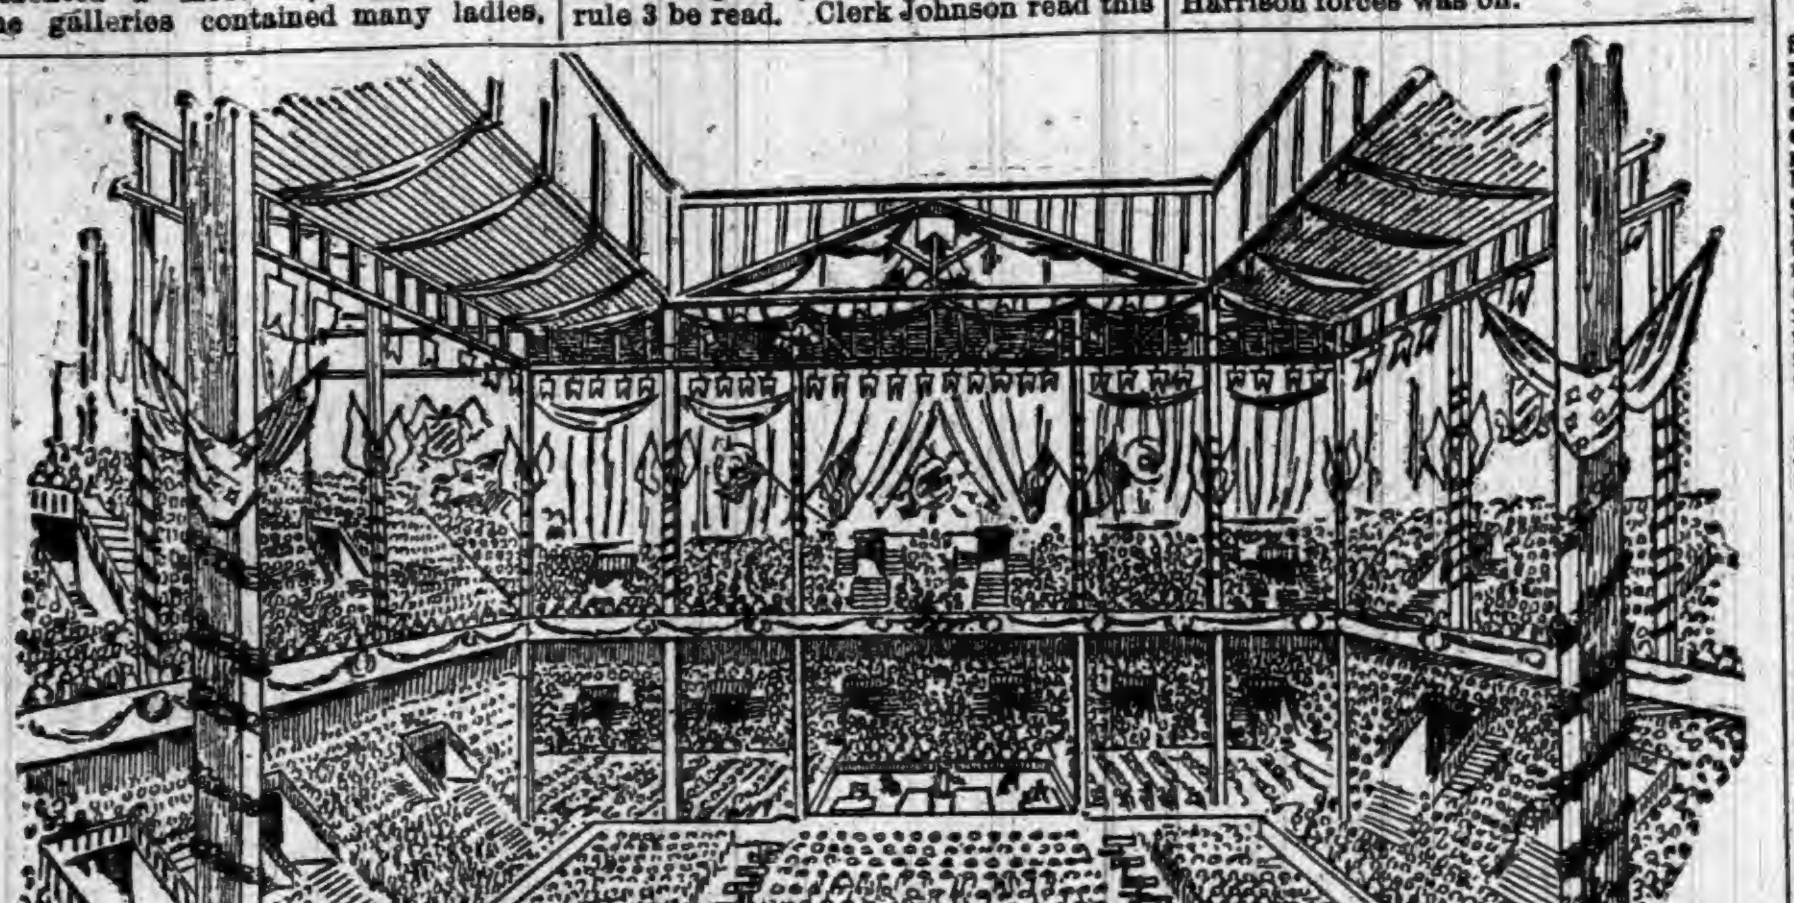
Opening Session.

Minneapolis Dispatch:

The tenth National Republican Convention was called to order at 12:36 o'clock Tuesday by the Chairman of the National Republican Committee, James Sullivan Clarkson, of Des Moines, Iowa.

THE RIVAL GONFALONS.

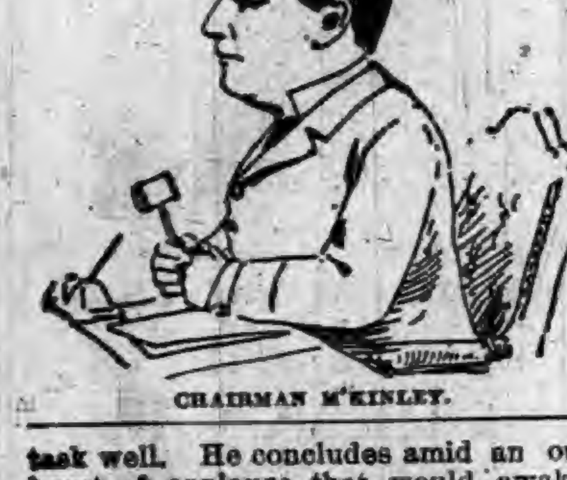
There was considerable delay in seating the thousands who possessed tickets of admission, but Sergeant-at-arms Meek and his army of assistants were fully up to the great responsibility of their task, and did the work intrusted to them with promptness and great courtesy.



THE CONVENTION IN SESSION.

When the vast hall had been filled it presented a most impressive scene. The galleries contained many ladies, all attractive in bright colors. The great gathering, canopied and wreathed, so to speak in a gorgeous trimming of flags, portraits, mottoes, flowers, and bunting, constitutes the most magnificent auditorium spectacle ever witnessed in an American city. It surpasses by far the impressive picture of the interior of the Chicago Auditorium when the National Republican Convention of 1888 was in session at its most brilliant gathering. It is a congregation of the great leaders of a mighty political organization, and with its thousands of brave, serious, intelligent, careworn, yet hopeful faces turned toward one the impressions received were entirely out of the ordinary course of life's experiences.

But there is no time for these interesting contemplations, for listen to Clarkson, Iowa's favorite Republican political manager, who is beginning to address the vast audience. He speaks in a clear, pleasant voice of considerable volume and force, and may be plainly heard as the sweep of the humming sound of 10,000 voices is hushed.



CHAIRMAN M'KINLEY.

The call for the convention has been read by M. H. De Young of California, and the machinery that is to give the people a candidate for the greatest office within their gift has been put in motion, and the spirited Iowan is reminding the delegates of their solemn duties. The blessing of Almighty God has been invoked by Rev. Dr. Brush, Chancellor of the University of South Dakota at Mitchell, and now all is solemn and silent, with only the voice of the National Committee Chairman ringing out upon the ears of the anxious multitude. Clarkson speaks well and convinces all that he is a man full of courage and energy. There is a practical business tone to his address. He reminds his hearers of victories won in the past and of an impending contest, and he has already convinced every heart in the great hall that the welfare of the nation is indissolubly interwoven with the success of the Republican party. The Iowa man has performed his task well. He concludes amid an outburst of applause that would awaken pride in a heart of stone.

Now he presents J. Sloat Fassett of New York for temporary Chairman, and once more the multitude breaks into a roar of cheering that marks the advance of the New-Yorker with approval. A formal motion and Fassett is confirmed as the temporary Chairman by nearly a thousand "ayes."

Mr. Fassett looked perfectly self-possessed as he gazed about the vast hall. In his hand was a type-written manuscript to which he referred occasionally as he spoke.

At the close of Mr. Fassett's address the convention adjourned until 10 o'clock Wednesday morning.

Wednesday's Proceedings.

It was close to noon and the hall was crowded to its utmost capacity when Chairman Fassett called the Republican National Convention to order, Wednesday. The proceedings were opened by prayer by Bishop Whipple, of Minneapolis.

Hon. E. C. Lockwood, of Idaho, presented the report of the Committee on Organization. A wild scene took place when the committee reported Governor William McKinley, of Ohio, for permanent Chairman. Hon. Samuel Fessenden of Connecticut, ex-Senator Spooner of Wisconsin, and General William Mahone of Virginia were appointed a committee to escort Governor McKinley to the chair. A magnificent reception was given the Governor when he stepped upon the platform.

Temporary Chairman Fassett retired amid great applause and there were prolonged and renewed cheers and waving of banners, after which Governor McKinley began as follows:

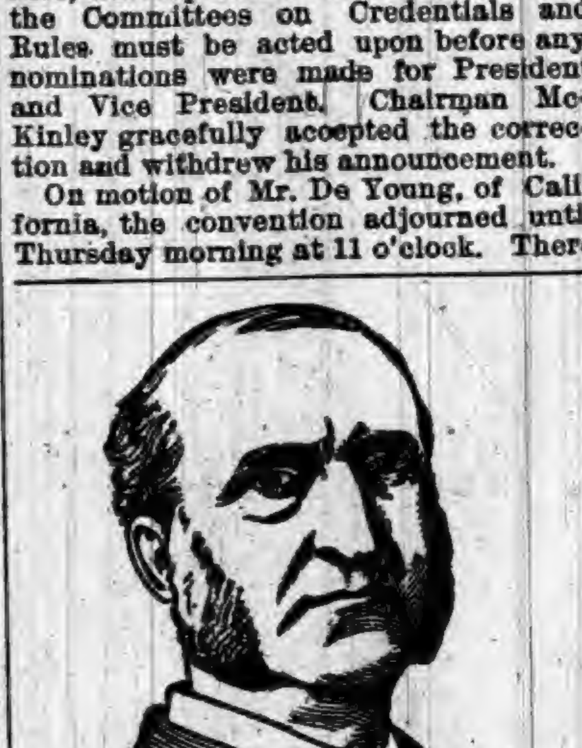
"Gentlemen of the convention:" Here he was interrupted by cries of three cheers for McKinley. The vast audience arose and shook the building with cheers for Ohio's Governor. After the applause had subsided, Mr. McKinley proceeded with his address.

The speech was greeted with prolonged cheering. At its close there were repeated cries of "Douglas," and the venerable ex-slave came forward and bowed his thanks.

After Governor McKinley's speech, Mr. Bingham of Pennsylvania submitted the report of the Rules Committee making the rules of the Fifty-first (the Reed) Congress the rules of the convention, with necessary modification. The report was adopted. The Committee on Resolutions were also given further time in which to report. The roll of States for nominations for National Committeemen was then called.

The chairman then announced that the next business was the naming of candidates for the Presidential nomination. There was an excited buzz, and Senator Cullom jumped to his feet and asked that the list of States be read to name honorary Vice Presidents.

Mr. Ingalls got up and asked that rule 3 be read. Clerk Johnson read this rule, which provided that the reports of the Committees on Credentials and Rules must be acted upon before any nominations were made for President and Vice President. Chairman McKinley gracefully accepted the correction and withdrew his announcement.



CHAUNCY DEPEW, commander of Harrison's forces.

On motion of Mr. De Young, of California, the convention adjourned until Thursday morning at 11 o'clock. There were cries of "No" as the motion to adjourn was made, and the vote in its favor was small; but the Chairman put it quickly and quickly declared it carried.

Thursday's Session.

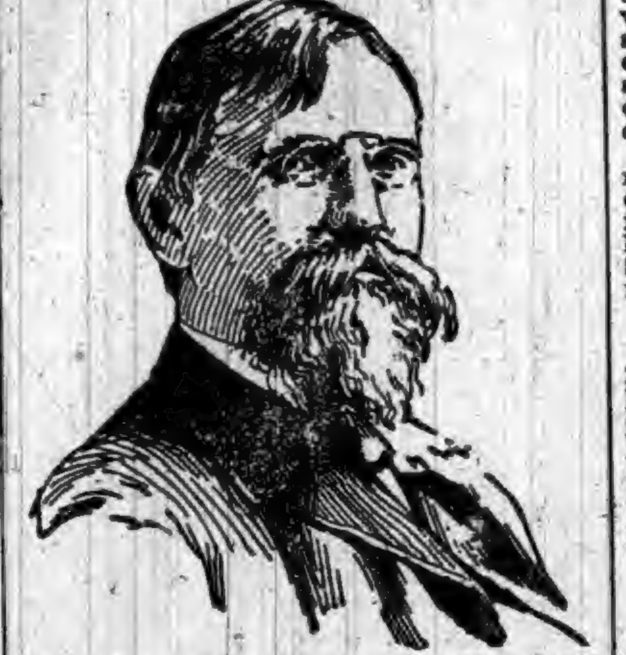
The convention was called to order at 11:22 o'clock Thursday morning, but as the Committee on Credentials was not yet ready to report the convention adjourned, after a session of a quarter of an hour, until 8 o'clock in the evening. Pennsylvania and Ohio were notably in favor of adjournment, while Wisconsin, Missouri and several of the strongly Harrison States were opposed. An Illinois delegate introduced a resolution providing that all Grand Army men shall be admitted to standing room in the house and permitted to occupy all seats remaining vacant thirty minutes after the beginning of each session. This resolution was referred to the Committee on Rules and Order of Business.

The convention was called to order in the evening shortly after 8 o'clock, and continued in session until 1:30 o'clock Friday morning. Almost all the time was occupied in a heated debate over the majority and minority reports of the Credentials Committee. A test vote taken at midnight indicated a majority of the delegates to be in favor of Harrison. The vote was on the adoption of the report of the Committee on Credentials, but was generally looked upon as a fair test of the strength of the opposition. The result of the ballot was enough to start the President's shouters afresh. They had previously held a caucus and claimed to have the pledges of enough votes to secure Mr. Harrison's nomination.

Every available space in the great and splendid convention hall seemed to have been filled up at the preceding session, but it was for the night session to test the capacity of this great hall, and it was packed almost to suffocation.

The announcement of the Committee on Credentials that a minority report would be submitted caused considerable excitement and there was painful suspense, while the two reports were being orally submitted, as to what would follow.

The majority report recommended that twelve Harrison delegates in Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana be seated in place of the same number of Blaine men given places on the temporary roll, and the minority recommended that the twelve Blaine men on the temporary roll be placed on the permanent roll. The report of the committee also covered contests in Texas, Kentucky, Maryland, South Carolina and North Carolina and District of Columbia, but there was no political significance in these contests and the report was unanimous on these cases.



GEN. LEW WALLACE, one of Harrison's lieutenants.

The majority report sustained the National Committee as to 23 votes and reversed the National Committee as to 17 votes.

When Chairman Cogswell moved that the majority report be adopted he was loudly cheered by the Harrison delegates, and when Chauncey I. Filley, of Missouri, moved to substitute the minority report therefor, the applause which followed from the Blaine delegates told the galleries that the long-expected fight between the Blaine and Harrison forces was on.

The roll call on the adoption of the minority report of the committee on credentials proceeded.

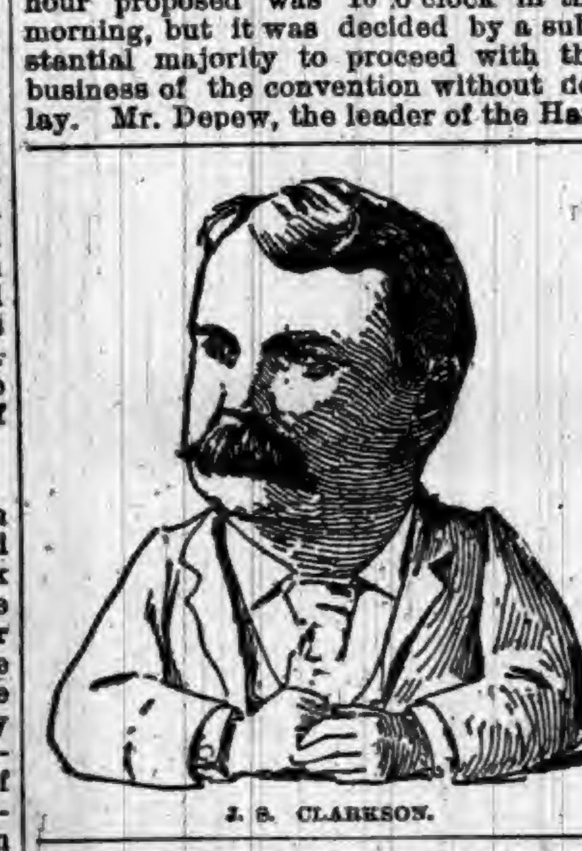
When Texas had been reached in the call of the roll the electric lights in the vast hall began to wane for a few seconds. Had it not been for the faint glimmer of a few scattering gas lights encircling the room the convention would have been in total darkness. This caused an immediate cessation of the proceedings, and the band in the gallery played "We won't go home until morning," while a messenger was hurriedly dispatched to the plant of the electric company to call for lights.

After waiting several minutes for lights Mr. Miller of New York addressed the convention trying to secure an adjournment, but without success. At this point the electric current was again turned on, and after the applause caused by the additional light had subsided, the convention proceeded with business.

At the conclusion of the roll call, Chairman McKinley said: "On this vote for the substitute of the majority report in Alabama, the nays are 423½ and the yeas are 463, and the motion is lost."

Motion to adjourn failed to carry, and the roll was called on the adoption of the majority report on delegates-at-large from Alabama, Pennsylvania having demanded it, and New York and Colorado seconded the demand. The vote resulted 476 yeas and 365½ nays.

A mighty yell greeted the announcement of the Harrison victory. Canes, hats, handkerchiefs, anything that could be grabbed, were swung wildly in triumph, while the dome seemed to tremble with the terrific roars of applause.



J. S. CLARKSON.

An attempt to adjourn the convention at this interesting juncture failed. The hour proposed was 10 o'clock in the morning, but it was decided by a substantial majority to proceed with the business of the convention without delay. Mr. Depew, the leader of the Harrison forces, was asked if he was satisfied with the test. "Yes," he replied smiling, "and we will be twenty-five votes strong on the main question."

Gov. Foraker asked the unanimous consent of the convention to the reading of the platform as prepared by the committee on resolutions. The platform was read and adopted, notwithstanding a plea from Hiscock to give the advocates of irrigation of arid lands in the West a chance to be heard. The convention then adjourned until 11 o'clock Friday morning.

REPUBLICAN PLATFORM.

All the Usual Features Disposed Of Much as in Previous Years.

The representatives of the Republicans of the United States assembled in general convention on the shores of the Mississippi River, the everlasting bond of an indestructible republic, whose most glorious chapter of history is the record of the Republican party, congratulate their countrymen on the majestic march of the nation under the banners inscribed with the principles of our platform of 1888, vindicated by victory at the polls and prosperity in our fields, workshops and mines, and make the following declaration of principles:

Reaffirm Protection Doctrines.

We reaffirm the American doctrine of protection. We call attention to its growth abroad. We maintain that the prosperous condition of our country is largely due to the wise revenue legislation of the Republican Congress. We believe that all articles which cannot be produced in the United States, except luxuries, should be admitted free of duty, and that on all imports coming into competition with the products of American labor there should be levied duties equal to the difference between wages abroad and at home. We assert that the prices of manufactured articles of general consumption have been reduced under the operations of the tariff act of 1890.

We denounce the efforts of the Democratic majority of the House of Representatives to destroy our tariff laws by piecemeal, as is manifested by their attacks upon wool, lead and lead ores, the chief products of a number of States, and we ask the people for their judgment thereon.

Success of Reciprocity.

We point to the success of the Republican policy of reciprocity, under which our export trade has vastly increased and new and enlarged markets have been opened for the products of our farms and workshops. We remind the people of the bitter opposition of the Democratic party to this practical business measure, and claim that, executed by a Repulican administration, our present laws will eventually give us control of the trade of the world.

On the Money Question.

The American people from tradition and interest favor bimetalism, and the Republican party demands the use of both gold and silver as standard money, with such restrictions and under such provisions to be determined by the legislature as will secure the maintenance of the parity of values of the two metals, so that the purchasing and debt-paying power of the dollar, whether of silver, gold or paper, shall be at all times equal. The interests of the producers of the country, its farmers and its workingmen, demand that every dollar, paper or coin, issued by the Government shall be as good as any other.

We commend the wise and patriotic steps already taken by our Government to secure an international conference to adopt such measures as will insure a parity of value between gold and silver for use as money throughout the world.

Free Ballot and Fair Count.

We demand that every citizen of the United States shall be allowed to cast one free and unrestricted ballot in all public elections, and that such ballot shall be counted and returned as cast; that such laws shall be enacted and enforced as will secure to every citizen, be he rich or poor, native or foreign born, white or black, this sovereign right, guaranteed by the constitution. The free and honest popular ballot, the just and equal representation of all the people, as well as their just and equal protection under the laws, are the foundation of our republican institutions, and the party will never relent its efforts until the integrity of the ballot and the purity of elections shall be fully guaranteed and protected in every State.

Southern Outrages.

"We denounce the continued inhuman outrages perpetrated upon American citizens for political reasons in certain Southern States of the Union.

Foreign Relations.

"We favor the extension of our foreign commerce, the restoration of our mercantile marine by home-built ships and the creation of a navy for the protection of our national interests and the honor of our flag; the maintenance of the most friendly relations with all foreign powers; entangling alliance with none, and the protection of the rights of our fishermen. We reaffirm our approval of the Monroe doctrine and believe in the achievement of the manifest destiny of the republic in its broadest sense. We favor the enactment of more stringent laws and relations for the restriction of criminal, pauper and contract immigration.

"We favor efficient legislation by Congress to protect the life and limb of employes of transportation companies engaged in carrying on interstate commerce, and recommend legislation by the respective States that will protect employes engaged in State commerce, in mining and manufacturing.

Home Rule for Ireland.

"The Republican party has always been the champion of the oppressed and recognizes the dignity of manhood, irrespective of faith, color or nationality; it sympathizes with the cause of home rule in Ireland and protests against the persecution of the Jews in Russia.

Popular Education.

The ultimate reliance of free popular government is the intelligence of the people and the maintenance of freedom among men. We therefore declare anew our devotion to liberty of thought and conscience, of speech and press, and approve all agencies and instrumentalities which contribute to the education of the children of the land; but while insisting upon the fullest measure of religious liberty, we are opposed to any union of church and state.

Opposition to Trusts.

We reaffirm our opposition, declared in the Republican platform of 1888, to all combinations of capital, organized in trusts or otherwise, to control arbitrarily the condition of trade among our citizens. We heartily indorse the action already taken upon this subject and ask for such further legislation as may be required to remedy any defects in existing laws and to render their enforcement more complete and effective.

Reduction of Postage.

We approve the policy of extending to towns, villages, and rural communities the advantages of the free-delivery service now enjoyed by the larger cities of the country, and reaffirm the declaration contained in the Republican platform of 1888 pledging the reduction of letter postage to one cent at the earliest possible moment consistent with the maintenance of the Postoffice Department and the highest class of postal service.

Civil Service.

We commend the spirit and evidence of reform in the civil service and the wise and consistent enforcement by the Republican party of the laws regulating the same.

Nicaragua Canal.

The construction of the Nicaragua canal is of the highest importance to the American people, both as a measure of national defense and to build up and maintain American commerce, and it should be controlled by the United States Government.

Territories.

"We favor the admission of the remaining territories at the earliest practicable date, having due regard to the interests of the people of the territories and of the United States. All the Federal officers appointed for the territories should be selected from bona-fide residents thereof, and the right of self-government should be accorded as far as practicable.

Arid Lands.

"We favor cession, subject to the homestead laws, of the arid public lands to the States and Territories in which they lie, under such Congressional restrictions as to disposition, reclamation and occupancy by settlers as will secure the maximum benefits to the people."

The Columbian Exposition.

The World's Columbian Exposition is a great national undertaking and Congress should promptly enact such reasonable legislation in aid thereof as will insure a discharging of the expense and obligations incident thereto and the attainment of results commensurate with the dignity and progress of the nation.

Intemperance.

"We sympathize with all wise and legitimate efforts to lessen and prevent the evils of intemperance and promote morality.

Pensions.

"Ever mindful of the services and sacrifices of the men who saved the life of the nation, we pledge anew to the veteran soldiers of the republic a watchful care and recognition of their just claims upon a grateful people.

Harrison's Administration.

We commend the able, patriotic and thoroughly American administration of President Harrison. Under it the country has enjoyed remarkable prosperity, and the dignity and honor of the nation, at home and abroad, have been faithfully maintained, and we offer the record of pledges kept as a guaranty of faithful performance in the future.

A Broad Rebuke.

One day, it is related, a noble count of the old French Parliament was trying to make a speech, and a very prosy speech it was, while all the other members were either chatting or resting. Presently the president of the body rapped slightly with his baton. "If those gentlemen who are talking to each other," said he, "would kindly make no more noise than those gentlemen who are snoring, it would be much appreciated by those gentlemen who are trying to listen!"

A WOMAN down South who sued for divorce on the ground that the marriage ceremony was performed on a railway train and was therefore illegal failed to secure a decree. The car-coupling held.

HARRISON THE MAN.

RENOMINATED BY THE REPUBLICANS.

REID IN SECOND PLACE.

NAMED BY ACCLAMATION FOR VICE PRESIDENT.

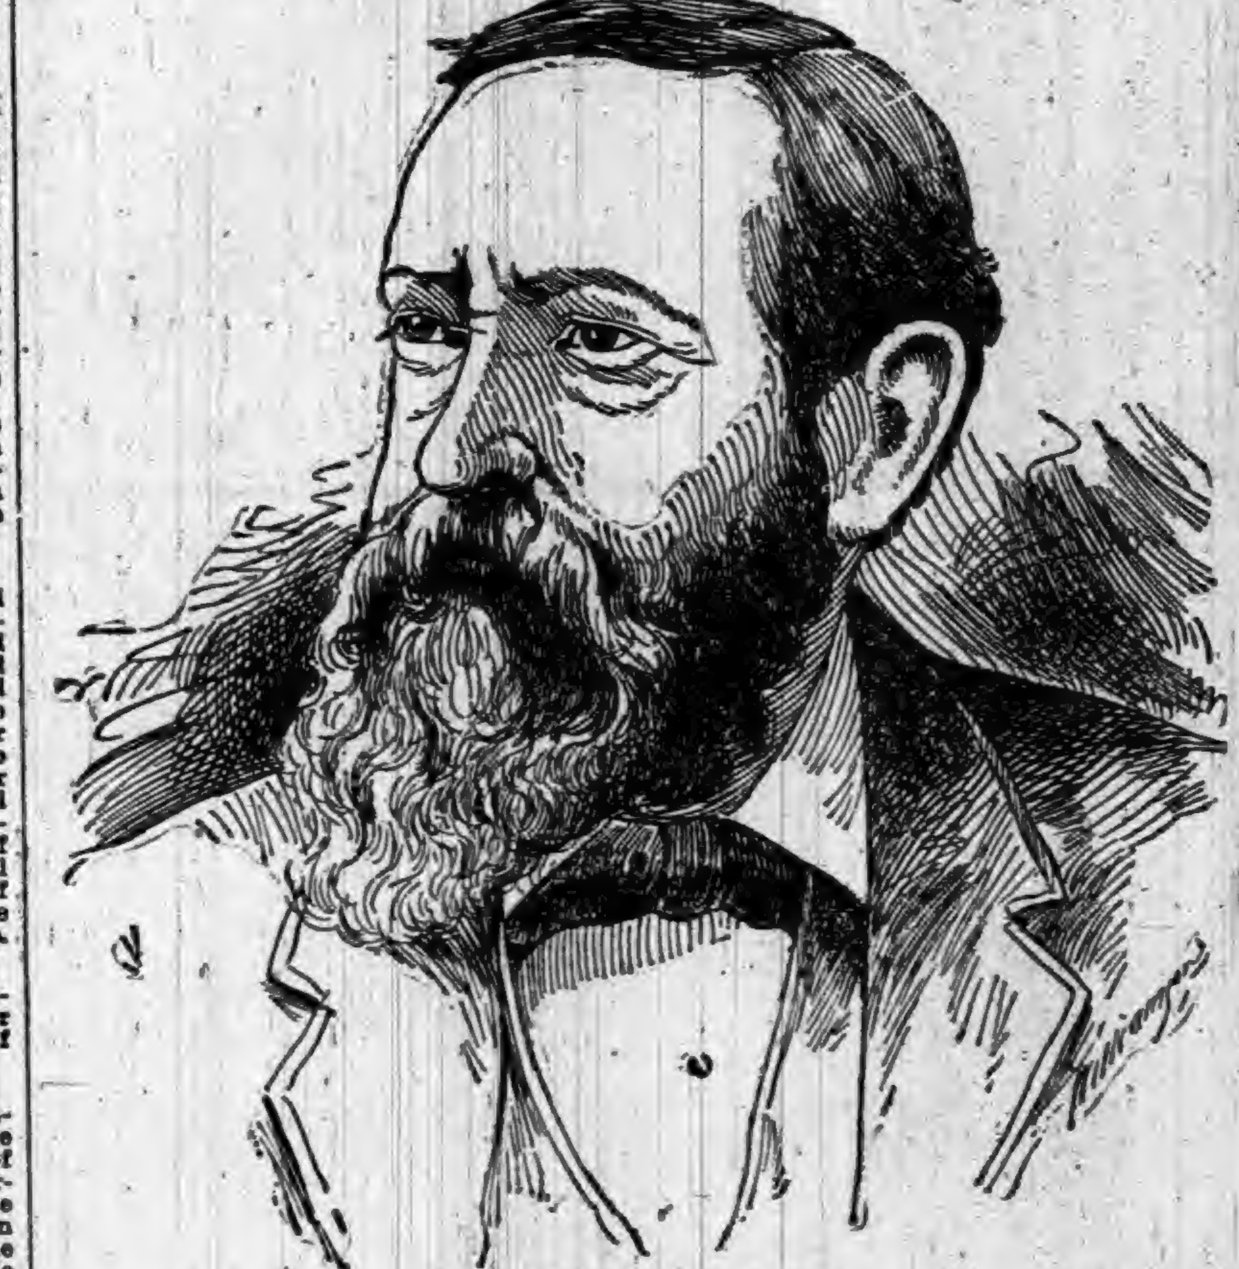
Delegates Lived Up to Their Instructions—McKinley Polls a Large Vote—Reid Complimented—The News Received by the President and Mr. Blaine.

Friday's Work.

Minneapolis dispatch:

A sharp tap of the gavel at 11:35 on Friday morning checked the hum of ten thousand voices in the great convention hall, and a moment later Chairman McKinley ordered the aisles cleared and some sort of order established.

"The regular order," resumed the Chairman, "is the presentation of candidates for President of the United States." Cheers followed this announcement.



BENJAMIN HARRISON.

It was decided that the roll of States should be called and when Colorado was reached Senator Wolcott, of the Silver State, arose. Instantly the Blaine men burst into wild and enthusiastic cheers, and all doubt as to the presentation of the name of James G. Blaine was now removed.

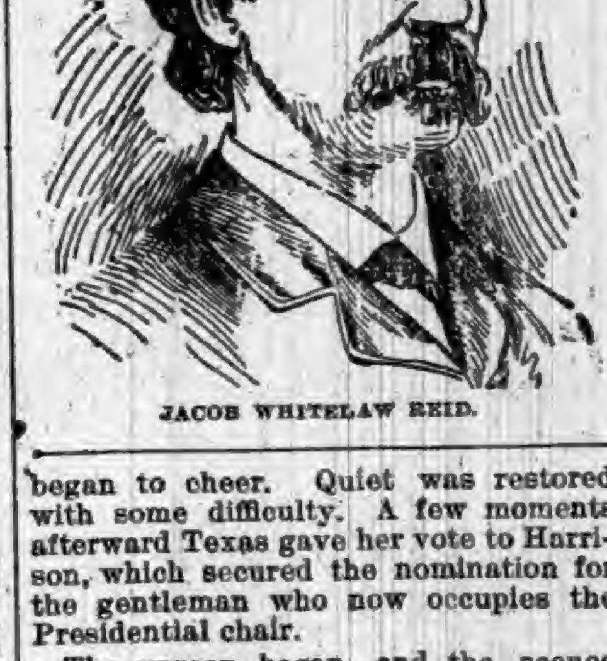
Wolcott made a rattling speech and was applauded from start to finish. Wolcott said he was proud to cast his vote for a man who always sought everything for his country and nothing for himself. Blaine, he declared, had never been President of our country, but he "will be."

Wolcott spoke for only ten minutes, and as he left the platform he was followed by a storm of applause, which continued for at least ten minutes, while many delegates sprang to their feet and shouted "Blaine, Blaine."

When Indiana was reached Col. "Dick" Thompson arose to nominate Harrison. The name of Harrison provoked enthusiasm that was a revelation. It looked as if every delegate arose to his feet and waved a fan or a handkerchief, and the noise continued for a full ten minutes and was taken up every time it gave evidence of giving out.

The speeches having been concluded, Mr. Sewell, of New Jersey, moved that the convention proceed to the real business of the session. His motion for beginning the ballot was carried without serious opposition. A call of the States was ordered amid great excitement.

Tennessee, when reached, came in for him with 17 votes, and the Harrison men began to cheer. Quiet was restored with some difficulty. A few moments afterward Texas gave her vote to Harrison, which secured the nomination for the gentleman who now occupies the Presidential chair.



JACOB WHITELAW REID.

The uproar began, and the scenes which had attended the mention of Blaine's and Harrison's names during the nominating speeches, were repeated, with a material shortening of the time occupied. The band struck up "When the Clouds Roll By," and a big picture of President Harrison was lowerd from the gallery in the rear of the platform; below the picture was the inscription: "The Union Veteran League's Candidate."

While the tumult was still on, Chairman McKinley relinquished the chair to Elliot F. Shepard, of New York, and made his way to the floor, where, after several vain efforts to be heard in the confusion, he finally succeeded in attracting the attention of the convention and addressed the chair as follows:

> Mr. President and Gentlemen of the Convention: I move that the rules be suspended and that Benjamin Harrison be nominated for President of the United States by acclamation.

The motion was seconded by many delegates, amid cries of "No," "No," and much confusion. The Chair recognized Colonel Clarkson, of Iowa, who seconded the motion.

Gov. McKinley resumed the chair and said: President Harrison having received a majority of all the votes cast, as the nominee of this convention, shall it be made unanimous?

Cries—"Yes," "Yes."

The Chairman—Those in favor will say aye.

The response was general, and without calling for the nays Chairman McKinley said: "It is a unanimous vote." [Cheering long and continued.]

Mr. Depew then moved that the convention adjourn until 8 o'clock in the evening, and the motion prevailed.

The concluding session of the convention began with these words by Gov. McKinley: "The order of business is the presentation of candidates for Vice President of the United States. The secretary will call the roll of States and Territories."

The secretary proceeded with the call of the roll until New York was reached, when Senator O'Connor, of the Empire State, was recognized, and in a brief speech presented the name of Hon Whitelaw Reid, of New York. Governor Bulkely of Connecticut gave a hearty second to the nomination, and as there were no other names offered, Mr. John A. Hutchinson, of West Virginia, asked that the nomination of Mr. Reid be made by acclamation. The motion was seconded.

The news was immediately telegraphed to Washington and to Boston, where Mr. Blaine is stopping.

AT THE WHITE HOUSE.

The scene in the White House Friday afternoon was a memorable one. The telegrapher's office was crowded with a distinguished party. Postmaster General Wanamaker sat at the corner of the desk with his tally-sheet prepared for half a dozen candidates. On a little table near the instruments Private Secretary Halford rested his tablet and pencil. Russell Harrison made himself at home on a desk behind the instruments. Three or more representatives of newspapers were provided with seats, and as the news came in Mr. Halford read it aloud, then hastened to give the dispatches to the President.

Mr. Tibbitts, the President's stenographer, is also a telegrapher, and he heard the ticks which told of the nineteen votes for Harrison in the Pennsylvania delegation. "I do not propose to wait for that news to be typewritten," and away he went to the President to tell him of an unexpected gain. It was a few minutes later when the operator reported "Harrison nominated." Up jumped Halford and down came Russell Harrison from his perch on the desk.

Miss Halford asked her father for the privilege of taking the good news to the President. Three minutes later, father and daughter hastened to give to the victorious candidate the little printed slip which irrevocably settled the contest.

NO SIGN OF GRIEF.

The Ex-Secretary Declares He Anticipated Defeat.

[Boston dispatch.]

"The result is not a surprice, and might have been expected from the estimates made before the balloting in the convention began." Those were the words ex-Secretary of State James G. Blaine said when he learned the result of the first ballot at Minneapolis. Mr. Blaine was not excited. He did not look discouraged; in fact, he was wonderfully cool.

Late in the afternoon he sent for a reporter and gave him the following card to the Republican party of the country:

> The resolution, energy and persistence which marked the proceedings of the convention at Minneapolis will, if turned against the common foe, win the election in November. All minor differences should be merged in the duty of every Republican to do all in his power to elect the ticket this day nominated by the National Republican Convention.
>
> JAMES G. BLAINE.

After writing the card Mr. Blaine surrendered his rooms, and, accompanied by Mrs. Blaine and Gail Hamilton, took the 7 o'clock express for Augusta. He seemed greatly pleased at the idea of going home, for so he termed his trip to Bar Harbor.

A COMPLETE SET OF THE WORKS OF

CHARLES DICKENS

FREE!

The Most Valuable and Remarkable Premium Ever Offered Free with any Periodical.

A MARVEL IN BOOK-MAKING.

A Set of the Works of Charles Dickens, IN 12 LARGE VOLUMES, FREE.

There has just been published A Set of the Works of Charles Dickens, in Large and Handsome Volumes, printed from entirely new plates, with new type. By special arrangement with the publishers we are enabled to offer to our patrons this splendid set of Dickens' Works, postpaid, free. Charles Dickens was the greatest novelist who ever lived. No author before or since his time has won the fame that he achieved, and his works are even more popular to-day than during his lifetime. They abound in wit, humor, pathos, masterly delineation of character, vivid descriptions of places and incidents, thrilling and skilfully wrought plots. Each book is intensely interesting. No home should be without a set of these great and remarkable works. Not to have read them is to be far behind the age in which we live. The twelve volumes in this set contain the following world-famous works, each one of which is published complete, unchanged and absolutely unabridged:

DAVID COPPERFIELD,
MARTIN CHUZZLEWIT,
NICHOLAS NICKLEBY,
DOMBEY AND SON,
BLEAK HOUSE,
LITTLE DORRIT,
OUR MUTUAL FRIEND,
PICKWICK PAPERS,
BARNABY RUDGE AND CHRISTMAS STORIES,
OLIVER TWIST AND GREAT EXPECTATIONS,
THE OLD CURIOSITY SHOP AND THE UNCOMMERCIAL TRAVELER,
A TALE OF TWO CITIES, HARD TIMES, AND THE MYSTERY OF EDWIN DROOD.

THE PLAN.

We will send a complete set of these books FREE by mail, postage paid, guaranteeing safe delivery, as follows: To any old subscriber, who sends one dollar, and renews their subscription to either of the following publications for one year:

THE PEOPLE'S LITERARY COMPANION,
—OR—
The National Farmer and Home Magazine

This is the grandest offer ever made, and the greatest bargain ever offered. Up to this time the price of a complete set of Dickens' Works has been ten dollars or more. The use of modern, improved printing, folding and stitching machinery, the present extremely low price of white paper, and the great competition in the book trade are the factors which made this wonderful offer possible. Bear in mind that we offer, not a single volume, but the entire set of twelve volumes all free to subscribers. All may now afford the luxury of owning a handsome set of Dickens' works. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. Do not neglect or put off this wonderful opportunity. Send at once; you will be delighted with the charming books, and, as long as you live, never cease to regard it as the best investment of a dollar you ever made. Address all communications to and write; and are possessed of fair intelligence, you are fully qualified to make a grand success of what we offer you. We have lately published at great expense and labor a perfect wonder in the way of an illustrated Gift Book, suitable to all classes, an ornament to any home, and at a price that brings it within the reach of all, even those of moderate means. Heretofore only those who indulged in luxuries have felt that they could afford a book of this class, as they are sold in book stores at $5.00 and upwards. The book which we offer is not in any way inferior to those above referred to, but is far superior to hundreds of books of this nature that are sold at prices exceeding ours by an enormous per cent. It is selling with a rush wherever shown. Agents have only to show the book and mention the price, and it sells on its merits without further talking. No better Christmas, New Year's or Birthday present can be selected. It will sell, not only for holiday trade, but at all seasons of the year, for the reason that all will want it in their homes, and will have it as soon as they know the low price at which our agents can furnish them. Reader if you need profitable employment, and a business in which you can and will take pride, as well as make money rapidly, do not fail to send for circulars containing private terms to agents, and full information, which will be sent FREE upon application. Old and new agents alike are making handsome salaries—yes, fortunes. Many of those who are making the best records are now at the agency business, having had no previous experience. ☞ Make a start—the field is entirely new. No such terms have been offered agents as we now offer on this wonderful book. Special qualifications not necessary, for it sells everywhere at sight. Perhaps you have at some time been unsuccessful at the agency business. If so, there is every reason why you should try this, the PRINCE of gift books, as failure is impossible if you make A START. Write us to-day, study our circulars and directions, then order an outfit and go to work with push and energy. You may make the greatest mistake of your life, if you allow this GOLDEN opportunity to pass unimproved. E. C. Allen & Co., Box 202, Augusta, Maine.

SHALL WE START YOU

in a pleasant and successful business, that will bring you money rapidly and honorably? A grand opportunity for one person in each locality, young or old, of either sex, wherever you live. Reader, it is a royal chance for you, and such a one as may never again come to your attention in a lifetime. Beginners easily secure an income of $30 to $50 per week from the very start, and much more as the business becomes established. YOU can earn as much as any one. There is not the slightest risk on your part. No capital required. We start you FREE, and furnish everything needed to carry on the business successfully. Hundreds just starting report wonderful success and great profits. Will you write us, and take advantage of this grand offer, or will you delay and allow others to profit by it. We leave it for you to decide, but we tell you frankly that you will lose the golden opportunity of your life if you fail to test the business now. Act quickly and your reward is sure. Address E. Give Us Laughing Philosophers.

None of your snarling cynics for us. They laugh not, neither do they smile. They are lugubrious—dyspeptic. They are usually sour of visage, pale, slight, dry, quite gravyless individuals in fact, who look as if they had been at loggerheads with roast beef all their lives. The side-splitting, button-bursting guffaw that proceeds from the individual with a good digestion is never heard from them. They magnify mole hills into mountains, "trifles light as air" into grievous annoyances. Show us, on the contrary, a man who faces trouble with a smile, repines not at small mishaps, and in whom the fountains of merriment are easily set aflow, and we will show you a man with a good digestion. Use Hostetter's Stomach Bitters to secure this blessing, and banish the nervousness and querulous disposition to snarl and find fault which attends dyspepsia. Rheumatism, constipation, malaria, kidney trouble and la grippe yield to the Bitters.

Extravagance of Woman.

Speaking of the extravagance of women in our day, Maire de Medicis had a gown sewn with 32,000 pearls and 3,000 diamonds, and her example was followed by lesser personages, who cheerfully expended more than their incomes on gowns so ladened with precious stones that their wearers could scarcely move about in them. Mme. de Montespan, the beauty who reigned at the court of Louis XIV., wore at one great court festival "a gown of gold on gold and over that gold frieze stitched with a certain gold which makes the most divine stuff that has ever been imagined," according to the panegyrics written by the pen of Mme. de Sevigne.

right at the seat of difficulty, is accomplished by the sure and steady aim of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. Don't fool around with a pop-gun, nor a "Flint-lock," when this reliable "Winchester" is within reach!

Dr. Sage's treatment of Catarrh in the Head is far superior to the ordinary, and when directions are reasonably well followed, results in a permanent cure. Don't longer be indifferent to the verified claims of this unfailing Remedy.

The worst forms of Catarrh disappear with the use of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. Its mild, soothing, cleansing and healing properties effect a perfect and permanent cure, no matter how bad the case, or of how long standing. It's a remedy that succeeds where everything else has failed. Thousands of such cases can be pointed out. That's the reason its makers back their faith in it with money. They offer $500 reward for a case of Catarrh which they cannot cure.

It's a medicine that allows them to take such a risk.

Doesn't common sense lead you to take such a medicine?

THE NEXT PRESIDENT.

HE WILL BE NOMINATED IN CHICAGO JUNE 21.

Complete Arrangements Made for the Greatest Gathering in the Party's Entire History and in the Grandest Amphitheater Ever Constructed for the Purpose.

All Is Now Ready.

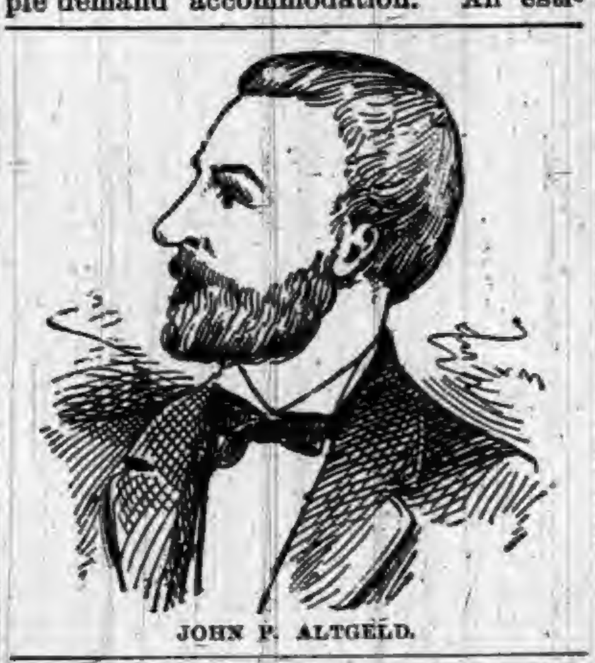
Chicago correspondence: Where the elephant and the kangaroo of Barnum's own and only are wont to caper for a week each year during Chicago's most torrid weather the Democratic lion and the striped tiger will sportively engage during the merry month of June this year of grace. In a wigwam 250x456 feet, built on the plan of the Roman amphitheater, located on Michigan avenue, between Madison and Washington streets, will the grand carnival of politicians be held, and here will be named the next quadriennial tenant of the White House at Washington.

Just how Chicago came to be chosen as the place of holding the National Democratic Convention of 1892 is matter of dispute. Some say it was Chicago's great railway and hotel facilities, and the fact that she knew by long and varied experience how to care for gigantic enterprises of this sort that turned the scale. Some cities, like men, are born great, and others have greatness thrust upon them. Chicago enjoys both conditions, the capture of the Democratic convention being a striking instance of the latter.

But the local Democracy, after it had won its prize, did not know what to do with it. The old Exposition building, famous for its national conventions and especially notable as the place in which was named the successful standard-bearer in 1884, as well as the defeated knight from Bar Harbor in that same eventful year, had been ordered razed to the ground, and its destruction would be complete before convention time.

But the convention was coming and had to be arranged for. A number of prominent Democrats got together, and the result was the appointment of a committee of arrangements, with Judge John P. Altgeld as Chairman; James C. Strain, Secretary; and A. F. Seeberger, Treasurer.

The committee was nonplused at the outset to know what to do for a hall. The Auditorium was considered, but that would not do. A Chicago convention means that not less than 20,000 people demand accommodation. An estimated expenditure in remodeling the Auditorium would result in providing only 8,000 seats. All the other cities had agreed to furnish sittings for not less than 15,000. The Auditorium was declared out of the question. So the Committee of Arrangements determined to build a hall for the especial accommodation of the convention which should seat not less than 20,000 people.



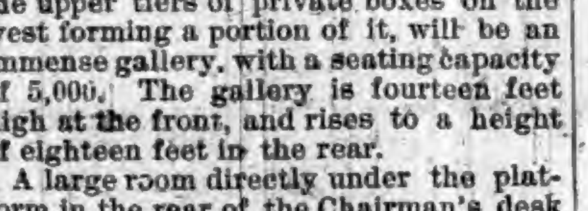
JOHN P. ALTGELD.

The Finance Committee at once set about devising ways and means for meeting the expenses of the convention. How well the committee has succeeded is indicated by the fact that of the $50,000 necessary to cover the expenses over $45,275 is secured and the sale of seats will secure every dollar needed.

How the Convention Will Be Held.

The wigwam, which promises to be historic for its connection with the success and growth of the Democratic party, has a frontage on Michigan ave. of 456 feet. Its depth is 250 feet, or a total ground size of 114,000 square feet. The building will be sixty feet high, well lighted and ventilated. The interior is one vast amphitheater. The arena or pit will be seated with 840 armchairs, and here the delegates will sit. They will face the west or Michigan avenue side. Directly in front of them is the platform where will sit the Chairman and officers of the convention. Directly in front of the Chair will sit the official stenographers, and flanking the Chair on either side will be the press representatives, 175 on each side—350 in all. Directly back of the Chair will be seats for 300 special guests, and rising above these will be private boxes two tiers high. Surrounding the pit or arena seats will gradually rise in amphitheatrical form to the walls. There will be 12,000 seats, divided into four sections, and divided by broad, commodious aisles. Encircling the entire interior, the upper tiers of private boxes on the west forming a portion of it, will be an immense gallery, with a seating capacity of 5,000. The gallery is fourteen feet high at the front, and rises to a height of eighteen feet in the rear.

A large room directly under the platform in the rear of the Chairman's desk will be fitted up for use of the Western Union and Postal Telegraph companies, and at both ends will be commodious rooms, one for the use of the Western Associated Press, the other for the United Press. Altogether there will be 19,400 chairs in the great wigwam and fifty boxes. The cost of the building, exclusive of decorating and lighting, will be $23,500.



DEMOCRATIC WIGWAM FOR 1892.

Some Prominent Figures.

The personnel of the convention will be such as to inspire the utmost confidence of the National Democracy. The Thurman bandana will be missing and the clean-cut features of Hendricks will not grace the wigwam, but historic figures will not be lacking. Instead of J. Sterling Morton, Nebraska will have its Democracy vouched for by Gov. Boyd; Iowa will proudly and eloquently offer Horace Boies to the nation; Wisconsin with her splendid achievements will pledge herself anew in the faith of Cleveland; and Illinois, anxious to do better, will agree to reform if Palmer is placed at the head of the ticket. With such a showing the Northwest can truthfully lay claim to having sown the seeds of tariff reform upon fruitful soil, and the South may concede the presidency to this section. While the East has been quarreling over the flesh pots the Mississippi valley has made rapid strides in the cause of democracy, and if the Carlisle-Mills-Watterson people divide the South, thereby crippling Mr. Cleveland, the chances are that Gov. Boies or Senator Palmer will be the presidential nominee. Clayton E. Crafts, who is one of the Illinois delegates at large, may be permanent chairman of the national convention. His selection would be a graceful compliment to the West, and his only competitors so far as known are Patrick Collins and Senator Voorhees. Mr. Crafts, though, is removed somewhat from entangling alliances because, in his advocacy of Gen. Palmer, he has refrained from antagonizing Senator Gorman, Mr. Cleveland, or Gov. Boies. He is satisfied that Gen. Palmer can only be nominated as a compromise candidate, and should he be chairman of the convention Gen. Adlai E. Stevenson will act in a like capacity for the Illinois delegation. Having been Assistant Postmaster General under Mr. Cleveland, and cherishing profound admiration for the ex-President, Gen. Stevenson will not put any obstacles in the way of that gentleman's nomination, yet he is under obligations to support Gen. Palmer should it be deemed advisable to take a Western candidate. In any Democratic convention Gen. Stevenson will have weight, and he will certainly be in the confidence of the Cleveland managers, among whom will be ex-Secretary William F. Vilas, ex-Postmaster General Don M. Dickinson, ex-Secretary of State Thomas F. Bayard, Gen. Edward S. Bragg, and Attorney General William U. Hensel of Pennsylvania. These men doubtless lack the cunning of Senator Hill, Richard Croker, William Sheehan and Ed Murphy of New York, and the political foresight of Arthur P. Gorman, but they wield sufficient influence in the nation to make Mr. Cleveland the formidable candidate he is. They were associated with Mr. Cleveland, and if they cannot have their way about it they will be around when the prizes are being drawn in the convention. They would nominate Mr. Cleveland regardless of New York, and they may do it, unless the Hill people offer a substitute. Mr. Hill will hardly make peace on any such terms, and although his fighting force is numerically weak a dozen delegates like Gov. Flower, Ed Murphy, Gen. Sickles, Gen. Slocum, and ex-Congressman John R. Fellows, Mr. Croker, the Tammany leader, Congressman Bourke Cochran, Mayor Hugh Grant, Perry Belmont, Delancey Nichol, Lieut. Gov. Sheehan, George Raines and Brewer Ehret can play havoc as bulls in the china shop. They will really determine the action of the convention, provided Mr. Cleveland does not have two-thirds of the delegates to begin with. Practical politicians as they all are, Senator Hill made no mistake when he designated them and saw to it that Mr. Cleveland's confidants were included in the list of alternates solely. Among these alternates are Manton Marble and Mayor Alfred C. Chapin of Brooklyn. To Mr. Cleveland they would gladly give their votes, but they have none to give. On the other hand, ex-Senator Thomas F. Grady, who bolted Mr. Cleveland's nomination in 1884 and took the stump for Gen. Butler, is a Hill alternate, together with Congressman Amos J. Cummings.

The anti-Cleveland New-Yorkers will be offset somewhat by Pennsylvania, the delegation from which State will be led by State Senator George Ross, W. U. Hensel, for many years Chairman of the State Committee and now Attorney General of the Commonwealth; William M. Singerly, the owner and editor of the Philadelphia Record, and Senator Henry Alvin Hall. Should the opportunity arise these gentlemen, who will be in touch with ex-Postmaster Harrity of Philadelphia, a thick-and-thin Cleveland adherent, might present the name of Gov. Pattison. That will be only in the event, though, that there is an outside demand for Gov. Pattison. Otherwise, they will remain true to Mr. Cleveland. Wisconsin occupies the same position in regard to Senator Vilas, who, with his partner, J. H. Knight, Gen. E. S. Bragg and E. C. Wall, Chairman of the Democratic State Committee, make up the delegates at large from that State. Col. Vilas considers Mr. Cleveland the strongest candidate before the people, and until the West is given a chance it looks as though Wisconsin would have the co-operation of Illinois. Add Michigan, with Don Dickinson, to this combination; Indiana, with Senator Voorhees, Editor Morss, John Lamb and ex-Chairman Jewell, of the State Committee; Minnesota, with Michael Doran and his colleagues; Missouri, with Col. Jones, of the St. Louis Republic, and M. L. Clardy, with Fred W. Lehman in the background, to the Cleveland column, and Tammany may conclude to consider the advisability of getting into the band wagon.

To the galaxy of noted characters, New England will contribute Gen. Patrick Collins, Gov. Wm. E. Russell, and E. C. Benedict, one of the heaviest gas trust stockholders. Oregon has instructed for Gov. Pennoyer for President, and among the Cleveland men from Kansas will be ex-Governor Glick, W. C. Jones, Chairman of the Democratic State Committee, and Tully Scott, who was a Land Commissioner under Cleveland. Lewis Baker and P. B. Winston will co-operate with National Committeeman Doran, of Minnesota, and Gov. Reynolds and Congressman Casey will second the efforts of ex-Secretary Bayard for Delaware. Iowa intrusts the Boies candidacy to Senator Shields of Dubuque, Editor J. F. Duncombe of Fort Dodge, and ex-United States Marshal Campbell of Fairfield, who will be assisted by Messrs. Fullen and Hunter, of the State Committee, Congressman Hayes, and others. Senator Daniel and ex-Congressman Goode, of Virginia, will help out the Hill boomers, and Henry Watterson et al. the candidacy of Senator Carlisle.

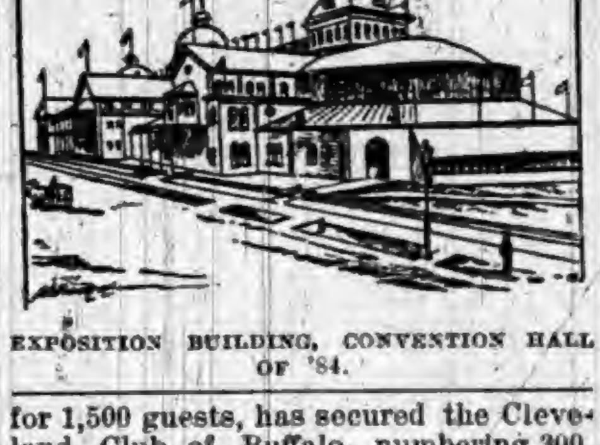
In accordance with time-honored custom the headquarters of the national committee will be at the Palmer House. It is stated by Manager Bourne that more than twenty State headquarters will also be located there.

The New York delegation will establish its headquarters at the Auditorium, where it has engaged the parlor floor entire. The Hill men will also have headquarters at the Auditorium. The delegates chosen at the Syracuse convention to the number of 500 have secured quarters at the Grand Pacific; the Minnesota delegation and friends to the number of fifty; Missouri, forty; Mississippi, thirty; Nebraska, twenty-five; Arkansas, twenty-five; Montana, twelve; Wyoming, twelve; District of Columbia, fifteen.

The Great Northern, with a capacity for 1,500 guests, has secured the Cleveland Club of Buffalo, numbering 300. McCoy's Hotel will take care of the Hawkeye Club of Des Moines, numbering 250, the Boies Club of Iowa, 30 strong, 50 Cleveland men from Syracuse, the Pittsburg Randall Club, numbering 100, the Milwaukee Jefferson Club, numbering 50, John Bolan's party from Rochester, N. Y., of 30, and fully 200 members of Tammany. The Thurman Club of Columbus, 100, the Erie County Democracy, 250, and 100 members of the Randall Club of Pittsburg will be entertained at Gore's Hotel. The Sherman has already arranged for 300 Ohio men and 80 from Pennsylvania, and the Kings County delegation will stop there. The German-American Club of Indianapolis, numbering 125, will put up at Burke's Hotel. The Victoria will entertain the Hendricks Clubs of Indiana, and the Indiana delegation will have its headquarters there.



EXPOSITION BUILDING, CONVENTION HALL OF '84.

At the Tremont the Calumet Club of Baltimore, numbering 200; the Sam Randall Club of Philadelphia, 300; and the Joel Parker Association of Newark, N. J., 200, will take up their headquarters.

From the present outlook Mr. Cleveland will enter the National Democratic Convention with considerably more than the two-thirds vote necessary to a choice already committed to him.

Journalistic Flights.

The Chicago Herald has taken to soaring. Though it has no means of knowing anything about the matter, it gives in its issue of June 1, 66,627,842,237,075,266 as the number of human beings who have lived upon the earth since the beginning of time. When we consider the fact that about 150,000 persons are born every day, the units, tens and hundreds in the above big number are curiously learned. From all we know of the earth's population since the "historic period," the Herald's number is only from five to ten million times too large. Again, it says, "to bury this vast number the whole landed surface of the globe, every inch of it, would have to be dug over 120 times." The smallest knowledge of mensuration shows this statement, too, to be a hundred-fold absurdity. The surface of the earth would hold that big number even without being dug over once. In the same issue, the population of Japan is given as 237,000,000, or six times larger than it actually is. But in its issue of June 2, it indulges in verbal pyrotechnics in an editorial article in which we find the words, fulvid, cataphractic, cretinous, dissentaneous, lipicity, distomatic, and nihility.—Pullman Journal.

WILLIAM SPENCER.

A Prominent G. A. R. Man.

Ever since I came out of the army in '65 I had been in poor health and had taken more or less medicine all the time. I suffered principally from kidney and liver complaint, pain in back, poor appetite and constitution run down generally. Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root did me more good than all the other medicine I had ever taken. At present am feeling better than for years. It is the best medicine on earth. Wm. Spencer, Co. F, 30th Indiana Infantry, Elkhart, Ind.

It is just such cases and wonderful cures as these that have made Swamp-Root famous and given it a world-wide reputation. Everybody has a good word to say for it. Have you tried it? Recommended by druggists, 50c. or $1.00.

The Heavenly Shrew.

But if it is a virtue to make war on the rat, it is none to confound friend and foe, and offer upon the altar of ignorance and prejudice another little animal which, with palpitating heart and tremulous nose, ventures into the house in these cold, wet nights. I refer, of course, to the musk-rat * * * It is not a rat at all, neither Mus this nor Mus that, but Sorex caerulescens, which means the Heavenly Shrew. And, if not a rat in name, it is still less that villanous thing in nature. It wants none of your provisions, and wanton destruction is not in all its thoughts; its sole purpose in the house is a friendly one, videlicet, to hunt the loathsome cockroach and the pestiferous beetle. It is charged with diffusing an unpleasant order; and there is undoubtedly some truth in this; it can be very unsavory at times. But that is not its normal state; it is the fruit of vexation and spirit.

Lastly, one small fault may be overlooked in view of the many admirable virtues that adorn its character. While the rat, after a night of crime, spends the day in a sanguinary fracas with its own brothers in the ceiling, and the mother-squirrel has to retire into the woods, and bring up her family in secret, lest their own papa should eat them, the days of the heavenly shrew are passed in sweet domestic harmony. As night comes on the pair venture out of their hole and meander along together, warbling to one another in gentle undertones. Or, perhaps, the little ones at home are growing up, and their mamma brings them out to see the world. The first-born takes hold of her tail with its teeth, its tail is grasped by the next, and so on to the little Benjamin at the end, and so the whole family, like a hairy serpent, wriggles away together—a sight, I admit, to make one's flesh creep; but, looked at in a proper spirit, it is a moving spectacle, full of moral beauty.

Preaching and Practice.

"See here, Mr. Blank, what are you going out to-night for?" asked Mrs. B. with a threatening look.

"Big political meeting to-night," explained Mr. B., apologetically.

"Political meeting, eh?" echoed Mrs. B. "You have been going to political meetings every night for five weeks, and if it had not been for me you would have worn your boots to bed every time."

"But just think how nice it would be if I should get nominated for something? Think of the loads of money I could rake in, and the nice furniture and new clothes and sealskin sacques and—"

"That will do," interrupted Mrs. Blank; "I have heard that story before. You made a speech last night at a ward meeting, I see."

"Yes," responded Mr. B., with pardonable pride.

"And I see by the two or three lines notice of it in the newspaper that the burden of your remarks was 'the office should seek the man and not the man the office.' Now, you just take off that overcoat; sit right down, and if any office comes along and knocks I will let it in."—Philadelphia Call.

A Dark Problem

The question for debates at the Sewickley Colored Club was: "Which is of most benefit to man, the steam engine or the horse?"

The horse orator grew pale when his opponent asked, vehemently: "What am de hoss, anyway? Nuffin but a steam ingine. Did my learned brudder never see a hoss on a cold day how de steam comes out oh his nose? Keep dat steam inside an' de horse would bust."

"An' when we come to die," said the horse orator, "how'd we look goin' to de cemetery in a steam hearse? Dat would be puffeckly 'diculous?" This turned the tide and the horse side won.—Pittsburgh Chronicle Telegraph.

A Terrible Discovery.

At the loot of the summer palace during the Chinese war, an enterprising officer collected a few memorials of the "Son of the Moon and first Cousin of the Stars," but what always filled him with regret was the information he afterwards received from a native official:—

"You barbarians took a good many things off, but you left the lions upon the entrance gates, which surprised us very much."

"We didn't think so much of them as you do, from an artistic point of view, and it was no time to encumber ourselves with brass things," the officer indifferently answered.

"My good sir, they were solid gold," said the official.

The officer took to his bed, and had a seriousness illness from mere remorse for his want of penetration.

A Practical Farmer.

I received great benefit from the use of Swamp-Root. I suffered for some length of time with chronic kidney difficulty, accompanied by intense pain in the back and constitution generally run down. It is a great medicine and shall always be kept on my farm. I recommend it to all my neighbors.

To Blow an Organ.

One of the large church organs in England is supplied with wind by powerful feeders worked by hydraulic engines and an electro motor. The pneumatic lever is applied to the great and swell organs and the couplers in connection with them. The solo organ and the pedal organ are played by means of an improved tubular pneumatic action. The draw-stop action is also pneumatic.

Nails.

It is safe to say that not one person in a thousand is able to give the origin of the terms ten-penny, six-penny, two-penny, etc., as applied to nails. For many years these useful commodities were made a specified number of pounds to the thousand, and this standard is still recognized in England and other countries. For instance, in the first-named locality, a ten-penny nail is understood to be one of a kind of which it would require 1,000 to make ten pounds, and a six-penny nail one of a lot of which an equal number would comprise six pounds. "Penny" is really a survival of the English "pun," a corruption of "pound," as originally intended. Formerly the pound mark (£) followed the figures designating the size of the nails, thus: 2£, 6£, 10£, and so on, but this in time gave way to the pence mark (d), as at the present time.—The House Furnishing Review.

Valuable Idol.

An exchange says that a lady who was looking about in a bric-a-brac shop with a view to purchasing something odd, noticed a quaint figure, the head and shoulders of which appeared above the counter.

"What is that Japanese idol over there worth?" she inquired.

The salesman's reply was given in a subdued tone:

"Worth about half a million, madam; it's the proprietor."

The Magnetic Mineral Mud Baths,

Given at the Indiana Mineral Springs, Warren County, Indiana, on the Wabash Line, attract more attention to-day than any other health resort in this country.

Hundreds of people suffering from rheumatism, kidney trouble, and skin diseases, have been cured within the last year by the wonderful magnetic mud and mineral water baths. If you are suffering with any of these diseases, investigate this, nature's own remedy, at once. The sanitarium buildings, bath-house, water works, and electric light plant, costing over $150,000, just completed, open all the year round.

The Czar.

The Czar is a very hard working monarch. He is out of bed at 7 o'clock and his entire day is a busy one. He has a mania for learning even the smallest details of the operations of the Government. In disposition he is melancholy and disinclined to society. The Empress, in her fondness for dancing, has evening parties that bore her royal husband and it is related on one or two occasions he has sent the guests home betimes by touching an electric button and extinguisihng all the lights in the room.

Strong Witnesses.

Among the thousands of testimonials of cures by Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, is that of Nathan Allisons, a well-known citizen of Glen Rock, Pa., who for years had shortness of breath, sleeplessness pain in left side, shoulders, smothering spells, etc., one bottle of Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure and one box of Nerve and Liver Pills, cured him. Peter Jaquet, Salem, N. J., is another witness, who for twenty years suffered with heart disease, was pronounced incurable by physicians, death stared him in the face, could not lie down for fear of smothering to death. Immediatialy after using the New Cure he felt better and could lie down and sleep all night, and is now a well man. The New Cure is sold, also free book, by F. E. Davenport. 2

The New Great South American Kidney Cure.

The acknowledged superior cure and immediate relief for all derangements, painfulness and decay of the kidneys or bladder, Bright's disease, diabetes or any complaint that hurts or despoils either of these delicate organs. This new remedy has been thoroughly tested by learned physicians and found far superior to any medicine yet discovered for quickly relieving all weaknesses, aches, pains and distresses arising from disease of any part of the urinary passages. It is a great relief for the old, middle aged and children, male or female. It relieves at once retention and pain in passing water, and it is very effective in relieving prostatic troubles in the old, and for nightly incontinence of water in children, or others, caused by weakness of the bladder. It may be worth to many a hundred times its cost. This is a remedy of great value to ladies, because they are very liable to weakness and pain peculiar to their sex. Sold by Robbins & McCord, druggists, Auburn, Ind. tf

It is manufactured as a powder, which can be given in a glass of beer, a cup of coffee or tea, or in food, without the knowledge of the patient. It is absolutely harmless, and will effect a permanent and speedy cure, whether the patient is a moderate drinker or an alcoholic wreck. It has been given in thousands of cases, and in every instance a perfect cure has followed. It never Fails. The system once impregnated with the Specific, it becomes an utter impossibility for the liquor appetite to exist. Cures guaranteed. 48 page book of particulars free. Early Settlers and Settlement of DeKalb County.

The Address, by W. H. McIntosh, at the 15th Annual Meeting of the Pioneer Association at Auburn, To-day.

Pioneer Settlers of DeKalb County!

Responding with pleasure to your kindly invitation to address you upon this your annual meeting, I feel oppressed by a sense of inability to do justice to a noble theme—the early settlers and settlement of this county. But I can and do heartily congratulate you upon the inspiriting truth that your names will and of right ought to, be inscribed for all time upon the records of local history as leaders in the van of civilization contending with savage nature on her own ground, changing her fresh and potent energies from arboreal to cereal growth, apportioning her area as farm lands, approached by highways, according to your strength and resources and giving to the mighty task, the consecration of your lives for the benefit of coming generations. And posterity will not be unmindful of those who took such active part in the trying and transitional period known as early settlement. In years to come, the historian, incited by public desire to know of these times, will zealously glean and carefully inscribe every event connected with your pioneer experiences. Available facts once indifferently regarded, steadily enhance in interest and value as your numbers decrease and the period approaches when the grave importance of your services as settlers will be recognized more fully, and well-won honors be freely accorded.

It is no light matter to have been an early settler, self-banished to voluntary labor in the woods of DeKalb county. You cheerfully endured hardships, grew accustomed to privation, and were familiar with exacting want. Your faces were browned by exposure and your hands were indurated with constant toil.

Your axes felled the forests where now self-binders reap the wheat; your industry cleared those fields whose products support and enrich the thousands of population; and, in all that is material to the great and growing interests of the people, it was your self-denial, wise forethought and patient persistence that laid the foundations for success. The wonderful harvest, matured and maturing, came from seed of your planting, tilled by your fostering care. Your undertaking had most arduous and unpromising beginning. Many a sorrowful night and many a lonely day had passed from the building of your first rude shelter, the felling of the first great tree, the planting of your first cleared ground, until that time when you saw the patch become a field, the cabin a substantial house, and recent arrivals had shortened the distance to friendly visitation and timely aid in trouble.

None can know as does the veteran early settler, of his methods and extent of labor, the expedients of necessity, the deprivations of comfort and the pangs of poverty. Nor can the present generation enjoy as did he, in that far away day, the sense of posession, the gradual triumph and the laudable pride of a wonderful achievement.

Happy in retrospection seem those days despite all trouble, when children sought the cows—a social herd busily browsing grass and shrub, their varying bell tones marking respective ownership and some of you belated at this task, may yet recall, the sense of danger that pressed your footsteps close to the cows, while hastening their progress home.

"Pleasant it was, when woods were green,
And winds were soft and low,
To rest amid the sylvan scene,
Where shadows dark and sunlight sheen,
Alternate come and go.

It is well that there were amenities of nature and of society at this period, to uphold the spirit, for there were occasions when hope sank low, misfortune and disappointment came not singly, and all the strength of human will and trust in Divine aid were requisite to meet with fortitude and bear with stoicism the crucial trials familiar to early settlement in a forest.

Westward, ever westward from coast and foreign lands across mountain and plain has flowed the resistless wave of migration and emigration including in its masses the boldest and the best from and of the families of the east and the old world. Early in the century, it swept across western New York and Pennsylvania, moved on over Ohio into Michigan and Indiana, and finds its closing manifestations in the rush of thousands into Indian reservations thrown open to settlement.

Early in 1836, one of the many streams found its way along the St. Joe river and thence northward into the noble, unbroken forest that covered all this region. We do not forget that on this occasion, we look into the time-worn faces and meet the kindly gaze of some of those who then came, the pioneers of civilization, saw familiarly the grand scenery of nature and bore a leading part in its marvelous transmutation to the grand possibilities of the present day.

How vividly remembrance wakes to first impressions and how accurately we can fix the dates to such occurrences as seemed landmarks in our lives! But there are none that stand out, more distinctly than the occasion connected with leaving the old home in the east and the trying journey to the territory of DeKalb county.

Whom he met, where he stopped over night, how long on the way, what he brought along and how he founded his home are incidents deeply engraved in mind, recalled with satisfaction and zealously maintained against controversy.

What could have induced you to sunder home ties, brave journeys and banish yourselves in the solitude of the unbroken woods? Had you heard rumors and reports of a land rich in possibilities for agriculture and business, open to entry at nominal price and of a soil so fertile as required only to be excited by rude cultivation to yield the most ample returns? Had not some returning for families, excited by success, in securing desirable quarter sections and some with speculative ends in view, waxed eloquent in glowing depictions of the wilderness as a western paradise where deer ran in droves and wild fowl darkened the air as their immense flocks came and went? Was there not the parents' thoughtful provision for their children and willingness to sacrifice self without limit to secure for them, landed property by succession?

Whatever the causes that awakened your desires to make your homes in a new country, they were potent to decide your course and to induce preparation for a change of abode.

Alone, or in company, you bade farewell to relatives and friends; and some on foot, some on horseback and some with ox-teams and covered wagons, driving perhaps cows or other stock before you, journeyed slowly westward, regardless of time, undaunted by distance, undiscouraged by difficulties, traversing swamps, fording steams and following the trail of others, or cutting your own road, came at last within the borders of DeKalb county.

No friends, nor shelter welcomed your final arrival upon the site of the future farm; but hastily built cabins without door or windows were your houses of refuge, pending the raising of habitations of unhewn logs in which you and your children passed many years and which were endeared to memory as the arena of protracted trials and final triumph.

Somber forests in gloomy grandeur presaged the capabilities of nature and hid in their deep shade a rich soil the sun had never warmed. All about you stood a noble growth of branching beech and towering oak, the sugar maple and the fragrant walnut with many another kingly representative of valued timber; while the marshy soil was strewn with the ruins of former forests, over which in their season wild flowers wasted their freshness and reptiles crawled unharmed.

Such was the scene that met your vision; whether it inspired or depressed your feelings, it made no difference in your course of action. In this the very heart of the wilderness, you began with ax and gun, with steady arm and inflexible will to carve out that splendid civilization whose existence constitutes an imperishable monument of heroic achievement that in all time to come can never be duplicated.

Remote location from regular routes of travel and enterprise augmented your burdens and retarded your labors, for it was miles away over almost impassable traces to store and grist mill.

The land, half covered with stumps, was difficult to cultivate; produce could find no market for lack of transportation and each family was impelled to seek relief in its own inventions.

How much money did you bring west with you? Not enough to pay the low rates of taxation levied on your lands, for the legislature of 1849, on account of poverty, even at that date, exempted the residents of DeKalb, Steuben, Noble and LaGrange from payment of state and county taxes on all agricultural improvements of less value than $500; and then, not a few became hopelessly delinquent and lost their holdings.

In barter for groceries at Auburn, Spencerville and Ft. Wayne, your produce brought low rates since storekeepers sought in advance to compensate themselves for their search of a market for their wheat and corn, your pork and pelts of game. Years passed away while unabated toil subdued the land and gradually fitted it for the abode of increasing numbers. During the first decade—the present limit of claim to enrollment in your organization—much of the forest was swept away; many neat and comfortable buildings were erected; fields were fenced; orchards, planted; roads made and societies organized. Never did a people labor more diligently or accomplish greater results under like circumstances.

Your work was vital to the development of this country and indispensable to the general progress of humanity. It has been ably done and richly entitles you to restful ease and popular regard. Unostentatious in public, silent under unconscious influence of surroundings, your ranks were filled with men and women cultured and refined, ardent and courageous, of high standing in their old homes, and the dependence for progressive measures, of those who desired a high moral and intellectual standard in the new country.

Denied advantages common to long existing communities, the early settlers had clear and definite ideas of what was most essential and practical, and no labor was begrudged that looked to the material welfare of the widely-scattered community.

Character and christian principles were evidenced in the speedy construction of school house and meeting house, that children should not want for instruction, nor the Sabbath fail of remembrance and observance. Rough and uncomfortable were those first buildings but they were on an equality with your homes. Can you recall the names of pioneer preachers so warmly welcomed to your houses, so earnest in their discourses, so familiar themselves with the routine and fatigue of labor? Perhaps some of you may have known Benjamin Alton, the first preacher in DeKalb county. Did he not clear his own land, chopping week days, preaching Sundays and limited in means, appear before his congregation in rough tow pants, coatless, a shoe on one foot, a boot on the other? And, was not his example of industry emulated and his demise lamented as that of a good and worthy man?

All honor to the early minister and the schoolmaster! In the formation of society and the best interests of good government, they were devoted to the care and culture of mind and soul, their teachings were the pledge of good behavior, the safe-guard of every christian home.

There are lost arts. Modern sculptors seek their inspiration among the ruins of Greece and Rome, and the glassware of the ancient Venitian has no present equal There are lost customs consequent to changed conditions of society. In the early day, every house was open to the newcomer; hospitality was a sacred rite; the latch string hung outside in token of welcome, shelter and food, and neighbors, though few and far between, met often for mutual and public welfare

Daily taught the lesson of self-defense, you yet relied upon residents of the vicinity in raising buildings, logging lands, for help in trouble and comfort in society. Rarely did request meet refusal and the pleasure incident to your annual meetings, is largely an outgrowth of your cheerful readiness to help each other in the olden times of need.

You were prompt in resolve and resolute in execution. When provisions gave out, repairs were needed, or your presence required away from home, the rifle was taken from the hooks of antlers, loaded with care to be in readiness for game, and the journey was made on foot. The pioneers of DeKalb county, were pedestrians and walked long distances with no thought of its being a hardship.

And while the bread-winner was away, the faithful helpmeet was not idle. Necessity and economy induced the early settlers to clothe themselves in garments made in their own families. Mother and daughter found music in the buzz of the spinning wheel and in the double shake of the loom. Housekeeping was simple and practical. A fire in the fireplace lasted a day with little attention; furniture and dishes were few and old-fashioned, and some of you may have supplemented house work by helping your men to gather brush and to plant the first patch of turnips or corn, pumpkins and potatoes.

The monotony of labor was varied by marriage ceremonies and funeral rites. Happiness was augmented by sharing it and grief was allayed by knowledge of sympathy. Sickness was dreaded and death brought a sense of desolation.

When scattered clearings began to admit the sunlight, stagnant pools dammed by obstructed courses and tamarack swamps overhung by clouds of mosquitoes, filled the atmosphere with pestilential exhalations from masses of decaying vegetation that made the balmy air of the summer sunset as deadly as it was grateful

Alone in the log house, the sufferer from malaria at intervals shook with the deadly ague chill and burned with the wasting fever The faint cry of sick children blended with the sad lullaby of the over-taxed mother, and not infrequently whole families like that of Asher Coburn were down together for months at a time.

And there was perfect health and pure enjoyment. Life in the open air, vigorous appetite, sound digestion and refreshing sleep, gave buoyant spirits, sparkling eyes and elastic tread. Merrily the settler swung the ax; cheerily rang the call to midday or eventide meal, and thankfully the comforts of the table were keenly enjoyed.

Years passed away; population increased; clearings enlarged; stumps were removed; houses of framed timbers were built; new furniture relegated the old to the garret, and machinery took the place of the laborious hand work of the early day.

You have seen the hoe and the shovel plow, the scythe, the cradle and the hand rake, give way to the two-horse cultivator and the twine-binder even as you had seen savagery yield to civilization. How changed the scenery from that of the early day! The landscape is rich with colors of vegetation; woodlands and cultivated fields blend harmoniously; the bland air is redolent of health, while organized societies, convenient school and church, mill, store and postoffice, not always good roads, and many railroads, bring every convenience to hand to make us all a prosperous and a happy rural people.

To you is owed a great debt that posterity can never repay. To them, the annals of early settlement are vaguely known The hardships and privations of those times, and, even, names of the pioneers have largely lost their distinctness and are surely passing away beyond recovery.

What is remembered to-day of Peter Fair, William Miller, John Blair and John Platter? Of Solomon Delong, Colin Robinson, Ira Allen and John N. Miller? What of Isaac T. Aldrich, John Houlton, Joseph Miller, the Husslemans and the Storys? What of Wesley Park, the founder of Auburn, and of scores of others, whose coming hither but a semi-century ago, broke the solitude and changed the features of the country, from a wilderness to the abode of wealth, luxury and refinement.

It is an instructive and an impressive lesson to note the swift oblivion already settled upon their memories and the forgetfulness discovered in chance allusions to their names

Silently they have passed and are passing from our midst, those victors in the protracted contest with the forces of nature Familiar faces present at the meeting of a year ago, are sought in vain. Voices that then spoke in your hearing are hushed forever. They have gone to return no more. The Harvester has gathered them in, as good wheat well ripened, into His great granary, and you, the few who remain, venerable in whitened locks, wrinkled brow and bowed form, are as the gleanings, even like some fruit that clings to the branches when the time of the vintage is past.

We who have come up later, but faintly realize that in you we see the veteran survivors of the first white occupation of this county,—the actors in strange scenes, the witnesses of many weird-like mutations.

It is not permitted to us of a later generation, to be sensible of your feelings on occasions like this. You justly cherish pride and satisfaction in having materially assisted in laying the corner stone to this rich and durable fabric of our mighty commonwealth.

Every sense of justice demands recognition of your services as suggested in the reminiscences of many an old settler Henry Feaglor but voiced your feelings in his expression: "I helped to clear the court house grounds at the county seat."

You have met to-day, in "this thriving and beautiful town, the creation of your necessities, the ambitious and prosperous capital of your county, to take by the hand and look into the faces of once neighbors, now rarely met—coadjutors in a forever-completed work

Fond recollection brings to mind the visits made to distant points by forest foot-paths, unconscious of fatigue and certain of welcome to condole in misfortune or rejoice at prosperity.

Your journeys now are few in number and short in distance, and your reveries when the evening shadows fall, are of those hard blows needed to bring the changes we enjoy and of the heart and brain work cost of privileges confirmed to your posterity.

Each in his seperate sphere has nobly done and in behalf of those advantaged by your self-denying lives, I give you frank assurance of their genuine appreciation of the heritage bequeathed them. No service of ours is adequate to requite the work you have done for us, or reward the cares and burdens which have been the price of this inheritance. We can only assure you that what we have received shall be held in grateful memory of your names, your labors and your virtues.

If in our cultivation of moral qualities, we may give you some pledge of our proper use of what you devise; if, as the wrinkles upon your brows grow deeper and your steps are less elastic, and you shrink from life's burdens, we may lighten your cares and gladden the evening of your earthly history, we shall count it both a duty and a pleasure.

And if the Father of Mercies shall deign to hear our prayers, then shall your sun decline toward its setting, its closing beams shall be its richest and most effulgent, and it shall set to rise to a higher orbit in that pure world in which God's presence is central light and eternal glory.

Down the vista of life flows a river. You have long been voyagers, sailing down its current, you have shot its rapids, shunned its hidden rocks and are floating slowly now, and serenely out into the great, cloud-hidden sea of the unknown That river is called Time, that sea is Eternity.

"Oh! a wonderful stream is the river of time,
As it runs through the realm of tears,
With faultless rythm and musical rhyme,
With boundless sweep and range sublime,
As it blends with the ocean of years.

There's a magical isle in the river of time,
Where the softest of airs are playing;
There's a cloudless sky and a tropical clime,
And a song as sweet as a vesper chime,
And the Junes with the roses are staying.

And the name of the Isle is the Long Ago,
And we bury our treasures there;
There are brows of beauty and bosoms of snow
There are heaps of dust, but we lov'd them so!
There are trinkets and tresses of hair.

There are fragments of song that nobody sings
And a part of an infant's prayer;
There's a lute unswept and a harp without strings,
There are broken vows and pieces of rings,
And the garments that she used to wear.

There are hands that are waved, when the fairy shore
By the mirage is lifted in air;
And we sometimes hear, through the turbulent roar,
Sweet voices we heard in the days gone before
When the wind down the river is fair."

Oh! remembered for aye, be the blessed Isle,
All the days of our life till night—
When the evening comes with its beautiful smile,
And our eyes are closing to slumber the while
May that "Greenwood" of soul be in sight.

Mr. Norman Lichty, Des Moines, Ia.

Dear Sir;—A sample of Krause's headache capsules was left in my husband's office a few days since, and as I am subject to headaches—neuralgic, nervous, and in fact every other kind—he thoughtfully brought the sample box home. The very next day I had a chance to try them and one capsule relieved me in less than half an hour my head felt as well as ever, with no bad feeling as the after result I have had these terrible headaches for twenty years, and have tried every remedy I ever heard of, but nothing I have ever taken has cured or relieved me as quickly as Krause's Headache Capsules. MRS. N. A. SKINNER.

Have I any objections to your printing a portion of my letter? No! If my testimony will induce any one who suffers with headache to buy your capsules I will be glad. MRS. N. A. SKINNER.

Physicians Outdone.

My wife has been suffering with female trouble of the severest kind for over three years. I have paid twenty-five dollars during the last three months, and she had no relief. She had doctored continually with the best of physicians. I bought three bottles, each of Dullam's Great German Female Uterine Tonic and Dullam's Great German blood, liver, stomach and kidney cure, and can say to day that she is entirely cured.

Don't get Imposed Upon.

Is a good motto to follow in buying a medicine as well as in everything else. By the universal satisfaction it has given and by the many remarkable cures it has accomplished, Dullam's Great German blood, liver, stomach and kidney cure has proven itself unequaled for building up and cleansing your system and for all diseases arising from impure blood. Do not experiment with an unheard of or untried article which you are told is as good, but be sure to get Dullam's. All druggists keep it. $1 a bottle. For sale by Casebeer & Matheny.

Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."
DR. G. C. OSGOOD, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."
DR. J. F. KINCHELOE, Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."
H. A. ARCHER, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

AUBURN AND VICINITY.

A quiet, slow-moving, country town was Auburn in 1863. Had a census been taken, it would have disclosed a diminished population consequent to enlistments in the service and migrations to Waterloo, which town from the date of its origin had rapidly become the metropolis of the county through the activity of its business men backed by the market created through the construction and profitable operation of the Air Line railroad.

Jarvis, that coming town eastward was attracting attention with its market. Newville and Spencerville were in their zenith while Auburn was decidedly dull. Those endeavoring to dispose of their property were willing the take most any price. Though desirous of trying their fortunes elsewhere, they could not sell.

In the course of time, it appears that the fortunate ones were those who willing or unwilling held on, although there was little in prospect to inspire cheerfulness.

As the years wore away the certainty of a permanent and valuable public improvement instilled a little life into the drowsy town and created a preceptible ripple of prosperity.

Yet if the material interests of Auburn were to be estimated by the condition of its one poor little newspaper, the conclusion is inevitable that the town had fallen upon hard times. High price of paper and other material, limited patronage and subscribers in arrears combined to render the very existence of the New Era uncertain.

In vain Mr. Loveland sought relief from his wearisome and profitless task by attempted disposal of his paper by rent or sale. In vain, he stated that, "Any industrious, practical printer of ordinary business tact could procure a good living from its earnings." His urgency to sell out was proof positive to the contrary.

On the other hand, T. Y. Dickinson publisher and proprietor of the Waterloo City Press having run the paper for two years reduced in size, in November greatly enlarged the sheet and made marked improvements, indicative of village growth and business prosperity.

At this time Messrs Kimsey and Bromagem were both volunteers in the army of the Cumberland. The gallant 44th Indiana after two years of active service, was detailed as provost guard at Chattanooga, Tenn.

There one November day, W. T. Kimsey, of this regiment, was surprised by a call from his brother typo, James M. Bromagem, who true to the spirit of his profession was then editing a spicy and staunch war journal christened "The Army Bulletin," at Winchester, Tenn., and who later continued its publication at Chattanooga.

No one better than the soldier could have appreciated the benefit of such a paper in the camps and it is to his credit that it gave good satisfaction wherever it circulated in the army.

During this year, James I. Best and and Charles A. O. McClellan, rising young men became associated as law partners with office at Waterloo City. This firm became conspicuous for legal acumen, their clientage was large, their success in proportion, and their subsequent history reveals a prestige ably maintained.

Mr. McClellan had together with E. B. Gerber engaged in the enterprise of compiling and publishing a wall map of the lands and lots in DeKalb county.

This needed work was faithfully and accurately done as can be seen by any one who cares to inspect a map still hanging in place in the county treasurer's office in the court house. It was for years in use for frequent reference and was authority on roads, farm lands and land owners.

A startling but no doubt reliable statement was made by Mr. McClellan, in this connection that: "There are 55,000 acres of land in this county to which there is an imperfect title." Carelessness and incompetence of conveyancer and negligence in recording deeds has clouded the title to many a farm and town lot which is unpleasantly learned only when a school or insurance mortgage is to be given or sale perfected.

At the municipal election at Auburn held in May but eighty-eight votes were cast. Among once familiar names are those of Henry Altenberg, Alexander Cannon, John Whittington and Abraham Zern. Mr. Altenberg was an enthusiastic Unionist, served in the 19th Ind., was a town official in various capacities after the war, performed the duties of postal agent with credit, went west for a time, but suffering from a cancer, returned to Auburn for treatment which proved ineffectual and he died. His social qualities endeared him to many and his funeral at the M. E. church conducted by the I. O. O. F., of which he was a member, was largely attended.

Mr. Cannon a man advanced in years, related by marriage to the Gloyd's of Allen county was employed by Henry Willis during his term as sheriff, as jailor, and died years ago.

Mr. Whittington resided in the house now owned by A. P. Green on lot 122, O. P. to which it was moved by Dr. William S. Allen, who built upon its former site the fine commodious brick residence on South Main street since made his home. Mr. Whittington sold, removed and died, leaving a widow and a son. Mrs. Whittington during a comparitively recent visit to Auburn expressed the heartfelt sentiment of many who from time to time have left our town, in her deep regret that she had ever moved from the place.

Mr. Zern occupied a lot on Jackson street, now covered by an extension of the Kiblinger Carriage Works, ran a shoe shop in a building once well known as an old jail, sold out and removed to St. Joe where he still lives, a quiet worthy man.

Now Try This.

It will cost you nothing and will surely do you good, if you have a cough, cold, or any trouble with throat, chest or lungs. Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds, is guaranteed to give relief, or money will be paid back. Sufferers from La Grippe found it just the thing and under its use had a speedy and perfect recovery. Try a sample bottle at our expense and learn for yourself just how good a thing it is. Trial bottle free at Robbins & McCord's drug store. Large size 50c and $1.00. 3

Some people were fooled by the promise in the '88 republican platform of one cent letter postage, but the same promise will fool nobody a second time.

Specimen Cases.

S. H. Clifford, New Cassel, Wis., was troubled with neuralgia and rheumatism, his stomach was disordered, his liver was affected to an alarming degree, appetite fell away, and he was terribly reduced in flesh and strength. Three bottles of Electric Bitters cured him.

Edward Shephard, Harrisburg, Ill., had a running sore on his leg of eight years' standing. Used three bottles of Electric Bitters and seven boxes of Bucklen's Arnica Salve, and his leg is sound and well. John Speaker, Catawba, O., had five large fever sores on his leg, doctors said he was incurable. One bottle Electric Bitters and one box Bucklen's Arnica Salve cured him entirely, Sold by Robbins & McCord 3

Ex-Boss Clarkson will now probably return to the obscurity from which ex-boss Quay dragged him a few years ago.

A City Marshal While Attempting to Make an Arrest Is Killed—Stung to Death by Bees—Murder at Rome City, Ind.—Funeral of Emmons Blaine.

SAD SIDE OF THE CONVENTION.

Chicago special: There were two incidents in connection with the Democratic National Convention Tuesday—both sad in the extreme—that will serve to mark this gathering as a decided exception to the general run. One was the adoption by the convention with a fervor that showed the absolute sincerity of the action, a resolution expressing sympathy with Hon. James G. Blaine, the great Republican leader, in the family afflictions that have been visited upon him in the past three years, and particularly in the sudden death in this city of his son, Emmons Blaine, just after his return from Minneapolis where he went in hopes of seeing his father named by the Republican Convention.

The other was a quiet procession of a Democratic club, wearing tall white hats so popular with these organizations, marching to a dirge and over much the same line of march as taken by the club organizations in their campaign demonstrations during the past few days, and acting as a guard of honor to a comrade who met with a sad and sudden death about 4 o'clock Tuesday morning, as his remains were being moved from the hotel to a train for conveyance to the home he left but a few days ago in the full pride and vigor of a ripened manhood.

The man thus being borne away from the convention was Fred E. Blaicher, a member of the Joel Parker Democratic Club of Newark, N. J., who met his death by falling from a window in the Tremont House, where he seated himself to get cool, and dropping asleep fell to the street, fifty feet below, being killed instantly. Mr. Blaicher was quite a wealthy and prominent citizen of Newark, about forty years of age, and leaves a wife and two children.

Gone Wrong.

Buffalo Special: E. S. Dann, secretary and cashier of the National Savings bank, of Buffalo, since its organization in 1861, is in the custody of officers at the residence of his mother in this city. His accounts were recently examined in the usual way by a state bank examiner and found to be short at least $32,000, and how much more remains for further developments to determine. It is said that Dann's confession is in the hands of the bank officers. Dann is a prominent church member and has always enjoyed an enviable reputation in Buffalo's business and commercial circles. His trouble has caused a great sensation. He is the father of Jesse Dann, the famous Yale base ball player.

City Marshal James Doran of Kentland, Ind., in attempting to arrest Jack Plummer of the same place was shot and instantly killed by the latter. The Town Board has issued an ordinance regarding the trimming of shade trees. Plummer refused to comply with the same, and getting his gun kept guard to prevent its being done by the town officials. There were five shots exchanged, one of which took effect in Plummer's leg, making a flesh wound. Plummer has been arrested and placed in jail. Doran leaves a widow and eight children.

Depew Denies It.

Dr. Chauncey M. Depew was shown the dispatch from Paris saying that Minister Lincoln would be appointed Secretary of State to succeed Mr. Blaine, and Dr. Depew would take Mr. Lincoln's place. "You can say," said Mr. Depew to the United Press reporter, "that there is not any truth in either report." Mr. Depew also stated that the name of Mr. Harrison's Secretary of State would not be known until it was sent to Congress.

Stung to Death by Bees.

Mrs. Joseph Kelm, living just west of Wabash, Ind., undertook to hive a swarm of bees and the insects became infuriated and stung her in hundreds of places. She died within a few hours after suffering intense agony. She was about 45 years old and very widely known and highly respected.

Burned 7,000 Acres.

Merced (Cal.) special: The first big grain fire of the season broke out on P. McNamara's farm near town. It moved straight east and burned over all the country until it was stopped by Mariposa creek. Seven thousand acres of fine grain were left a blackened waste. The loss will reach $100,000.

Murder at Rome City.

A man named Platt was brutally murdered at Rome City, Ind., by being struck over the head with a beer bottle. The guilty parties are suspected, as, it is thought, it was the outcome of a feud that arose last fall at one of the saloons of Rome City. Arrests will follow.

To Be Married.

The engagement is announced of Mr. Edwin Gould, one of Jay Gould's sons, to Miss Sarah Cantine Shrady, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Shrady of New York City.

Funeral of Emmons Blaine.

Disastrous Wreck.

Philadelphia special: A wreck occurred on the North Penn railroad which resulted in the death of two men and the injury of several others. The Doylestown express passes Fort Washington station at the rate of a mile a minute, the fastest time made at any point along the road. The Jenkintown shifter was running ahead of the passenger train, and in attempting to switch on to the down track was caught by the engine of the express. This engine was thrown from the track against an embankment. Both engines were completely wrecked. The engineer of the express train was killed outright. Several of the passengers in the smoking car were injured, but not dangerously. This car was turned upon its side and badly wrecked.

THE DRILL ENCAMPMENT.

Prizes Awarded the Crack Companies.

National Infantry Drill—First prize, $5,000, Washington Fencibles; second prize, $2,000, Seely Rifles, Galveston; third, $1,000, McCarty Light Guards, Little Rock.

AFRAID OF THE MAFIA.

New Orleans special: The police are considerably excited over the attempt made by four Italians to assassinate one of their countrymen. What makes the matter one of importance is the fact that the would-be assassins forced their way into the victim's house and tried to carry out their designs in the presence of the man's family. The victim in the case is Joseph Corran, a prominent fish merchant of 87 Hospital street. He was formerly in partnership with Vincenzo Carrigtoni, Gilormo Curriere and F. Brummo, also fish merchants, but became dissatisfied and withdrew and started in business on his own account. This aroused his former partners' ire. The other night they forced an entrance into Corran's house, armed with stillettos and revolvers, but before they could accomplish their deadly work a member of Corran's family summoned the police and the men fled. The police are determined to hunt them down, for they fear that, if any laxity be shown them, it will encourage other Italians and in the course of time the mafia would once more have a foothold in this city.

A CLOUD BURST

Kills Three Persons at Scranton, Pa.—Hurricane in Iowa.

A special from Scranton, Pa., dated the 19th inst., says: A cloud burst inundated the streets. The flats on the South Side are covered and the water has risen to the second stories of hundreds of houses. Fears are felt for the safety of Duning's dam. Lightning, which was incessant for five hours, struck six houses within the city limits, killing three persons and stunning several more. The troll wires are down all over the city and travel by street cars has been suspended. There are reports of loss of life in the flats in the southern part of the city. Reports of widespread damage in Lackawanna and Luzerne counties are coming in. Washouts have occurred on the Delaware and Hudson Railway tracks.

An Unfaithful Wife and Her Lover Killed.

At Wilkesbarre, Pa., George Fisher, returning home shortly after 1 o'clock the other morning, surprised his pretty wife in a compromising position with John Washington. He promptly shot Washington through the head, killing him instantly. Mrs. Fisher begged for mercy, but Fisher rushed into the kitchen, seized an axe, and, as his wife fell on her knees still pleading forgiveness, he raised the weapon and dealt her a terrible blow, knocking her unconscious. Fisher attempted to flee, but the neighbors, who had been attracted by the woman's screams and the pistol shot, captured him, and he is how in jail. It is thought Mrs. Fisher will die.

A Mob Tries to Get at Murderers.

Dallas (Texas) special: Police officer W. H. Riddle was killed here by P. F. Miller, whom he attempted to arrest for living with a colored woman. In the evening a mob gathered, its purpose being the lynching of Henry Miller, murderer of Officer Brewer; O. C. Boulton, murderer of A. Tiche; Charles Henry, who killed one woman in Denver and another in Dallas, and Miller, the slayer of officer Riddle. The sheriff resisted them until about midnight, when a heavy rain came up and so thoroughly drenched them that ther dispersed.

Capsize of a Yacht.

Detroit special: The yacht Caprice, with twenty-seven young people on board, was capsized near Peache Island, several miles above this city, near the Canadian shore. All of the party were thrown into the water and Carrie Bieber, aged 19, and Minnie Mogk, aged 17, were drowned. The yacht Duke, in going to their assistance, attempted to turn and Henry Pathow, Jr., was knocked overboard by a boom and also drowned. All of the bodies have been recovered. Of the party on the Caprice fifteen were women.

Tramp Burglar Threatened with Lynching.

A tramp, who refuses to give any name but "Buck," was arrested at Rockford, Ohio, for burglary. He had broken into several houses and managed to get several dollars. In the house of J. F. Barkest he secured some money and $700 in notes. When arrested he had made away with them, and would not divulge their whereabouts. The citizens threatened to lynch him, and had the rope, when he told where they were. They were found in an out-house all torn to pieces.

The Wall Falls.

One of the walls of the old Gerlach building at Cleveland, Ohio, which is being torn down to make room for the Detroit and Cleveland Steamship Company's docks, blew down upon the roof of Kingsburry's fish house, which was badly ruined. Mrs. Mattie Grady, Charles Packer and Charles Ruhl, who were in the fish house at the time of the accident, were so seriously injured that one or two of them may not recover.

Fighting in Darkest Africa.

It is reported that a German force under Baron Von Bulow numbering 150 Soudaneese and five Europeans with one gun, met a severe defeat near Kilimangero, Africa, in the Moshi territory, on the 10th instant. One European and 100 Soudaneese were slain, the gun was captured and Baron Von Bulow and another European wounded. The rest retreated to Fort Maring which was afterwards evacuated.

A Hoosier Widow's Big Luck.

Mrs. John Taylor an Anderson, Ind. widow, has fallen heir to a fortune of $2,000,000 by the death of John Goodman, a bachelor brother residing in California. Goodman made his wealth mining. A few days ago he sustained a fall and the injuries received resulted fatally in a short time. After his death a will was found leaving all his wealth to his sister, Mrs. Taylor.

Four Babies at a Birth.

Mrs. Ella Dayson, wife of Thomas Dayson, a lumberman of the Ramapo Valles, at Fords Mills, N. Y., gave birth to quadruplets—three girls and a boy. Their aggregate weight is twenty-two pounds and seven ounces. The mother and four children are doing nicely. The parents have been married eight years and have four other children, all born singly.

Three Men Killed.

Three men were killed and three severely injured by the explosion of a blast at Lyle's furnace, Kansas City. The charge had been put in and, unable to set it off, the men were trying to drill it out. The men are: George Ordway, Roy Neal and Jack O'Brien. Injured are: James Thomas, colored, fatally; Charles Foster and John Dale, seriously.

The President Informed of His Nomination.

The committee to notify President Harrison of his nomination by the Minneapolis Convention waited upon the President Monday. Chairman McKinley in a brief address, conveyed the official information to the President and highly complimented him in the course of his remarks. The President made a brief reply.

Harvesting Wheat in Kansas.

The wheat harvest is in full blast in Southern Kansas. The quality of the grain is excellent, the heads being long and well filled and the berry plump and heavy. In the extreme western counties the crop is reported as magnificent. The reports from nearly all points indicate a larger yield than last year's. Corn is looking well.

Death of an Old Hero.

Commander Edward E. Stone, U. S. N., retired, died at his residence in Washington, aged 70 years. He served in the Mexican war and also the rebellion, being with Farragut at New Orleans. He commanded the Monitor, which brought Booth's body to Washington after being shot in Garrett's barn.

Women's Crusade.

Springfield (Ohio) special: The famous woman's crusade against saloons, which originated here in 1874 under Mother Stewart, is to be revived. The movement commences with prayer-meetings every afternoon. Some of the most prominent ladies in the city are actively participating, and saloon men are uneasy.

Held Up the Stage.

Helena (Mont.) special: The stage between Junction, in Crow reservation, and Music Shell, Yellowstone County was held up. It is not known what was taken. The robbery was probably the work of the same gang that stopped the Great Falls-Billings' stage June 3. Officers are in pursuit.

Fed His Sister with Morphine Tablets.

The 4-year-old son of A. L. Frisbie of Lima, Ohio, was playing about the house and found some morphine tablets, which he fed to his 4-months-old sister Helen for candy. She fell into a deep sleep, from which she could not be aroused, and which caused her death.

Fell Eight Stories.

Frederick Eckstein, treasurer of the Cincinnati White Lead Company, fell through an elevator shaft of the new Miami Building, Cincinnati, eight stories, to the cellar, and was fatally injured. He had just completed the building in which he met his death. He was a very prominent citizen.

A Deed of Heroism.

Daniel Peters, an aged and infirm resident of Tiffin, Ohio, was fatally injured by a runaway horse. The old man stood in the street and attempted to stop the horse to save the life of a small boy who was driving, and was run over and injured so severely that he cannot recover.

Indiana Glass Works Burned.

The Over Glass Works and the Hemingway Glass Works, two very large manufactories at Muncie, Ind., were burned and totally ruined. The loss on both works is $250,000 and is covered by insurance to the extent of $100,000.

Bloody Riot at a Negro Picnic.

A riot occurred at a negro picnic, near the National Cemetery, six miles from Memphis, Tenn., in which three men were shot or stabbed to death, and over a dozen seriously injured.

Sorrow Invades the Blaine Home.

Emmons Blaine, son of ex-Secretary Blaine, died suddenly at his residence in Chicago. Blood poisoning, the result of inflammation of the bowels, was the cause.

Fatal Disease Among Ohio Sheep.

A peculiar disease afflicting sheep is ravaging many of the flocks in Belmont, Guernsey, Monroe and Noble counties, Ohio. The throat swells, and the sheep die.

Destroyed by Fire.

The whole business portion of Rocheport, Mo., was burned. Sixteen Buildings were destroyed. Loss $75,000.

CHICAGO CONVENTION.

THOUSANDS OF DEMOCRATS PRESENT.

OWENS IN THE CHAIR.

HARMONY AND ENTHUSIASM PREVAIL.

The Commodious Wigwam Packed to Its Fullest Capacity—Frightened by Thunder—Chairman Brice Calls the Gathering to Order—Temporary Officers.

First Day's Proceedings.

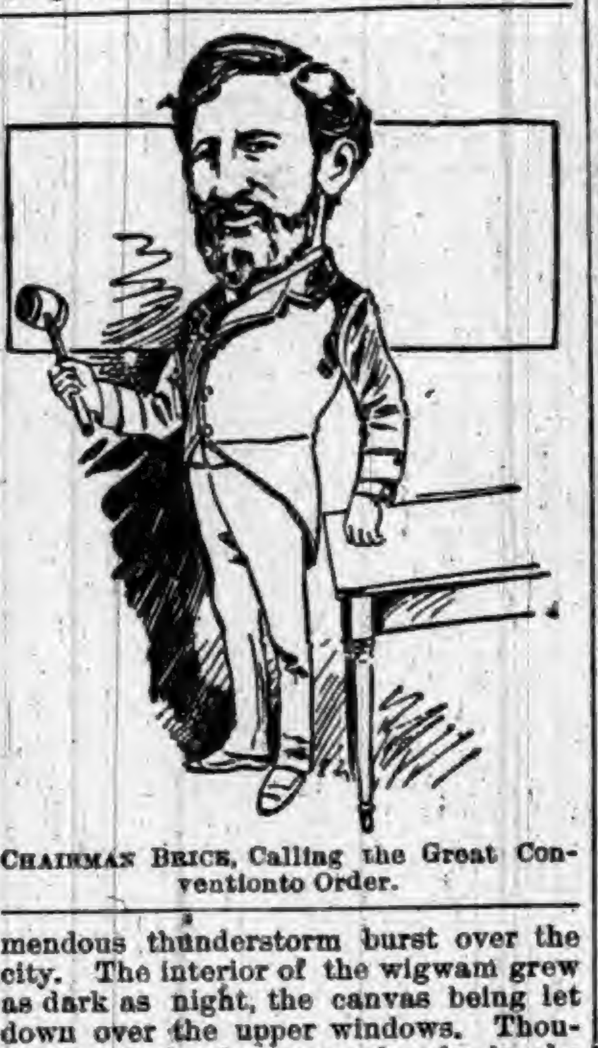
The National Democratic Convention was called to order at 12:45 Tuesday afternoon in the wigwam on the Lake Front by Chairman Brice of the National Committee.

Just after noon, before many of the delegates had arrived in the hall, a tremendous thunderstorm burst over the city. The interior of the wigwam grew as dark as night, the canvas being let down over the upper windows. Thousands of people were already in the spectators' seats, and as the lightning flashes lit up the gloom of the hall and the building shook in a heavy wind they became frightened and howled for lights. Then came a mighty fall of rain that drowned the voices of the people. The band began to play a lively air and the music speedily allayed the nervousness of the audience.



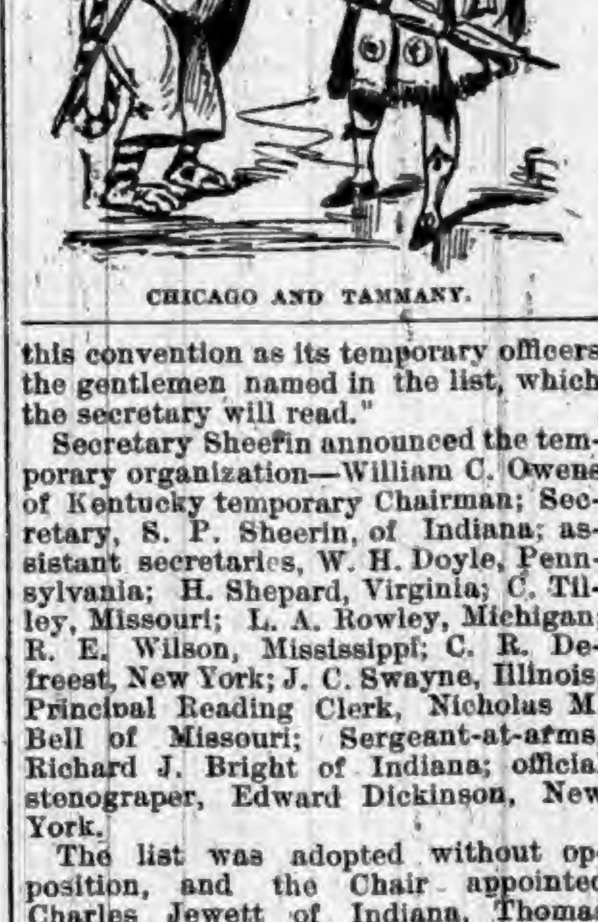
CHAIRMAN BRICE, Calling the Great Conventionto Order.

Chairman Brice Enters.

Chairman Brice and a bright ray of sunshine entered the wigwam together and both were greeted with hearty cheers.

As Mr. Brice rose to request silence, he faced a magnificent scene. Twenty thousand people filled the immense building, gay with its fluttering bunting, the bright colors of ladies' dresses, and the bright badges of the delegates and their accompaniment of marching clubs. Before him sat the representative men of a great party, the men who lead its battles, rejoice in its victories and mourn its defeats. There they spread in front of him, veritably a sea of faces which for the moment was bewildering in its vastness. Practiced speaker as he is, and used as he is to facing great meetings, Mr. Brice for a second or two showed that he is not insensible to the emotions of a supreme moment, and was visibly moved as he advanced to the front of the platform, after demanding silence, to present Rev. John Rouse, who offered prayer. At the close of his invocation the reverend gentleman recited the Lord's prayer, in which he was audibly joined in several parts of the great convention hall.

When prayer was concluded Chairman Brice said: "Gentlemen of the convention, by direction of the National Committee the Chair presents to this convention as its temporary officers the gentlemen named in the list, which the secretary will read."



CHICAGO AND TAMMANY.

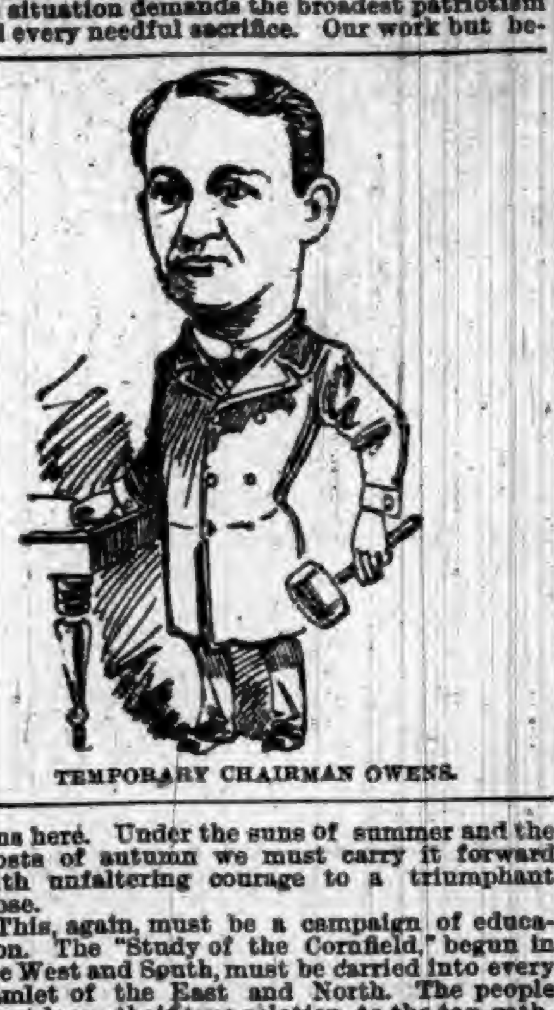
Secretary Sheefin announced the temporary organization—William C. Owens of Kentucky temporary Chairman; Secretary, S. P. Sheerin, of Indiana; assistant secretaries, W. H. Doyle, Pennsylvania; H. Shepard, Virginia; C. Tilley, Missouri; L. A. Rowley, Michigan; R. E. Wilson, Mississippi; C. R. Defreest, New York; J. C. Swayne, Illinois; Principal Reading Clerk, Nicholas M. Bell of Missouri; Sergeant-at-arms, Richard J. Bright of Indiana; official stenograper, Edward Dickinson, New York.

The list was adopted without opposition, and the Chair appointed Charles Jewett of Indiana, Thomas Wilson of Minnesota, and Adlai E. Stevenson of Illinois to attend Mr. Owens to the speaker's chair. These gentlemen assembled in front of the platform and then proceeded down one of the side aisles to the place where the Kentucky delegation sat. Mr. Owens arose and walked up the aisle with the committee. When they appeared on the platform the convention applauded, and the applause was renewed when Chairman Brice announced that he had the "honor and pleasure" of presenting to the convention its temporary Chairman. Mr. Brice retired, leaving the space in front of the Chairman's desk to Mr. Owens.

After bowing to the applause with which he was greeted, Mr. Owens, in a good voice, addressed the convention.

Chairman Owens' Speech.

GENTLEMEN OF THE CONVENTION: Two great dangers menace the Democratic party. One is external, the other internal. The first is the organized machinery of organized capital, supported by the whole power of the government. The second is a tendency among Democrats to make issues among themselves. Two needs therefore stand before us indispensable to success: Unity and harmony. Of the one this chair and gavel stand representative; it remains for you to supply the other. In this spirit I greet you, fellow Democrats, as the advance guard of a grand army, sent forward to blaze a pathway to victory. How momentous is your responsibility I need not tell you. If your work be done in wisdom the millions toiling in mine and shop and field will rise and call you blessed. The roll call of the republic attests that its heart and its conscience are with us in our war with the representatives of greed. The best thought of our party is a platform that challenges the approbation and invites the support of the people. We can succeed—we must do more; we must deserve success; above the wreck, if need be, of selfish combinations, we must rear a temple to the plain people, and build a shrine so broad that there every lover of his kind may kneel. The burden must be lifted from the back of labor, and to that end it has a right to demand that whoever bears our banner must lift it above the smoke of conflict and the din of faction that every Democrat of the Union may follow its lead in exultant and irresistible combat. Let us not mistake. The gravity of the situation demands the broadest patriotism and every needful sacrifice. Our work but begins here. Under the suns of summer and the frosts of autumn we must carry it forward with unfaltering courage to a triumphant close.

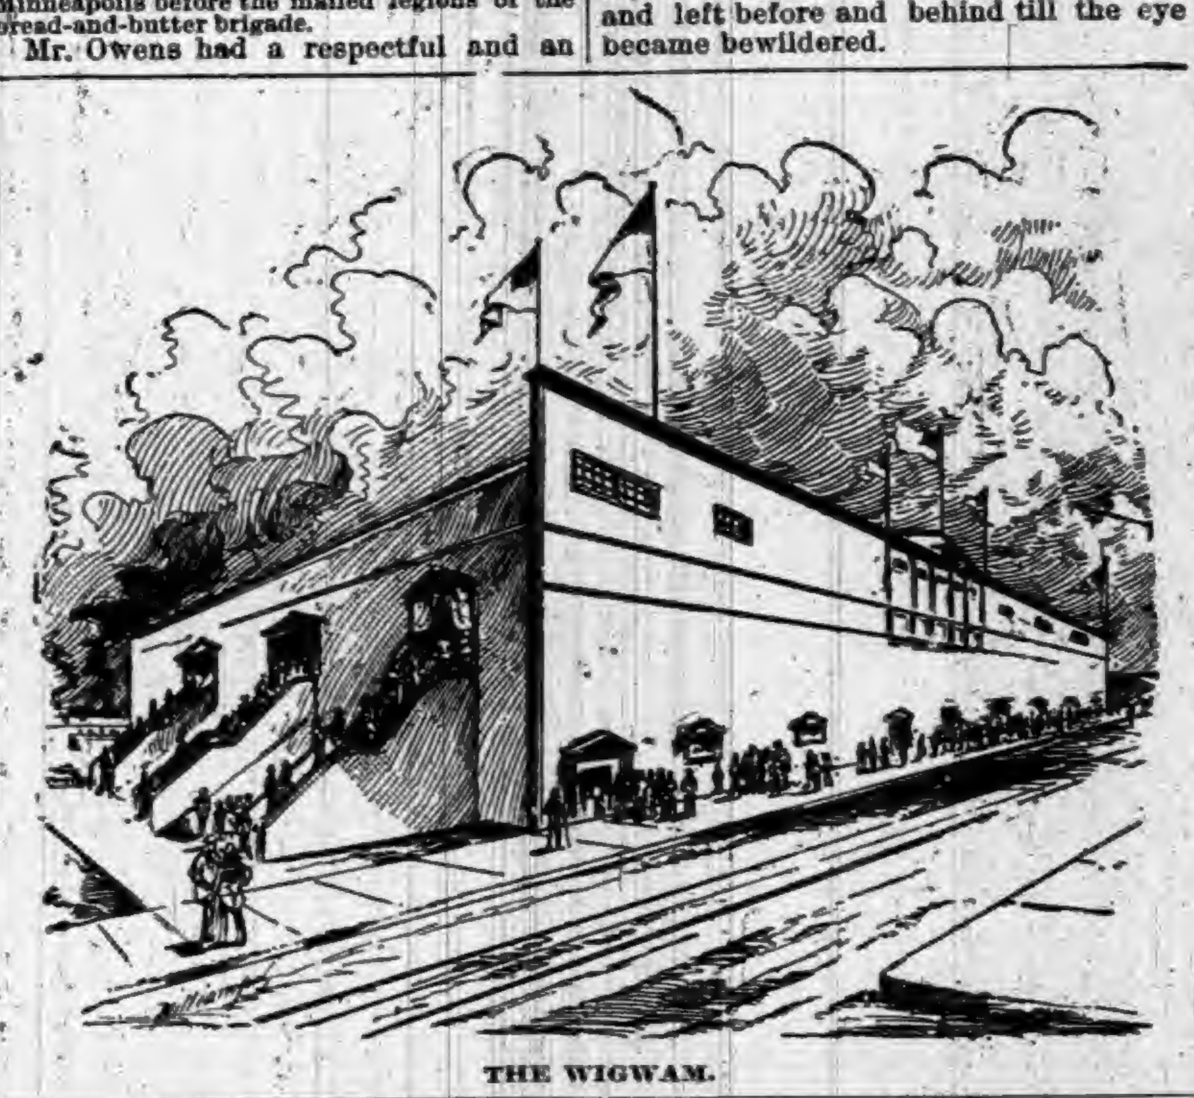


TEMPORARY CHAIRMAN OWENS.

This, again, must be a campaign of education. The "Study of the Cornfield," begun in the West and South, must be carried into every hamlet of the East and North. The people must learn their true relation to the tax-gatherer. They must learn that no railroad presidents champion the tribunes of the people; that no taskmasters write our tariff bills. They must learn, too, that for personal and political advantage their country was menaced by the threat of war, and they will learn with shame and regret that the very day the warlike proclamation of their President was read in the halls of Congress the peaceful response of the little 8 by 10 Republic of Chili accepting the terms of the presidential ultimatum was read in every capital of the world.

Our opponents must be measured by their deeds and not by their professions. The Fifty-first Congress wrote the blackest page in our legislative history and became a thing of the past. It challenged the approval of the people, and they responded in tone so portentous that it seemed the voice of God. With a unanimity that finds no parallel in the story of popular government they determined that a billion dollars was far too much to pay for such a museum of freaks. If we but permit it they will stand by their verdict. That our cause may triumph let us work in kindness. In the heat of contention let us not forget that our political brother may be just as honest and perhaps better informed. Impelled by one purpose, and that purpose the public good, we will free ourselves from the bickerings and heartburnings that characterized the Republican party when its Marshal Ney went down at Minneapolis before the mailed legions of the bread-and-butter brigade.

Mr. Owens had a respectful and an interested hearing, and when he came to the "legions of the bread and butter brigade" the convention cheered again and again.



THE WIGWAM.

The Work of Organization.

At the conclusion of the speech the Chairman asked what the pleasure of the convention was. Mr. White, of California, got the floor, and offered a resolution providing that the roll be called to name members of the different committees, and that all resolutions relating to the platform be referred to the Committee on Resolutions without debate, and that the credentials of each delegate be delivered by each delegation to the Committee on Credentials.

General Bragg, of Wisconsin, from the front row, offered as an amendment that the rules of the last Democratic convention govern this body until otherwise ordered.

Mr. White accepted this amendment as being first in order, and temporarily withdrew his resolution, which he again offered after General Bragg's substitute was passed. It was read by Reading Clerk Bell.

Mr. Rhodes, of Alabama, interposed with an amendment, which was read. It provided for a committee on rules in addition to the other committees. There was a brief discussion of the amendment, the explanation being made that the original resolution delegated the work of the proposed committee to the committee on permanent organization. The amendment was adopted, however, and the resolution as amended went through. The clerk then read the roll-call and the chairman of each delegation handed in or announced the names chosen.

MAYOR GRANT, New York, one of Tammany's Big Braves.

W. E. English, of Indiana, noticing a number of vacant seats in the galleries, offered a resolution to admit ex-soldiers of the late war to the unoccupied places. Mr. Collier, of Tennessee, said that there were 25,000 Democrats at the door and he moved that the doors be opened to them. There was great applause, but the whole question was shut off on motion of Mr. Johnson, of Kentucky, to refer the matter to the committee on resolutions. Mr. Holman, of Oregon, in the body of the hall, addressed the convention, closing by stating that he held in his hand a telegram giving the glad news that the Republicans of Portland, Oregon, had been defeated by a thousand majority. Great cheering greeted this announcement. Mr. Hall, of Kansas, moved that organized clubs be admitted to the vacant seats in the hall, but this resolution was also referred to the Resolutions Committee.

Mr. Cable, of Illinois, offered a resolution of sympathy with James G. Blaine, "that this convention tender its profound sympathy to that distinguished American, James G. Blaine, in the many afflictions that have befallen him." The reading of the name of Mr. Blaine was the signal for an outburst of greater enthusiasm than the convention had known before. The resolution was adopted without dissent. Mr. Swett of Maine got the floor and briefly thanked the convention on behalf of the Maine delegation.

An invitation from the World's Fair for the delegates to visit the grounds was read.

Gen. Bragg, of Wisconsin, moved that the convention adjourn until 11 o'clock Wednesday. Before the motion could be put the delegates were in the aisles. The Chair declared the convention adjourned, the band struck up "When Johnny Comes Marching Home," and the convention dispersed for the day.

IN THE CONVENTION HALL.

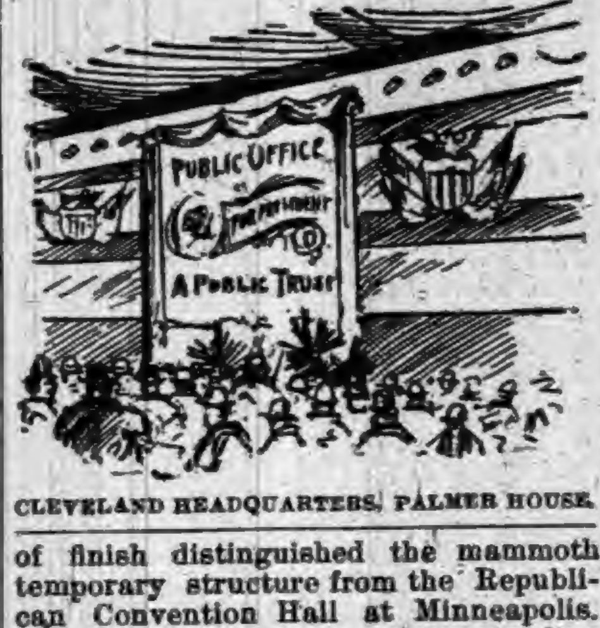
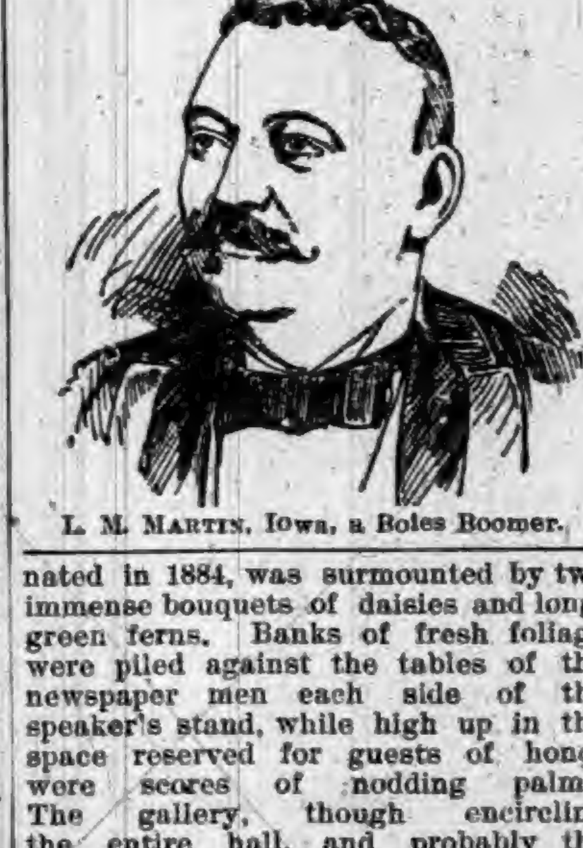
A circus tent trebly magnified, with a dozen huge white pendants stretching from covering to floor—that was the appearance to an Associated Press representative of the big Democratic Wigwam when the National Democratic Convention assembled. The supposed pendants of shining canvas were in reality stout posts supporting what appeared to be a mammoth circular canopy floating in the sky, but in reality a substantial roof of wood raised some distance above the walls to admit light and air above from every direction.

Greater magnitude but naturally less appearance of permanency and beauty of finish distinguished the mammoth temporary structure from the Republican Convention Hall at Minneapolis. The vista of seats—a total exceeding 20,000—seemed to lengthen out right and left before and behind till the eye became bewildered.



CLEVELAND HEADQUARTERS, PALMER HOUSE.

Silken banners of blue, inscribed with the names of the States and distributed about the area of floor forming the center of the structure, showed where the votes were to come from that within a few hours at the most would name the winning candidate. All around were the rising tiers of seats containing the spectators, who, if they could not vote in the convention, were at least able to cheer to their heart's content. The Chairman's desk, the same over which Cleveland and Hendricks were nominated in 1884, was surmounted by two immense bouquets of daisies and long, green ferns. Banks of fresh foliage were piled against the tables of the newspaper men each side of the speaker's stand, while high up in the space reserved for guests of honor were scores of nodding palms. The gallery, though encircling the entire hall, and probably the largest ever erected for a national convention, seemed to form part of the hundreds of tiers of seats and not a distinct portion of the structure. The rail was hidden in countless small flags, and bore at intervals the shields of the various States and portraits of a score of honored Democrats of the past, Hendricks and Douglas and others back to the beginning of the party.



L. M. MARTIN, Iowa, a Boies Boomer.

As the crowds flocked into the hall, almost the first comment was that the New York delegation had been given back seats. Alabama, Indiana, Iowa, Missouri, Montana, Pennsylvania, Wisconsin and Wyoming were in the front chairs. It was the result of the alphabet, however, not of any sinister political design. The States highest in alphabetical order commencing with Alabama were seated nearest the speaker to the extreme right, and the succeeding States on the roll ranged backward. At the head of the next aisle Iowa and Indiana were the fortunate ones, and the next in order alphabetically went to the rear. Missouri and Montana were the lucky ones in the middle aisle, while New York and Massachusetts fared the worst in this part of the building. First come, first served, was the order with the spectators, and soon after 11 o'clock a. m. the front seats on floor and gallery were crowded to overflowing.

S. P. SHEERIN, Secretary National Democratic Committee.

A COMPLETE SET OF THE WORKS OF

CHARLES DICKENS

FREE!

The Most Valuable and Remarkable Premium Ever Offered Free with any Periodical.

A MARVEL IN BOOK-MAKING.

A Set of the Works of Charles Dickens, IN 12 LARGE VOLUMES, FREE.

There has just been published A Set of the Works of Charles Dickens, in Large and Handsome Volumes, printed from entirely new plates, with new type. By special arrangement with the publishers we are enabled to offer to our patrons this splendid set of Dickens' Works, postpaid, free. Charles Dickens was the greatest novelist who ever lived. No author before or since his time has won the fame that he achieved, and his works are even more popular to-day than during his lifetime. They abound in wit, humor, pathos, masterly delineation of character, vivid descriptions of places and incidents, thrilling and skillfully wrought plots. Each book is intensely interesting. No home should be without a set of these great and remarkable works. Not to have read them is to be far behind the age in which we live. The twelve volumes in this set contain the following world-famous works, each one of which is published complete, unchanged and absolutely unabridged:

DAVID COPPERFIELD,
MARTIN CHUZZLEWIT,
NICHOLAS NICKLEBY,
DOMBEY AND SON,
BLEAK HOUSE,
LITTLE DORRIT,
OUR MUTUAL FRIEND,
PICKWICK PAPERS,
BARNABY RUDGE AND CHRISTMAS STORIES,
OLIVER TWIST AND GREAT EXPECTATIONS,
THE OLD CURIOSITY SHOP AND THE UNCOMMERCIAL TRAVELER,
A TALE OF TWO CITIES, HARD TIMES, AND THE MYSTERY OF EDWIN DROOD.

THE PLAN.

We will send a complete set of these books FREE, by mail, postage paid, guaranteeing safe delivery, as follows: To any old subscriber, who sends one dollar, and renews their subscription to either of the following publications for one year:

THE PEOPLE'S LITERARY COMPANION,

—OR—

The National Farmer and Home Magazine

This is the grandest offer ever made, and the greatest bargain ever offered. Up to this time the price of a complete set of Dickens' Works has been ten dollars or more. The use of modern, improved printing, folding and stitching machinery, the present extremely low price of white paper, and the great competition in the book trade are the factors which made this wonderful offer possible. Bear in mind that we offer, not a single volume, but the entire set of twelve volumes all free to subscribers. All may now afford the luxury of owning a handsome set of Dickens' works. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. Do not neglect or put off this wonderful opportunity. Send at once; you will be delighted with the charming books, and, as long as you live, never cease to regard it as the best investment of a dollar you ever made. Address all communications to and write, and are possessed of fair intelligence, you are fully qualified to make a grand success of what we offer you. We have lately published at great expense and labor a perfect wonder in the way of an illustrated Gift Book, suitable to all classes, an ornament to any home, and at a price that brings it within the reach of all, even those of moderate means. Heretofore only those who indulged in luxuries have felt that they could afford a book of this class, as they are sold in book stores at $5.00 and upwards. The book which we offer is not in any way inferior to those above referred to, but is far superior to hundreds of books of this nature that are sold at prices exceeding ours by an enormous per cent. It is selling with a rush wherever shown. Agents have only to show the book and mention the price, and it sells on its merits without further talking. No better Christmas, New Year's or Birthday present can be selected. It will sell, not only at holiday trade, but at all seasons of the year, for the reason that all will want it in their homes, and will have it as soon as they know the low price at which our agents can furnish them. Reader if you need profitable employment, and a business in which you can and will take pride, as well as make money rapidly, do not fail to send for circulars containing private terms to agents and full information, which will be sent FREE upon application. Old and new agents alike are making handsome salaries—yes, fortunes. Many of those who are making the best records are new at the agency business, having had no previous experience. Make a start—the field is entirely new. No such terms have been offered agents as we now offer on this wonderful book. Special qualifications not necessary, for it sells everywhere at sight. Perhaps you have at some time been unsuccessful at the agency business. If so, there is every reason why you should try this, the PRINCE of gift books, as failure is impossible if you make A START. Write us to-day, study our circulars and directions, then, order an outfit and go to work with push and energy. You may make the greatest mistake of your life, if you allow this GOLDEN opportunity to pass unimproved.

HEARTS OF GOLD

-OR-

THE HEIRESS OF MAPLE LEAF FARM

BY GENEVIEVE ULMER.

CHAPTER XI—Continued.

His eyes gleamed as if the happiness of a lifetime had come in one flashing second of space.

His face showed satisfaction, supreme confidence, victory.

He started straight back to Ridgeton that very hour, only on the way he halted at a little town.

It was the one the miller had referred to as the place where he had traced his runaway daughter and her thieving husband.

Ralph Prescott visited the clergyman of the village. He was closeted with him for an hour or more.

Plot and counterplot kept his thoughts busy until he reached Ridgeton.

He did not proceed at once to the former home of the recluse, Geoffrey Forsythe.

A night's rest and reflection were necessary to act clearly and make no mistakes.

At dark the next evening he knocked boldly at the door of the house that now sheltered the disguised Ruth Elliott.

She opened it timidly. Her glasses, false hair and widow's cap well concealed all traces of the youthful face behind them.

"I wished to see you on a matter of business, Mrs. Easton," said Prescott plainly.

The woman did not ask him in. Slightly nervous, she said:

"I do not see what business you can have with me, sir?"

"It is in reference to Mr. Forsythe's will."

"You had better see his lawyer, then."

"No, I must see you. Please admit me. It is a matter of intense personal importance to yourself alone."

She was more disturbed at the proximity of a man she dreaded than at any thought of his penetrating her disguise.

The lamp in the room was shaded so as to cast her face in shadow. She had successfully adopted a tone that little resembled her natural voice.

"Be seated," she said, calmly.

"Thank you. Now then, Mrs. Easton," pursued Prescott, briskly, "I have come to see you about—Paul Dalton!"

CHAPTER XII.

CRUSHED.

Ralph Prescott fixed his eyes penetratingly upon his hostess, as he emphasized the name he had spoken.

Something sinister in their expression caused Ruth to start slightly. With masterly control of the role she had assumed, however, she said simply:

"Proceed, sir."

"You know this man. You have been seeking to find him."

"How dare you interfere in my affairs."

"Because—I know you."

That was the climax. The words were simple, but they comprised a volume in expression and significance.

"You know me?" faltered the disguised girl.

"Yes, Ruth Elliott, I know you."

The mask was down. He had expected a scene—agitation, hysterics. He was mistaken. Only a flutter of the false hair, a slight contraction of the muscles about the eyes, and Ruth looked up steadily.

"Yes, Ralph Prescott, you have penetrated my secret, but I warn you I am no longer the timid girl who shrank at vain threats——"

"Indeed!" sneered the nettled Prescott.

"But the wife of a man for whose sake I have steeled my heart to surprises, sorrow, and pain. You know me. What of it? My story will show nothing criminal in my being here disguised—rather merit, necessity."

"I know all your story, all your plottings, all your hopes——"

"I doubt it."

"And I come to warn you, to aid you, Ruth," and the schemer's accents grew tender. "We were friends once. We must be again."

"Must!"

"Yes; for if you ever needed a friend, a counselor, it is now. You believe me sordid, heartless, selfish. It is not so. For your sake I come here—for yours alone. You have been, you are being, wretchedly, wickedly deceived. Your husband——"

"Stop!"

The imperious mandate rang forth clear as a clarion note.

"I will speak!" he muttered, doggedly. "I say you are being deceived."

"By my husband?"

"By the man you believe to be your husband."

"Do you dare insult me by doubting?"

"His honesty, his fidelity? Yes, Ruth Elliott, I do not come with idle words. I bring proofs!"

"Proofs!" uttered the girl, scornfully.

"Yes."

"Of what?"

"Of the fact that you are not, and never were, Paul Dalton's wife. He is a scoundrel, a thief, a bigamist. Read!"

His words dazed Ruth. The paper he had suddenly extended startled her, for her eyes read on its exterior the indorsement "copy," and the further words, "certificate of marriage of Paul Dalton and Isabel Danby."

"He was married before, his first wife is alive. He was a thief then, he is a thief now. The clergyman who gave me that document will swear to him—Ruth—Ruth—it has been too much for her!"

No need to urge further conviction. The last blow had told.

Ralph Prescott looked anxious, but triumphant. He lifted her to a couch. He applied a flask of spirits to her nostrils.

"If it has killed her!" he panted. "No, no, it is but a shock, but—I must get help—some neighbor, some woman. The worst is over, she knows, she believes. Henceforth, it is plane-sailing."

He hurried from the room, intent on summoning help.

He rang at the doorbell of the next house, briefly informing the woman living there that Mrs. Easton, the nurse, had been taken suddenly ill, and accompanied by her, returned to the sickroom.

"I can't understand it, Mr. Prescott," she said. "I fear her condition is dangerous."

"Oh, don't say that!" breathed Prescott.

"You had better get a doctor."

At its door he said to Prescott:

"That woman had better remain near her all night, and give her the medicines I have left regularly. She seems to have sustained a terrible shock to her nerves. Good evening, Mr. Prescott. I will call in the morning. Had you not better send for her father?"

"He would not come if she was dying."

"Hum! an extraordinary case altogether," mused the Doctor.

If Ruth died, what could he hope to gain? He started slightly as he noticed the figure of a man lurking in the shadow of the trees.

"What do you want there?" he called out sharply, advancing a step or two.

CHAPTER XIII.

WHAT A CHANGE!

"Paul Dalton or his ghost!" Ralph Prescott had apparently spoken truly.

The intruder was now fully revealed, and at him the startled schemer stared wonderingly.

The first shock of the strangeness of the appearance passed away quickly, however. It did not seem to be because Paul Dalton had returned, because he was here, that Prescott was bewildered, it was the suggestion of the unreal, of the uncanny, that had jarred his nerves and left him a gaping, dubious marveler

For there was something unusual, something unnatural, in the appearance of the intruder.

His lurking actions were rather cautious than stealthy, and as he returned the look of his challenger it was with an expression in his eyes entirely foreign to the keen, penetrating look that the former farm superintendent ordinarily wore.

Again, a few days had made a great change in Paul Walton's features.

He had shaven his face perfectly clean, his hair had been cropped close, he dressed in a loud, affected style.

His eyes seemed to have grown smaller, his face was more puffy. Such a change Ralph Prescott would scarcely have believed possible had he been told of it, but personal inspection was his, and he could only look and wonder.

Paul Dalton had probably been away visiting his other wife—seeing other friends, and had modernized his appearance from the farm employe to the polished gentleman and villain of society.

He had heard of his good fortune, doubtlessly. He could now throw down the mask. From the smooth, courteous hypocrite, he would become the haughty, domineering tyrant.

Every fine sentiment seemed to have left his face. He looked like a man who had been dissipating heavily.

In fact, only that the general contour of features was the same, one might have believed him some person slightly resembling Paul Dalton, but by no means the refined, frank-eyed lover of Ruth Elliott.

"You're Prescott," he remarked, and the man addressed started vaguely, for the intonation sounded as if the speaker had a cold—as little like Paul Dalton as possible.

However, Prescott scowled, drew back, and, jerking his head over his shoulders, said:

"She's in there."

"She, who? Oh! the girl?"

The intruder edged away a little.

"Sick to death," supplemented Prescott.

Paul Dalton look relieved.

"I don't care to see her," he said. "I've come on business; just got word about the fortune. See here, Prescott, where does the lawyer who made the will live?"

"A worse rascal than I thought him!" muttered Prescott, studying the sensual, selfish face of the intruder. "He thinks little enough of Ruth now. Maybe the fortune was his scheme all along. I never in my life saw avarice change a man so. If I had met him casually I actually would not have taken him for Paul Dalton."

Aloud, he did not at once reply to Dalton. Why should he bandy words with the man who had robbed him of bride and booty?

And then, the glow of sinister curiosity led him to the semblance of a friendly interest.

"The lawyer? Only a few squares distant," he replied, finally.

"Show me where."

"Don't you wish to see your—your wife?"

"No."

"You're in a tremendous hurry to grab your fortune, it seems to me."

"I am."

Terse, practical, the replies came. Prescott closed the door of the house.

"Come," he said. "I'll show you the way to the lawyer. Say!"

"Well?" placidly demanded the other.

"It's strange you ask me to show you the way to the lawyer's. You knew it w[illegible]gh when you lived here."

"Eh! Of course, why, yes. But, you see, I didn't know which lawyer made the will, I only got a hint of the fortune being left me, in a roundabout way."

"Oh! that's it?"

"Exactly."

"Well, you know the way to old Drew's. He's the lawyer. One word, Paul Dalton. I won't go any farther with you, so one word before we part."

"A dozen, if you like."

"You and I are mortal enemies——" began Prescott, with lowering brows.

"If you will have it so."

"You robbed me of Ruth Elliott—you got old Geoffrey Forsythe's fortune. I am a wronged, plundered man."

"Go on," nodded Dalton, with provoking coolness.

"I warn you, now and here, that you have no right to Forsythe's money. I warn you, now and here, that you will have to fight for its possession," continued Prescott, hotly.

"Very good, I'll fight for it then."

"You are a scoundrel. Your acts show that you care no more for the broken-hearted girl dying in yonder house than for the dirt under your feet. I warn you to leave here—to renounce the fortune rightfully hers and mine, or——"

"Well, young man, or what?" blandly demanded Paul Dalton—this new Paul Dalton, all avarice, all heartlessness.

"I shall make my first move."

"And that move will be?"

"Your arrest for bigamy!" cried Ralph Prescott, with flaming eyes, flaunting before his companion the copied marriage certificate, that proved Paul Dalton to be the husband of two wives.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

A Well-Trained Husband.

"Here's something rather novel and amusing in the way of a business arrangement," said the man on the corner to the other man. "Our firm has a traveling man whose wife is what is commonly termed a terror. She regulates her husband in every particular, draws his salary and doles it out to him, comes in and raises Sancho with the house if he is out too long, and makes herself generally obnoxious. All the men in the office are afraid of her, and you would laugh to see them all scatter off and get very busy when she appears. Well, sir, this year the firm wanted to cut that drummer's salary down, and how do you think they did it? They knew his wife would make things lively if she knew his salary was decreased, so they fixed it up between them that his pay was to be reduced, but that his wife should draw the old amount, and that as the drummer has a little bank account he would make matters square with the firm at the end of the year. How's that for terrorizing ability—one little 130-pound woman holding under her thumb her husband and a whole firm besides?"—Indianapolis Journal.

Trying Moments.

Bridegrooms, as a rule, bear the embarrassments of the wedding ceremony with anything but grace. The chances for making mistakes are few, but they contrive to improve them. At a recent fashionable wedding the groom calmly announced: "I, Annie, take thee, Harold, to be my lawful wedded wife." The bridal party, who were the only ones that heard it, were convulsed, and even the stalwart young minister could not repress a twinkle in his eyes. Another much-rattled young man, when asked if he took the young woman to be his wedded wife, stared nonplused at the minister for fully ten seconds, then asked blankly: "Beg pardon, were you speaking to me?" Still another, when handed the ring, instead of passing it along, began nervously trying to put it on his own finger, and was only aroused by a sharp little pinch. But most of the small contretemps incident to a wedding can be successfully hidden from the knowledge of the guests, and it is not until the bridegroom is let loose at the wedding reception that the bride really begins to get fidgety for fear he "will do something dreadful," a fear which is very often realized.

A Wonderful Invention.

An inventor in Vienna has produced a new material that combines some of the properties of glass and celluloid. It is made by dissolving four to eight parts of collodion wool (gun cotton) in about 100 parts by weight of ether or alcohol, adding 2 to 4 per cent. of castor oil and 4 to 10 per cent. of rosin or Canadian balsam. The mixture is then dried on a glass plate at a temperature of 120 degrees, Fahr.

The compound soon solidifies into a transparent sheet, having substantially the properties of glass. It resists the action of salts, alkalis and dilute acids, and is flexible, says the Philadelphia Record.

The addition of magnesium chloride reduces its inflammability and zinc white gives it the appearance of ivory. By increasing the relative proportions of castor oil and rosin the toughness and pliability of leather is imparted to the material, and it may even be made into driving belts.

May Be Heard From Some Day.

That necessity is the mother of invention was brought home to the writer during the recent construction of the cable road in Broadway. One of the workmen had occasion to wash his hands, and, as there was no water around except some in a bucket for drinking purposes, the man found himself in a quandary. After a moment's thought he filled the dipper, and, putting the end of the handle in his mouth, nodded his head up and down until the water fell in a little stream upon his hands, which he continued rubbing together until they were clean. Of course it was only a trifling circumstance, but still how many men would have thought of such a way out of the difficulty unless they had previously seen it done.

Kind to Their Horses.

"When in Russia," says a noted traveler, "I noticed with pleasure that the horses in the droskies were driven with a rein not much, if any, larger than a whipcord, and without check-rein or blinders. The whip is a little short one, and I do not remember to have seen it used. The horses are mostly beautiful stallions and go like the wind, controlled chiefly by the voice. Whatever we say about these Russians, they are evidently kind to their horses."

Hebrew vs. Yankee.

"Has the Jew, with his reputation as the champion of commercial prosperity, not found in the Yankee more than his match? Has he not in reality been outdone, and does not his future in these parts seem but a dreary one?" The foregoing inquiry appears in the American Hebrew, and the inquirer is Max J. Ullman, of New Bedford, Mass.

THE wire rope used in the tunnel at Glasgow, Scotland, is the largest and longest wire cable in the world. It was made at Cardiff, Wales, in 1884, and is 2,400 fathoms in length, or about two miles and 108 yards. It weighs twenty-one and one-half tons, and has nearly 100,000 fathoms of wire in its make-up.

HOW OUR PRESIDENTS RODE.

Sixty long years, with their sunshine and shadow, have passed since John T. Price, the well-known liveryman of 311 Sixth street, first saw the light of day, says the Washington Post, and all day Monday, the 11th, he was kept busy receiving congratulations on his golden jubilee. Mr. Price was born in Alexandria on April 11, 1832, making Monday his 60th birthday.

Having been in business at his present stand for twenty-seven years, he is full of reminiscences of great Americans who patronized his flyers. Among these was General Grant, who came in one day and said:

"Price, I want to take a spin over the road to-day. Let me have one of your fastest trotters."

When the General returned he was profuse in his praise of the horse he had driven, and said:

"Price, that fellow was chain-lightning itself."

General Grant's Arabian steeds, presented to him by the Sultan of Turkey, were placed in Mr. Price's care when they first came here, as were President Harrison's coach horses.

President Cleveland was afraid of runaway or skittish horses, and always asked for a gentle animal. Mr. Price met ex-President Cleveland at the depot upon his arrival here with seven carriages for himself and party.

President Arthur's favorite was a pacing horse. He always said that a pacer attached to a carriage produced the most delightful sensation.

He only furnished President Hayes with one horse for an early morning horseback ride in the country beyond the Soldiers' Home. Mr. Hayes asked for a gentle horse, and would not make his final selection until he had seen several tried by the stable boys.

General Sheridan always asked for an equine full of life and fire. He was a daring and reckless rider.

AN OLD DUELING PISTOL.

It Has Seen 400 Years of Service and Is Still in Good Condition.

Major Moore has among his collection of curios a dueling pistol which was brought to this country from England by one of the earliest settlers of Virginia. The weapon, which is a flint-lock, is fully 400 years old, and is still in good condition, and if capped with a bit of flint and loaded could be fired.

The pistol has a brass barrel, which unscrews about an inch from the flash-pan. To load it the barrel is unscrewed, the powder poured in and rammed down. The barrel is then replaced and the bullet, about three times as large as a buckshot, is dropped in. The sight is on the side of the barrel, about midway between the trigger and the muzzle. Instead of sighting over a point on the extreme top of the barrel, as one does when handling a modern revolver, the old pistol was held so that the sight was taken over the knuckles of the person sighting it, says the Washington Post.

The pistol was manufactured by Kitano & Co., London, and was brought to this country by a man named Mason, who was related to Lord Fairfax. It remained in the Mason family until 1679, when it was given to an old fisherman by Miss Mason, a granddaughter of the man who brought it over from old England. The old fisherman gave it away, and it finally found its way into the hands of one Detective Raff, who presented it to Major Moore.

The descendants of the original possessor, Mr. Mason, still reside on the farm on which he settled some 300 years ago in King George County, Va. How many affairs of honor this "lingering eternity" of a barbarous custom has figured in is not known by its present owner, its history having become lost in the recent rapid changes of ownership.

Russian Superstition.

Ignorance is seen in its true colors when it interferes in the practical affairs of life, and strikes a death-blow to prosperity and happiness. A traveler in Russia writes, in the English Illustrated Magazine:

One village through which we passed was the embodiment of filth and squalor. A destructive fire was raging at one end of it, and round this all the inhabitants were gathered. One house was already burned down, a second was one mass of flames, and the fire was rapidly spreading to a third, yet not a hand was raised to arrest its ruinous progress. Oaths, prayers, the wailing of women and whining of children filled the air.

"Why on earth don't you put out the fire?" shouted my companion to one of the peasants, who approached with a servile and wistful look, as if he expected an offering of money. "Have no buckets?"

"Surely your excellency deigns to know that it isn't buckets we need!"

"Well, it isn't strong arms, either, I fancy. Why don't you go to work?"

"Your grace wouldn't have us fly in the face of heaven! We've sins enough on our souls without adding that black crime to them. Wasn't it God's own lightning that set Hetroff's house on fire, a couple of hours ago? And bad as we are, there's not a man in the village that would raise his hand to undo God's holy work."

My friend raised his hand, waved it despairingly, and we drove on.

"It's a mere waste of time to reason with them," he said. "They would as soon commit suicide en masse as put out a fire that God had kindled with His lightning."

Australia's Increasing Flocks.

An Australian agricultural paper makes note of an immense increase in the number of sheep in Australia in the last two or three years, and of the enormous development of the grazing capabilities of the country. The estimated number of sheep in Australia in 1892 is 60,000,000, against 31,000,000 in 1884.

GANTER'S MAGIC —CHICKEN— CHOLERA CURE!

Thousands of dollars worth of chickens are destroyed by Cholera every year. It is more fatal to them than all other diseases combined. But the discovery of a liquid remedy that positively destroys the Microbes has been made. Half of the young chickens are killed by Microbes before they are fryers. A 50-cent bottle is enough for 100 chickens. It is guaranteed. If, after using two thirds of a bottle, you are not satisfied with it as a cure for Cholera, return it to the druggist from whom you purchased it, and he will refund your money.

THE GREAT SOUTH AMERICAN

NERVINE TONIC

—AND—

Stomach AND Liver Cure

The Great South American Nervine Tonic

Which we now offer you, is the only absolutely unfailing remedy ever discovered for the cure of Indigestion, Dyspepsia, and the vast train of symptoms and horrors which are the result of disease and debility of the human stomach. No person can afford to pass by this jewel of incalculable value who is affected by disease of the stomach, because the experience and testimony of many go to prove that this is the ONE and ONLY ONE great cure in the world for this universal destroyer. There is no case of unmalignant disease of the stomach which can resist the wonderful curative powers of the South American Nervine Tonic.

HARRIET E. HALL, of Waynetown, Ind., says: "I owe my life to the Great South American Nervine. I had been in bed for five months from the effects of an exhausted stomach, Indigestion, Nervous Prostration, and a general shattered condition of my whole system. Had given up all hopes of getting well. Had tried three doctors, with no relief. The first bottle of the Nervine Tonic improved me so much that I was able to walk about, and a few bottles cured me entirely. I believe it is the best medicine in the world. I can not recommend it too highly."

MRS. ELLA A. BRATTON, of New Ross, Indiana, says: "I cannot express how much I owe to the Nervine Tonic. My system was completely shattered, appetite gone, was coughing and spitting up blood; am sure I was in the first stages of consumption, an inheritance handed down through several generations. I began taking the Nervine Tonic, and continued its use for about six months, and am entirely cured. It is the grandest remedy for nerves, stomach and lungs I have ever seen."

No remedy compares with SOUTH AMERICAN NERVINE as a cure for the Nerves. No remedy compares with South American Nervine as a wondrous cure for the Stomach. No remedy will at all compare with South American Nervine as a cure for all forms of failing health. It never fails to cure Indigestion and Dyspepsia. It never fails to cure Chorea or St. Vitus' Dance. Its powers to build up the whole system are wonderful in the extreme. It cures the old, the young, and the middle aged. It is a great friend to the aged and infirm. Do not neglect to use this precious boon; if you do, you may neglect the only remedy which will restore you to health. South American Nervine is perfectly safe, and very pleasant to the taste. Delicate ladies, do not fail to use this great cure, because it will put the bloom of freshness and beauty upon your lips and in your cheeks, and quickly drive away your disabilities and weaknesses.

A Sublime Picture.

For the season of 1892 the Beyer Brothers, owners and managers of Spring Fountain Park, Eagle Lake, Ind., take great pleasure in calling attention to the stupendous representation of "The Life of Christ" as presented in their cyclorama on 15,000 square feet of canvass in conjunction with more than 125 figures and an endless variety of other embellishmens characteristic of the people and customs of the most inteaesting epoch. The painting is the work of Prof. E. J. Pine, whose wide reputation as a scenic artist is enjoyed by few, and who has made the delineation of this all absorbing subject so realistic and grand as to throw its every beholder into transports of ecstacy. As an optical delusion, it is unrivaled; as a cycloramic picture, it is without a peer; as a work of art it is the acme of perfection. It baffles description. To be appreciated it must be seen. The pleasure of beholding it will doubly repay a day's continuous travel. It is a masterpiece of the artist's skill. A more extended description of the painting and all information in regard to dates for excursions to this resort will be cheerfully and promptly furnished upon application to the General Secretary, J. E. Beyer, Eagle Lake, Ind.

Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly.

Conspicuous in interest and timeliness among the magazine articles of the month is the comprehensive paper upon "Pope Leo XIII.," by Richard B. Kimbal, LL. D., which opens the July number of Frank Leslie's Popular Monthlys. Dr. Kimball sketches clearly the situation of Italy and the Church at the time Leo XIII. became Pope; then proceeds with a masterly review of the ecclesiastical and diplomatic career of the venerable Sovereign Pontiff. Accompanying this paper is an admirable reproduction of the new portrait of the Pope, by Chartran. Another notable contribution is "Famine-stricken Russia," by Thomas Donnelly and Valerien Gribayedoff, describing and illustrating contemporary scenes in the Volga provinces. Other interesting articles, with copious pictorial embellishment, are: "Lady Riders," by Edwin H. Morris; "National Holidays," by Frederick S. Daniel; "Exploring Talamanca," by Cecil Charles; "How the Birds Came to the Green Mountains," by Nelly Hart Woodsworth; "Abdul-Hamid II., the Sultan of Turkey," by T. D'Apery; and "Etching with Fire"—a thorough account of the unique art of which Mr. J. William Fosdick is the foremost exponent—by Franklin Smith. There are half a dozen excellent short stories; and Etta W. Pierce's serial, "A Terrible Case," is brought to a dramatic conclusion.

$150 CABBAGES.

At the Hillsdale Fair for 1892.

The Hillsdale (Michigan) Fair will give this year for the three largest and best cabbages on exhibition there $100 and $50 to the second. These we believe are the largest vegetable prizes ever offered in America. This fair also offers $40 to the best five varieties of apples for market and $20 for second, and the rules require only five apples of each variety to be shown. Like premiums are also offered for the best five varieties of apples for dessert and also the best five varieties for cooking.

The above and other premiums offered by this popular society are open to the world for competition. Entries will close Sept. 27. Fair Oct. 3, 4, 5, 6, and 7, 1892.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF DeKALB COUNTY.

THURSDAY............JUNE 23, 1892.

REPUBLICAN papers complain of increased state taxes. Yet they asked to have the state levy raised to 25 cents, and the democratic legislature made it only 18. The official figures also, show republican counties have levied and are collecting a million and a quarter more local taxes than last year, while the same numbers of democratic counties are collecting only half a million more. Now who is to blame for high taxes?

EMMONS BLAINE, eldest son of Secretary Blaine died suddenly at his home in Chicago Saturday. Some trouble of the bowels caused blood poisoning, and it is believed the excitement of the Minneapolis convention had a bad effect on him. Like his brother, Walker Blaine, who died about two years ago, he was a man of much promise. A sister died not long ago. The other brother, Jas. G. Blaine, jr. is the poorest of the lot. The blow, added to other troubles may prove a very hard one to the ex-secretary.

REPUBLICAN CONVENTION.

Innocent Lambs Made Ready for the November Slaughter.

The republican county convention met in Auburn Saturday last June 18 to put in nomination a county ticket. Called to order at 11 a. m. and James E. Rose was made chairman and W. B. Campbell secretary. After some prelimarary work, Penfield made a motion that they announce candidates, which carried. Chas. W. Camp, of Garrett was named for representative, on a plea that he would poll a big railroad vote. J. D. Leighty named James Provines for treasurer. Dr Darby named H. K. Knott, of Waterloo, for sheriff and he was seconded by J. G. Johnson. Penfield named Phillip Noel, of Butler township, and E. D. Hartman named H. E. Trout, of Auburn. M. F. Long named Issac Hose, of Wilmington. For surveyor, Phillip Carper was announced by Robert Culbertson. W. H. McIntosh announced Dr. Swarts for coroner, and was seconded by Dr. Darby and Dr. Carpender. G. W. Lackey nominated W. Vaughn for assessor from Keyser. For commissioner north, John Buchanan named John M. Stonebreaker. For the southeast district, they named W. A. Craun and John S. Boots. H. R. Culbertson wanted to declare Provines the nominee for treasurer by acclamation. Penfield wanted to see all served alike. Either declare all who had no opposition or wait till the others were voted on. He said the republican conventions had made grave mistakes by undue haste in putting up men without due thought. J. H. Rose and others made notions to adjourn, but gave way for other business. A. B. Walsworth and others offered various motions, but it was at last decided that names could be added to the list of announcements at any time before the voting began. The secretary gave notice that each delegation should as soon as the meeting adjourned for noon, select its delegates to the judicial and senatorial conventions. Fred Oberlin added the name of O. H. Taylor, of his, Franklin township, for representative. The meeting then adjourned till 1:30 p. m.

AFTERNOON.

Chairman announced that more names could be added to the list of candidates if any delegate chose to do so. Here James Provines, having learned that there was "hotness" because he had been nominated by acclamation while other candidates without opposition, had been made to wait for new candidates, said he would resign, and go in even with others. This he did, but as no other name was put up for treasurer he was soon after nominated by acclamation, thus getting twice nominated by acclamation in one day. M. F. Long was announced for surveyor, Dr. Swarts was declared the nominee for coroner. Albert Thrush, was named for assessor. Stonebreaker, was declared for commissioner in the north. N. T. Fuller was added to the list of candidates for commissioner southeast. Here the list of delegates to the conventions named, were reported. J. H. Elson, of Fairfield, was named for assessor.

And the meeting adjourned.

NOTES.

Mr. Rose made a splendid chairman, but the convention caused some delay by its slowness. Republicans lack skill in arithmetic and their figures bothered them nearly to death.

The crowd was the smallest they ever had. Several delegations were not full, and the attendance of spectators was unusually small.

The democrats are well pleased with the make up of the ticket. We have not heard how republicans like it. It does not seem to be a ticket strong enough to be elected. Personally, the men are good men.

THE FREDERICKSBURG REUNION.

'Mid the crashing of thunder, flashes of lightning and a deluge of decending rain, I pulled out of Butler on the morning of the 7th of June, over that old and inimitable road, the Lake Shore, the maddened war of the elements continuing until we neared Toledo, when the swiftly moving train had gained a half hour on the storm, giving me a half hour to find shelter before the storm was again on us in all its fury. It soon fretted itself away, giving me time to reach the Wheeling & Lake Erie depot, before it had time to again gather its scattered forces, and again reopen the combat. Leaving Toledo over this route, I was soon crossing the muddy current of the Maumee and taking my way over the flat, water soaked fields of Lucas Co., O. This road runs in a southeasterly direction and hugs close to the Lake Shore, which it crosses on a high wooden trestle, for a distance of about six miles, touching about all the towns, but generally at their back door. At Norwalk it plucks up courage, leaves its well-known neighbor and strikes across the country alone, over a road-bed that makes one think about his life insurance. Heavy rains overtake us at intervals, and the whole country looks anything but dry, and up to this time, though the 7th day of June, I have not seen a single corn field in which the rows of corn could be seen from the car window. The wheat is also much inferior to our own. Grass about the same. Potatoes, in places, appeared a little better than our own. As my trip was more for pleasure than profit, I determined to leave this road at Lodi, and try the little Short Stop running over to Wooster, a distance of 17 miles. The conductor assured me there would be a train in about one hour. As I saw the tail of my train whipping around a curve out of sight I learned that there was no train running that day on the B. & O. Short Stop to Wooster, and that I was elected to stay in this straggling little village of Lodi (Harrisville) for about five hours. How to kill the time I scarcely knew. I skirmished around, found some dinner and one of the oldest inhabitants and enjoyed a good visit while the rain poured down in torrents of heavy refreshing showers, just to keep up appearances. As things generally end, so did my forced stop in Lodi, which place I left at 5:30, crossing the Creston swamps, and over the high, rolling, land of Milton and Baughman townships, crossing the Pennsylvania, on a long trestle, I arrived at Orville, a town of 2,000 people, and in a prospering condition. My train being late, I missed the south bound train, so remained in this little city over night. Wednesday morning I took a belated passenger train to Wooster, which I had not visited for 33 years. I found the place nearly grown out of my recollection. I found a few old buildings that yet bore a distinct resemblance to the ones of the long ago. Made a number of calls on old and well remembered friends, and the hearty greetings I received will long be remembered. Got a glimpse of the university and city hall. After a hearty dinner with cherished friends, I found my way to the depot and back to Orville, where during another forced stay of four hours, I completely "done" the little city that had upon my first visit to the place, not yet been born. My south bound train came in during a heavy thunder storm, and with a hundred others I took my seat for the little hamlet of Fredericksburg, nestled among the high hills between which flows the rapid little Salt Creek, whose murmuring is distinctly heard on top of the mountain like hills that curb it in. A gap of thirty-five years lies between my visit to-day and that of its tearful farewell on the 9th day of October, 1857. What a throng of old and happy memories fill my mind as the familiar slopes, hills, and church towers open to my vision. The train slows up at the old depot now thronged with happy faces, all anxious to meet loved friends, for this is the occasion of the first reunion of the old time students of this happy valley. I step from the train and jostle through the surging mass, looking in vain for even one familiar face. All is strange,—I know no one, and no one knows me, for thirty-five years so change and alter the physiognomy that few, if any, are able to detect old time lineaments. Amid the happy greetings I am approached by one of the committee, who inquires if I am one of the old students, a reply in the affirmative finds me grasping the extended hand of many an old citizen, whose face, like my own, seems sadly changed. I look in vain for the ruddy cheek, the bright eye and elastic step of the long ago. Instead I find the gray locks, the cane-supported forms and the little children of the former time, grave men and matrons. I am soon placed in the care of a prominent citizen, ex-mayor, and escorted to his cozy home, where everything is made as pleasant as possible. I take a walk and try to gather some of the old time scenes and try to recognize the hundred and one changes that have taken place. The old school house where so many arduous tasks were accomplished, still stands, though furrowed all over with the corroding hand of time. I walk down the little river, where soothing music lulled my restless spirit so often, and find change written all over every familiar object, except the everlasting hills that tower above me and seem steeper than ever. After a brief call on a forgotten friend, I seek my repose, preparatory to the great event of the morrow. My morning sleep is broken, by the booming of cannon that hail Fredericksburg's first reunion after the lapse of many years. The roar of the cannon is intermingled with the dull thunder, that threatens the success of the day and soon a pouring rain is drenching everything, but the clouds part and the refreshing sunshine dispels the gloom, and soon the streets are busy with the hum of happy voices. I now again join the throng and seek a familiar face. One after another comes to me and claims acquaintance, but a close examination of dates satisfies us that we were not together. Later on I meet a number of my old associate students, but how changed! The nice little girl that I had known is changed to the fleshy matron, and is hailed by the name of "Grandma." Straggling gray hair protrude from well-kept hats, of all of those whom I formerly knew. I recognized but one, a young lady of the house where I boarded—S. J. Knox. After a bountiful dinner, provided by the good friends of the place, we repaired to the presbyterian church, where the last exercises of closing school had taken place thirty-five years ago. The old house was yet itself, and with what swelling emotions I traversed its aisles and drank in the inspiration of the hour. The exercises consisted of productions from the old time students and words of welcome from the citizens. The occasion was one of deep joyousness and many eyes were wet, when allusions were made to the events of the past. Prof. B. C. Smith, the revered instructor, was present but age and hard mental work have broken him down, mentally and physically, and to us younger students he seemed only a broken image of the past. Deep and heartfelt regret was expressed by all at his sad misfortune. The day closed with fireworks and music, and after a few hours of needed sleep, I found myself seated in a neat, tasty and modern train on the old "Akron Branch." I soon find myself safely and comfortably seated in a hotel at Orville, busily engaged on this article, which, while it gratifies myself, I hope it may fall beneath the eye of many of my dear old time students. Left Orville at 9 o'clock and reached Toledo at 2:30 p. m. A nice clear day, the first one during the trip. We reached home without incident, and all in all had a most enjoyable trip.

IN MEMORIAM.

Mollie McDowell, third daughter of Elijah S. and Mary A. McDowell, was born at their farm home in DeKalb County, Ind., on the 6th day of March 1856. Her early child and school life was spent in this home and in the country schools of Richland township.

September 25, 1888, she was married to Miles Baxter, one of her former teachers, which happy union continued to the time of her death, June 19, 1892. To them were born three children, all of whom preceded their mother in death.

On Saturday evening, June 18, full of hope and fond anticipations she and her husband left their home in Auburn, to spend the Sabbath with her parents and family at the old home on the farm, where but a very few hours after the greetings, she was taken violently sick and at two o'clock, Sunday afternoon, death claimed her and she was gone.

In gentleness, modesty and love, her life was such as few equal and none excel. Ever mindful of the wants of others her kindly nature made her loved wherever known. A cheerful helpmate to her husband, the memory of her beautiful life will stay with him as a benediction, while he travels on alone.

The World's Columbian Exposition Illustrated for June.—This charming number retains those attractions that have made its predecessors so popular, while it introduces new features that will make it more interesting than ever. The question has often been asked, "who reads a Chicago book?" The 100,000 copies of this magazine now sold each month would seem to forcibly indicate the propriety of the question, "Who does not read the 'World's Columbian Exposition Illustrated'?" Certainly none should fail to read it who desire to be fully abreast of the times and know of the grandest Exposition the world has ever seen. In the language of our Consul Gen. to Austria, "It is the greatest feat of journalism of the age and a credit to America."

Among its leading and interesting attractions we notice a splendid full page engraving of the Hon. Elijah B. Martindale, National Commissioner from Indiana, together with his biographical sketch. There is also an admirable full-page engraving of the Indiana State Building, a gem of architectural beauty. There are several articles and engravings relating to Indiana's exhibit and its management. Altogether the number is of vast interest, and will win many friends to the great Exposition to which it is exclusively devoted. There have been sixteen numbers issued to date. From first to last there will be five volumes of twelve numbers each, or sixty numbers in all. Price 25 cents a copy. Subscribers for twelve issues at $3.00 will receive free the World's Fair Album, containing views of the Exposition Building in richest colors. Price of Album alone, 50 cents. J. B. Campbell. Got Six Years.

The murder trial ended last Thursday, the jury going out, after the pleas, at about 10 a. m. Friday. At ten that evening, they brought in a verdict giving Evans six years. We believe this suited all parties. They had stood all the way from two to twenty-one years, and six was a compromise. The lawyers had fought the case on both sides with earnestness and ability, and their pleas were excellent. Deputy Blum and H. E. Coe took the prisoner to Michigan City Saturday. We have received several compliments on the full reports, the COURIER is giving of the trials that have came up lately.

The Wanderer Returned.

Louis Stamets, of Philadelphia, came to the home of Jacob Stamets last Thursday, greatly surprising them. Many years ago, when he was but four years old, Mr. Stamets adopted him from an orphan asylum, soon after he moved to this state. After about four years the lad ran off, and believing he would be found at Ft. Wayne, Mr. Stamets got James Griswold, who then ran a hack to that place, to look the boy up. He found him, kept him over night, and next day brought him back as far as Huntertown, when he got away again and has not been heard from till he came to them last week. It appears, he went back to Ft. Wayne and railway men gave him a ride to Pittsburg Pa. Near there he went to stay on a farm. In a few years he tired of that, and left for a time, but two or three years later returned. Later on he drifted into Philadelphia and got employment on the railroad. Now he is a conductor on the Pennsylvania road, and is evidently a successful man. Recently he got to thinking of his old home with Mr. Stamets, and this visit is the result. Of course the Stamets family were rejoiced to see the lad, now a fine looking man, at their home once more.

The Butler Normal, at Butler, Ind.

The normal term of the Butler school will begin Tuesday, July 12, 1892. We gladly refer you to our pupils of the past, as to the thoroughness and class of our work. Special classes will be conducted in the interest of those intending to teach. All the branches in which examinations are held for teachers' license, will receive careful attention. Special instruction will be given on the latest and best approved methods of teaching, on the organization, management and government of schools. One can not be too well posted in the art of teaching. It is the aim to educate and train teachers for their educational work. This will be a special select normal of six weeks, and will close just before the teachers' institute. Not more than from twenty to thirty will be permitted to enter, so that it will be necessary to apply early. Pupils can use any text book they have, as all classes will be taught by topic or outline. Tuition, per term, $5 in advance. Anyone desiring further information call on or address,

In prosperity it is the easiest of all things to find a friend; in adversity it is of all things the most difficult.

The Rev. Dr. Parkhurst proposes to visit Washington. It is a matter of genuine surprise that Congress has escaped his attention so long.

The chief cook at a fashionable New York hotel is paid $8,500 a year. Chicago is hiring a few college professors at that figure, but as yet she is bearish on the cook market.

The forts around Paris contain sufficient food to support their garrisons for three years. Probably one-fifth of the working people of Paris are without food enough to last three days.

Almost every one in the world is foolish enough at times to dream of receiving a vast amount of money from some unkown friend. When a man sits and smiles to himself, he is thinking of how he will spend it when he gets it.

It is a mistake to suppose that because a man is rich he will expend money more freely than a poorer man. As a general rule, it is precisely because a man has been careful in expending money that he is rich. It is not so much in earning as in saving.

No one in the world can tell what will happen to-morrow. Instead of spending your money on some one who thinks he can prophesy, save it, and you will know that no matter what happens you will not be penniless. A fortune-teller cannot know anything about the future except that the people are credulous, and that her bank account gets fat through their credulity.

Four French soldiers sat on a keg of powder and smoked cigarettes. After awhile they separated because the powder blew up. Many a thin-chested cigarette smoker is sitting on powder. When he goes to pieces, physically speaking, he will know the joke is on him, though at present he is too stupid to see that the average man who monkeys with high explosives is swept into an early grave.

New York has had another electrical execution. The press reports of the affair quote the warden of the prison as saying "It was the most successful execution yet held," and declare that all the physicians present expressed themselves well pleased with the result. There does seem, however, to be a link missing in the chain of evidence of the painlessness of the death which only the man who suffered it can supply.

It is possible, and for aught we can allege to the contrary even probable, that the motives which induced the Rev. Dr. Parkhurst to go into his present disgusting and disgraceful business were of the purest; but it is perfectly safe to assert that his life will not be long enough for him, with the most strenuous and determined efforts, to undo the incalculable injury which he has done both to the cause of the church and to the cause of virtue.

A Chicago paper says that a governorship stands waiting for the man who will courageously take hold of a movement and intelligently direct it looking to the establishment of good country roads. If that is true of Illinois it is true of every State in this Union, and is a good enough suggestion for any of the gubernatorial aspirants. There is no want of modern civilization so deeply felt as that, not only of country roads but of city pavements. It is the one standing perplexing problem of an age of miracle working.

The comic, acrobatic comet with eight tails now performing in the eastern sky under the management of Prof. Swift, of Rochester, is in one respect at least an example to other artists. It is making a farewell tour, and absolute assurance can be given that it will never return to this planetary system. Not next year; not in five years; not in a century; not in ten million years. The astronomers have figured on it, and report that it is different from all the other visiting stars. Patti may, and doubtless will, return; Nilsson may come back, and so may Sarah Bernhardt and Jane Hading, and Ellen Terry, and even Mary Anderson. But when Swift's acrobatic, comic comet goes, it goes for good and its tails do follow it.

The ease with which the "western sales agents" marked up the price of anthracite coal in New York is a startling example of rampant monopolistic greed. Nobody pretends that the former figure was not high enough. It was no question of supply and demand. It was a mere matter of determining whether the people would stand it. The matter is gone over carefully, much in the style of a band of train-robbers plotting to hold up a train. "Will we meet with resistance?" is the paramount question. If they conclude that resistance will not be offered they proceed to rob the train. The coal monopoly commends itself to those gentlemen soon to meet in Minneapolis and Chicago and offer enticing promises to captivate the uncertain voter. The party that can promise to wipe out the coal monopoly without fail will stand in position to win popular favor.

A ridiculous craze is reported to be spreading in sections of Michigan, growing out of a desire to raise money to pay off church debts and for other charitable purposes, which consists in women performing all kinds of work to which they are not adapted, to obtain money. The wife of a bank president in one town peddled a fragrant brand of soft soap and scrubbed the floor of the hotel elevator; another sold pop-corn on the streets; a third went about blackening stoves. The wife of the station agent disguised herself and got the job of giving the depot a spring cleaning. In another town a band of girls went about the streets blacking boots and washing the windows of the shopkeepers. These are samples of the absurd things which are reported to have been done to raise money for churches. There is reason to suspect that an unnatural desire for notoriety has had quite as much influence in leading women to perform such service as devotion to the church. It seems not to occur to such people that they are depriving a class of people who do such work of the means of self-support. At last reports the craze was spreading. May it be kept within the borders of Michigan.

States learn by experience alone the limitations which they should apply to the will-making power. The disposition of the Astor millions, and the growing tendency to perpetuate large fortunes in one name by handing them down directly in the male line, almost entirely to the exclusion of the female relatives, is giving New York State a large stock of experience which may dictate new legislation. It is significant that France, the country which has already solved so many social problems over which other nations are still puzzled, should no sooner have freed itself a little from the shackles of the old aristocratic and feudal regime than it at once limited the will-making power. There is nothing in the whole French code which more completely illustrates the passion for fraternity and equality than the article which says: "Children or their descendants inherit from their father or mother, grandfathers, grandmothers, or other elders, without distinction of sex or primogeniture, and even though they are issue of different marriages." And the inheritance is by equal portions without respect to sex. It might be well for New York State, the home of so many archi-millionaires, to copy a leaf out of the Code Napoleon, and thus to provide against the dangerous growth of fortunes in one name. By equal division among the children of any financial magnate, his fortune will slowly find its way back to the masses, where it belongs.

One of the great industries of Chicago is the live-stock interest in all its ramifications. The city has maintained prominence in this line notwithstanding menace from various Western points. The receipts and shipments of live stock have steadily increased year by year, and the provision business has gone steadily forward. That this should have been the case while many of the persons engaged in this industry have been at difference indicates clearly the vast advantage which Chicago possesses by reason of converging lines of transportation as a place of receipt and shipment. For several years there has been what may be described popularly as a stock-yards war. Packers have been arrayed against packers, and projects for new yards have not only been broached but have actually taken the form of land purchases, both at points in Cook County and beyond the State line. It was not for persons engaged in other lines of business to interfere in this internecine strife, yet Chicago, whose prosperity is so largely interwoven with this vast meat industry, saw with regret that the differences were such as might eventually lose the city its prominence in this line. The war has been bitter. It is gratifying now to learn that it approaches amicable settlement. The terms of peace are not material to others than those engaged immediately in the business of receiving and disposing of live stock, but the announcement of the fact that peace has been reached will be received with no little satisfaction the country over. It is not probable that for another generation at least there will be material disturbance of the great packing industries.

Washington's False Teeth.

The patent office at Washington has one curiosity which is of no little interest to dentists and the manufacturers of artificial teeth. It is a set of ivory teeth made for Gen. George Washington in 1790 by a dentist in New York named John Greenwood. Greenwood was one of the first dentists in New York City, settling there about 1785, and two years later carving the double set of teeth for the "Father of His Country." He made two sets, the last being manufactured in 1795, after the first gave out, and it is said that the last set was buried with Washington. The first set was returned to Greenwood, and after his death was placed in the Government museum.

Giant Tortoises.

There used to be a giant species of tortoise in Mauritius. Van Neck, the discoverer of the dodo, found some there which were so large that six men could be seated in a single shell. Another authority states that 2,000 or 3,000 of them were sometimes seen in one drove.

A COMMERCIAL CURSE.

THE TARIFF WALLS BETWEEN US AND CANADA.

Trade with Our Neighbor Is as Effectually Impaired as Though She Were Situated in the South Sea—Tariff Trusts and Tramps.

As a Wall Between Us.

That there is as little use for tariff walls between the United States and Canada as between different States, should be evident to all who think on the question. If tariff walls around each of our States would be unmitigated evils—as they certainly would be—those between us and Canada would naturally fall into the same catagory. The more numerous the tariff walls, and the smaller the territory and population inclosed by each, the greater will be the injury done. Thus the United States is surrounded by a tariff wall so high and obnoxious that if built around each of the fifty subdivisions, it would within a few years, render much of our territory and many of our States uninhabitable, and leave us in a most miserable condition. As it is, we call ourselves prosperous in spite of the great obstruction to commerce that surrounds us. Canada having a much smaller population than the United States, naturally suffers more from her tariff wall, though it is not so high as ours. The following portions of a letter in the Standard, of New York, for June 1, 1892, contains suggestions for us as well as for Canadians. It was written by Mr. W. A. Douglass, of Toronto, Canada:

"Canada is about as compact as a whip-lash—much length, little width. I do not refer to her acreage, but to her settlements. It is the men and women that make a country, not the superficies. She is a settlement of provinces, stretching across the continent like beads on a string. To the north there is a vast extent of Arctic waste, from which there is no possible danger of an inundation of cheap goods, but to the south lies the richest country on the face of the earth, with which she might enjoy a trade laden with wealth and fraught with benefits; but from the dreaded inundation of American goods she carefully guards herself with a barbed wire fence, bristling with taxes. In fact, it is a doubly built fence, one-half supported in a neighborly way by the United States to keep the Canadian farmer or lumberman from carrying his goods to the best market, and then the Canadian government maintains a picket line to spoil him of a large part of his returns as he tries to bring them home.

"Here we have one of the most remarkable phenomena the world has ever witnessed—two nations, similar in language, in historical origin, in political institutions, in literary tastes, in every way so similar that the traveler may pass from one country to the other without detecting any more difference than he finds between two contiguous States, and yet, so far as trade is concerned, they are as widely separated as though they were on opposite sides of the planet. A bushel of wheat is conveyed from New York to Liverpool, three thousand miles, for five cents; to carry the same bushel one foot from Maine to New Brunswick, across an invisible line, costs fifteen cents. Geographically, as God placed them, Maine and New Brunswick lie contiguous. Commercially, as men place them, they are ten thousand miles apart.

"A line, an invisible line, purely imaginary, some 4,000 or 5,000 miles long, all length, no width, is marked across this continent, cutting it in twain That boundary is dotted with a picket line of watchmen, lynx-eyed by day and sleepless by night, guarding the people of the two nations, lest, like foolish sheep, in their weakness for abundance, they should stray to a more fertile pasture, to a richer supply, to satisfy their manifold wants.

"'The Canadian will inundate us and beget a slaughter market,' says the American. 'The American will inundate us and beget a slaughter market,' says the Canadian, and in mutual dread they try to guard themselves as a herdsman would herd his cattle. No wonder we call the Indians barbarians and savages! They don't know enough to have a protective tariff. We bow down to a theory that teaches that men have not sense enough to be trusted to buy their dry goods and groceries wherever their common sense would guide them; that abundance is a curse; that trade is a mutual fraud; that the practical man must not be trusted to his own judgment, but must be fenced in lest he commit commercial suicide.

"Hence Canadian commerce, instead of developing naturally, is developing as a fish grows in a water pipe. British Columbia, by her sea route, has admirable access to California, and between these two countries there should be an immense trade; but we impose huge penalties both ways to prevent this intercourse, and then we saddle the country with an enormous debt to build a railway across the continent, and develop a trade in another and less advantageous direction. We try to separate the contiguous and to unite the distant; but nature laughs at our puerile imbecilities. What a curse is freedom! The Chinaman beats his tom-toms to scare away the devil, and we tax ourselves to scare away trade.

"Between Ontario and New York, between the Eastern provinces and the New England States, between Manitoba and Minnesota or Dakota there would be, if free, enormous trade, mutually advantageous; but the tyranny of our superstitions, what calamities it inflicts!

"Every large city has its soup kitchen, its almshouses, its increasing race of paupers. The mortgage sales of the Ontario loan companies alone range somewhere nearly one thousand annually, the increase of chattel mortgages during the last few years has been phenomenal, the debt of the General Government increases about seven millions yearly, and now amounts to upward of $230,000,000.

"Of course, there is great dissatisfaction with the farmers, ground between the 'national policy' and the McKinley bill, with the workmen subjected to the intensified competition of an emigration policy that floods the labor market, while his wealthy employer is protected with a government manipulated by a band of protected manufacturers.

"Why such disastrous results in this country is not hard to see. The rich are aided to combine, the poor are compelled to compete.

"Her commercial policy could not be more contradictory. To build railways she has saddled herself with a heavy debt. Then to stop the conveyance of the goods she burdens herself with a huge debt. The building of the Canadian Pacific Railway cost the country upward of a hundred million dollars, and then when goods are brought into the country, either from Asia or Europe, a special penalty is imposed, in the shape of heavy duties, to prevent their landing in this country, so that goods from China can be conveyed to and sold in England much cheaper than they can be sold in Toronto. The railway is thus made more advantageous to foreign countries than to our own. We do not sacrifice our wife's relations with the generosity of Artemus Ward, but we sacrifice ourselves. Build a huge railway and then forbid the landing of goods in the country! That is a specimen brick of our statesmanship."

Tariffs, Trusts and Tramps.

The June Supplement of the New York World, edited by Hon. John De Witt Warner, is made up of "one hundred samples" of tariff trusts, under the heading, "Conspiracies to Crush Competition, Restrict Product, Raise Prices and Lower Wages." These trusts embrace most of the articles on which we have effective tariff duties. Among the officers of these trusts will be found hundreds of names published in the New York Tribune's list of millionaires, thus in part, at least, answering the Tribune's question as to whether or not the tariff makes millionaires. We quote the following from Mr. Warner's preface to these articles:

"Trusts are a consequence of human selfishness working under the new conditions of industrial development. Not all of them are consequences of the tariff any more than all crime is a result of drink. It is just as plain, however, that our tariff promotes trusts as that drunkenness breeds crime.

"For, in any industry whose product our Government 'protects' by a tariff upon similar articles made abroad, it is in the power of home manufacturers to extort from our people the full tariff rate as a bonus for their own pockets; whereas if it were not for the tariff no combine would 'work' unless it included the whole world. As to a protected industry, therefore, the tariff makes it as much easier to form trusts than it would otherwise be, as it is easier successfully to combine the few manufacturers of a single nation than it is to get and keep together in harmony many times as many manufacturers scattered all over the world.

"Monopoly once secured, the results are:

"First. These combines, covering as they do many great branches of protected manufacture, and affecting many others, raise the price of manufactured goods, so that the consumer gets less for the same amount of money. It is generally the case also that a large proportion of the concerns which have combined together are those which cannot manufacture the manufactured goods as economically as the others. The ordinary course has been to pay such a certain price for remaining idle, leaving all of the product to be made at manufactories which can produce it most cheaply, while instead of returning this benefit in cheaper goods to the public and to wage-earners in other industries, the combine keeps up the price, not merely to afford exorbitant profit to the plants still kept at work, but to pay to the idle manufactories the bonus agreed upon for their remaining non-productive.

"Second—The object of a trust combine is to make large profits on a limited product. If successful, therefore, the members of a trust make up, by the high rate of their profits, what they lose by the smallness of their sales, and they are, therefore, just as well off as though, by selling goods more cheaply, they made larger sales. It is the amount of goods to be manufactured, and not the profit that the employer is to make out of each item, that determines the demand for labor and the wages he must pay. A trust combine in a protected industry is, therefore, an arrangement by which, government keeping out foreign competition, our manufacturers take advantage of this fact, and, making our people pay enough more for the few goods they are able to buy, keep profits as large as they would have been for sales at more reasonable price, while employing less labor and at lower wages than otherwise. Trusts, therefore, enable manufacturers to make the most money by employing the least labor.

"Third. The more closely organized the combine of employers in any one industry, the better able are they to conquer their laborers in disputes as to wages or hours. Of course employers could organize for this purpose even though not for the other. Late experience, however, has shown, as might have been expected, that combines, originally formed to increase the price of goods, or restrict production, have been the most frequent foundation of a combine successfully to cope with labor organizations.

"Below are given one hundred samples of tariff trusts, selected from the myriad in existence. Three things are so general that they may be considered as universal incidents of a tariff trust —the arbitrary crushing out of competition, reduction of the supply of the product, so as to secure the highest prices that will not destroy the demand, and the reduction of wages—both as a consequence of the reduction produced and to limit demand for labor and the advantage which employers, leagued in a trust combine, enjoy in dealing with workingmen dependent upon their earnings in the different localities throughout the country, whence they and their families cannot move without hardship. Again, it must not be imagined that the writer considers all trusts as equally criminal on the part of those who engage in them. Indeed, in many of the cases given below the particular trust in question is the resort to which the manufacturers in the line of industry involved have been driven in self-protection against other trusts either in the manufactures which are their raw materials, or in those to which their own product is marketed."

In Henry George's Protection or Free Trade, which is just now being extensively circulated by members of Congress, the author thus clearly shows how oppressively indirect taxes—and especially tariff taxes—bear upon the poor, while the rich almost entirely escape: "A still more important objection to indirect taxation is that when imposed on articles of general use (and it is only from such articles that large revenues can be had) it bears with far greater weight on the poor than on the rich. Since such taxation falls on people not according to what they have, but according to what they consume, it is the heaviest on those whose consumption is largest in proportion to their means. As much sugar is needed to sweeten a cup of tea for a working-girl as for the richest lady in the land, but the proportion of their means which a tax on sugar compels each to contribute to the Government is in the case of the one much greater than in the case of the other. So it is with all taxes that increase the cost of articles of general consumption. They bear far more heavily on married men than on bachelors; on those who have children than on those who have none; on those barely able to support their families than on those whose incomes leave them a large surplus. If the millionaire chooses to live closely he need pay no more of these indirect taxes than the mechanic. I have known at least two millionaires—possessed not of one, but of from six to ten millions each—who paid little more of such taxes than ordinary day laborers."

That Is Enough.

Insurance statistics show that only one person in 10,000 ever attains the age of 100 years.

I want a sofa, as I want a friend, upon which I can repose familiarly. If you can't have intimate terms and freedom with one and the other, they are of no good.

To know, and not be able to perform, is doubly unfortunate.

DOINGS OF CONGRESS.

MEASURES CONSIDERED AND ACTED UPON.

At the Nation's Capital—What Is Being Done by the Senate and House—Old Matters Disposed Of and New Ones Considered.

The Senate and House.

On the 14th, Representative Fowler reported to the House from the Committee on the Merchant Marine the Geary bill, granting an American register to the steamship China. The bill, says an accompanying report, grants the same privileges to the ship as have been recently granted by Congress to the Inman steamships City of Paris and City of New York. If this bill be passed the company will not only build a vessel in an American ship yard equal in tonnage to the China as required by the bill, but the committee is assured by the company's representatives that it will build two vessels of at least 8,000 tons each. The China is a vessel of about 5,000 tons register. General Eli T. Stackhouse, member of Congress from the Sixth District of South Carolina and a prominent member of the Farmers' Alliance, died. He was one of the party that accompanied the remains of the late Col. L. L. Polk, President of the Farmers' Alliance, to Raleigh, N. C., last Saturday. The session of the Senate was only long enough to receive a message from the House announcing the death of Mr. Stackhouse and to adopt resolutions of sorrow, and providing for a committee of five Senators to escort the body to its place of burial.

Conferees on the river and harbor appropriation bill have failed to agree. Fortification measures were discussed at length in the House the 15th. Senator Morgan spoke to the Senate in behalf of free silver. Congressman Shively introduced his tin-plate bill in the House. Senator Peffer has presented a petition to the Senate from colored citizens of Kansas, protesting against Southern outrages.

In the Senate the 16th, Mr. Morrill spoke in opposition to free coinage. The Hatch anti-option bill was referred to Judiciary Committee. In the House the time was passed in debate upon tin. Not a single appropriation bill is yet signed, and the majority of those bills are yet in the hands of the committee.

Many hours were wasted over the Sibley claim in the House, on the 17th. They failed to agree on the river and harbor bill report, and a further conference was ordered. Chairman Durborow, with but one dissenting vote in committee, reported to the House a bill for the issue of 10,000,000 silver half dollars, to be used as souvenir coins in aid of the World's Fair.

On the 18th the House adjourned until the 22d, at noon. Congressman Bowers of California defended the McKinley bill in the tin-plate discussion in the House. Senate joint resolution recommending a Presidential proclamation for the observance of the four hundredth anniversary of the discovery of America has been agreed to in the House. All of the appropriation bills except the general deficiency bill have been passed by the House.

THE ELECTORAL VOTE OF 1892.

The Element of Uncertainty in the Coming National Contest.

When Washington was first chosen President in 1789 only ten States voted, giving him 69 Electoral votes. In 1888 the Electoral vote was 401, of which Harrison received 233 and Cleveland 168. The Electoral vote of 1892 has been increased to 444, and it will require 223 votes in the Electoral College to elect.

The following table exhibits the Electoral votes cast for Washington in 1789, the Electoral vote of 1888, with the States which voted for Harrison marked by a star (*), and the Electoral vote of 1892:

Six new States have been admitted into the Union since 1888, viz., Idaho, Montana, North Dakota, South Dakota, Washington and Wyoming, with an aggregate of nineteen electoral votes. All of them voted Republican in 1888, but Montana elected a Democratic Congressman and Legislature in 1890. This large addition of States and yet larger additions of electoral votes multiply the element of uncertainty in the coming national contest.

Condition of Crops.

According to the Farmer's Review of this week the Illinois oats crop generally is in good condition. One-half of the counties report winter wheat in good condition, while in the remainder it is fair. Spring wheat is fair and fruit poor.

In Indiana, two-thirds of the counties report the oats crop in good condition. Winter wheat is generally good. Fruit is reported poor by 30 per cent. In Ohio, oats are reported good by 37 per cent; poor by 18 per cent. Winter wheat the same. Fruit is poor by 41 per cent. In Michigan, little spring wheat is reported, but it is in good condition. Winter wheat is reported good by 55 per cent. Fruit poor by only 8 per cent. In Nebraska, spring wheat is reported good by 60 per cent. Oats poor by 5 per cent. Winter wheat is reported good by 70 per cent.; fruit poor by 30 per cent. In Iowa, spring wheat and oats are reported good. Winter wheat is good by 48 per cent. Fruit is fair. In Wisconsin, spring wheat and oats are reported good. Winter wheat good. Fruit fair. In the Dakotas, spring wheat is in fine condition, as are also oats. There is not much fruit grown, but what is grown is in good condition.

Why a Subscriber of This Paper Could Not Pay Her Subscription.

WHITE HALL, ILL., May 2, 1892.

EDITOR AKRON CITY TIMES,

Dear Sir:—I am sorry that I have not been able to keep my subscription paid up on my paper, the AKRON CITY TIMES, more promptly than I have in the last year. But the reason was this: My husband has been sick just one year, only being able to work about one-half the time until last Oct. 15th, he was compelled to quit work entirely, and did not do any work until about three weeks ago. He again went to the shop and has worked every day since (he is a potter), and he would not be able to work yet if it was not for Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, Kidney, Liver and Bladder Cure, which he saw advertised in your valuable paper with Mr. Cradick's of Gosport, Ind., account of his ailments and his recovery by the use of the Dr. Kilmer Swamp-Root. I wrote to that gentleman and found his statement correct, after which my husband sent and got the medicine and has only taken two bottles and has so much regained his health that he can work every day, and also eat almost anything on any table, which he could not do without giving him such an awful pain in his stomach. He could not even eat one-half of a cracker without suffering untold agony. His trouble was indigestion, liver and kidney trouble. He thinks there never was so wonderful a remedy as is the Swamp-Root.

There are others here using it, and all are greatly benefited already, after only using it for a few weeks.

Inclosed you will find $1 as so much on my subscription. You may please let me know how we are standing financially, and as soon as possible will send you the balance. I mostly take the paper on account of getting the Mogadore and Springfield news, where I was born, raised and married. My maiden name was Mishler. But I seldom see any Mogadore notes. You could get Miss Allie Mumaw from Mogadore to act as correspondent. She is well educated, plain writer, good speller, and would give you all the news in due time.

Yours truly, MRS. D. BOONE.

AKRON, O., May 1892.

The above letter was set up in this office from the original letter written by Mrs. Boone.

A Case of Disenchantment.

There is a story told of a Virginia gentleman, scrupulous in his taste, who, being deeply enamored of some lady fair, rode forth to tell his love. He took her hand, rested his eyes upon it before asking it as a gift, saw the pink nails of his ideal edged with black, dropped it, said farewell, and such was the end of this chapter called "Disenchantment." Moral: Cupid must make sure to tie tighter the blindfold in the hand-taking act, or the curtain may fall there, or the ideal should manipulate the manicure case before the curtain rises, lest it fall before the drama be complete.—Richmond Dispatch.

COPYRIGHT 1890

Two doctors of an Eastern town,
To learning much inclined,
Were called to see a gentleman,
Whose health was undermined.
The first one used his stethoscope
Upon his patient meek.
"I find," quoth he, "one lung is gone;
You cannot live a week."
To this the other wise M. D.
Vehemently objected.
"I see," quoth he, "as all may see,
Your kidneys are affected."
These wise men argued loud and long,
Yet the patient owes recovery
(Not to those doctors, but to—Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery).

There are some patent medicines that are more marvelous than a dozen doctors' prescriptions, but they're not those that profess to cure everything.

Everybody, now and then, feels "run-down," "played out." They've the will, but no power to generate vitality. They're not sick enough to call a doctor, but just too sick to be well. That's where the right kind of a patent medicine comes in, and does for a dollar what the doctor wouldn't do for less than five or ten.

We put in our claim for Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

We claim it to be an unequaled remedy to purify the blood and invigorate the whole system.

Can you ask more?

WONDERS OF A TORNADO.

Curious Things Wrought by Its Marvelous Force.

In Kansas they are telling a lot of most wonderful tales as to what was done by the recent tornado. Here are some of the choicest:

In Greenwood County a boy named Willie Henderson saw his home blown away, and went to a cistern twelve feet deep for protection. There was about three feet of water in the cistern, and he sat on a lot of boards which he threw into it. A tornado took the top off, took out all the water and the boy and carried him fully a hundred feet, where he was dropped, wet to the skin, but otherwise unhurt.

Charles Anderson, living near Towanda, heard a roaring and went to the door to see what it was. As he opened the door the storm struck the house and carried it away, leaving him standing in his night-clothes just where the house had been. It took the house from under his feet, and he says he never felt a breath of wind until after the tornado had passed and the force of the gale was again felt.

A threshing-machine was standing by the side of a barn and the wind tore it to pieces. The boiler of the steam-engine was taken clear over the barn and dropped on the roof of the house of James Donahue, crushing it in, and killing a child aged 6 and breaking Mrs. Donahue's arm. The barn was untouched.

A cow, which was standing in a stable lot near Cherryvale, was carried up to the roof of a house and deposited in such a manner that it was impossible to get her down without killing her.

The family of James Gibson were standing in their door watching the storm when they saw something come rolling down the street toward them. It looked like a log, but bent and twisted in such a way as to excite their curiosity, and as it was stopped in a gutter near their house they went out to make an investigation after the storm had passed. It was the body of a young woman who had been stripped of every stitch of clothing except one stocking, and it was only by this stocking that they were enabled to identify her. It was that of Miss Belle Merritt, who was considered the most beautiful young lady in this part of the country. She was so disfigured that no semblance of her former self remained. She was alive when found, but died within a few hours without recovering consciousness.

The family of George Jackson sought shelter in a cyclone cellar when the storm came up, but a big tree was thrown on the cellar and crushed through, breaking the arm of Mrs. Jackson.

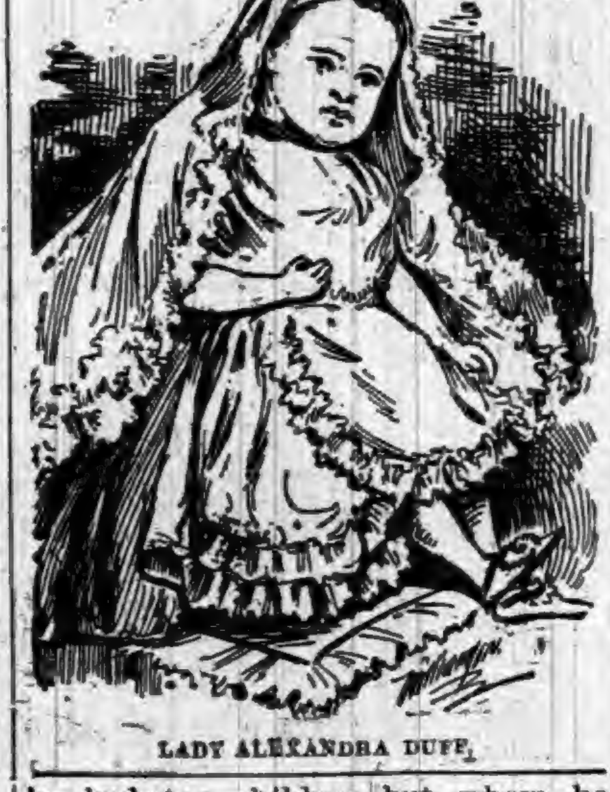
The stripping of chickens of their feathers is reported from several localities, and several stories are told of the marvelous action of the tornado.

QUEEN'S GREAT-GRANDCHILD.

Little Lady Alexandra Duff, Whose Grandpa Will Be King of England.

This is a portrait, taken by her mamma's permission, of little Lady Alexandra Duff, who has some chance of coming one day to the throne of Great Britain, says the New York Journal. This baby princess is the daughter of the Duke of Fife and Princess Louise, eldest daughter of the Prince and Princess of Wales. She is said to look remarkably like her august great-grandmother, Queen Victoria.

The little personage is descended on both sides from our old friend George III., who was obliged to give us up on account of a slight difference in views on taxation. The pedigree of her father is traceable back through Lady Agnes Hay, who married the earl of Fife, to Elizabeth Fitz Clarence, wife of the sixteenth earl of Errol and daughter of the duke of Clarence and Mrs. Jordan by whom he had ten children but whom he could not marry because he was a royal person. The duke of Clarence was afterward William IV.



LADY ALEXANDRA DUFF.

Lady Alexandra looks as if she meant to have a grand time in the world and if royalty holds out, no doubt she will. She is already "patroness" of a charitable work. If Prince George of Wales should die childless, and she should outlive him, the throne will be hers.

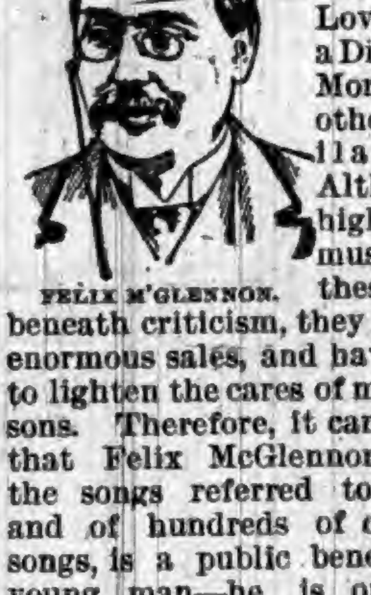
How Hayes Became a Millionaire.

Ex-President Rutherford B. Hayes, of Ohio, was recently in Norwich, Conn., which was the home of his Burchard ancestors from whom he received his given names. He is said to have had for his mission the discovery of facts with reference to the Burchard lineage, which he has long desired to possess but could not obtain without a visit to the Nutmeg town. President Hayes has been so quiet in his life since he left the presidential office in 1880 that very few people know that he is a wealthy man and possibly even a millionaire. The uncle after whom he was named left him large tracts of real estate in the city of Toledo, which is only a short distance from Fremont, where he has always made his home, where he practiced law and where he enlisted in the United States army. The growth of Toledo had made this property worth from $300,000 to $400,000 as early as 1876, when he entered the white house, but it was not an income paying-property to any large extent until within the last ten or twelve years. The growth of Toledo and a series of improvements, including the construction of buildings for business and residence purposes, has in that time about doubled the value of the property.—New York Press.

MARK WELL THIS MAN.

He Is Felix McGlennon, and Is the Author of "Comrades."

A good deal of popular interest has been excited in this country recently regarding the authorship of a number of popular songs, including "Comrades," "That Is Love," "Oh, What a Difference in the Morning!" and others of a similar character. Although, to the highly critical musical mind, these songs are beneath criticism, they have obtained enormous sales, and have done much to lighten the cares of millions of persons. Therefore, it can be said truly that Felix McGlennon, author of the songs referred to with titles, and of hundreds of other popular songs, is a public benefactor. This young man—he is only 33 years old—is a resident of London. He was born in Glasgow of Irish parentage. He is thoroughly domestic in his tastes and habits, and he possesses a modesty which has not been impaired by his extraordinary successes. He has extraordinary facility in the creation of popular songs. He has occasion frequently to compose an air in the short space of five minutes. He has reduced song writing to a science. Curiously enough, like Stephen Foster, the late Charles A. White, and other noted composers of popular songs, he has a very limited knowledge of the theory of music. He cannot play on any musical instrument. He manages to pick out with his right hand, on the piano, the air of his inspirations, and often composes twenty or thirty songs a week.



FELIX M'GLENNON.

That McGlennon has a very comfortable income may be gathered from the fact that Frank Tousey, the New York publisher, has paid him no less than $2,000 during the past two months for American copyrights. "Mock Not the Old and Feeble" has yielded Mr. McGlennon for the American rights not less than $300. He has received, besides, sums varying from $80 to $250 each for a dozen other compositions in manscript, including two comic songs that are sung by Johnny Carroll and Harry Kernell, entitled "I Handed It Over to Riley." and "He Came, or the Unwelcome Guest," and several other unpublished works prepared for Mr. Hoey, of the Parlor Match Company, Tony Pastor, Maggie Cline, and others.

The popularity of this prolific writer's productions is indicated by figures of the sales of eight songs, aggregating nearly four million copies, sold in England and America:

"Comrades"	1,000,000
"That Is Love"	850,000
"Oh, What a Difference in the Morning"	750,000
"His Funeral's To-morrow"	500,000
"I've Worked Eight Hours This Day"	400,000
"Woman, Lovely Woman" "You Know a Thing or Two" "Mock Not the Old and Feeble"	350,000
Total	3,850,000

Baby and Collie.

A gentleman in southern Connecticut not long ago brought home a collie dog, which, after the fashion of its kind, soon made itself one of the family, and assumed special responsibilities in connection with the youngest child, a little girl three years of age.

One day the gentleman, returning from a drive, as he neared the house noticed the dog in a pasture separated from the road by a stone wall. From behind this wall the collie would spring up, bark, and then jump down again, constantly repeating the performance.

The man left his horse and went to the spot. There he found his little girl seated on a stone, with the collie keeping guard beside her. The intelligent animal wagged his tail, and barked his delight at seeing his master.

In the light snow the path taken by the child and dog could be plainly seen, and as the father traced it back he saw where the little girl had walked several times around an open well in the pasture. Close to the brink were prints of the baby shoes, but still closer, on the very edge of the well, were the tracks of the collie, which had evidently kept between her and the well.

The faithful creature seemed to know that upon him lay the responsibility of keeping the child from a terrible death.

The Deadly Green Drink.

The fundamental principle of absinthe is a resinous substance derived from wormwood. This resin, with a number of essences made from aromatic plants, constitutes the famous French drink, which is so poisonous that a tablespoonful in a pure state is almost certain to cause convulsions to an inexperienced drinker, says the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. It is believed by physicians that the brain disease which absinthe produces is absolutely incurable, for the substance of the brain is changed by the poison, and after the absinthe drinker has accustomed himself to his daily dose a fatal termination is a matter of no long time.

Cheap and Superior Gas.

Parties in Pennsylvania have for some time past been producing a gas for illuminating purposes, the quality of which they claim is far superior for the use named than any other now made, and can be manufactured at about one-half the cost. The result is reached by means of a feeder and a number of retorts, the latter being kept at a certain degree of heat, and the oil is forced through them into a tank which is kept full of water. By means of this simple arrangement the desired object is attained, the gas is formed by the contact of the heated oil and water, and from this tank passes on to another—the supply tank—ready for consumption.

A NATURAL-GAS explosion occurred in a very peculiar manner at Muncie. Inferior plumbing causes the ground to be saturated with escaping gas from the many pipe lines, and it finds a retreat in the large sewers. A new sewer was being tapped into another which was filled with gas. George Hallock, a brickmason, was making the connection, and in pounding a brick with his trowel a spark set off an explosion which fairly shook the city and shot man-hole covers along the line of the sewer high in the air. Mr. Hallock was badly burned about the face and hands, and considerable damage was done.

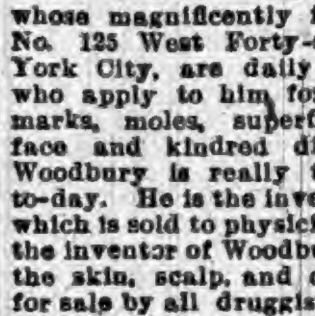
JOHN H. WOODBURY'S PARLORS

A Description of the Wonders Performed by the Leading Dermatologist of America. Ill-shaped Ears and Noses Perfected Daily; Facial Expressions, Hard Lines and Wrinkles Softened by Electrolysis; Marks Disappear from the Touch of His Magic Hand.

Physicians throughout the country are gradually beginning to give more and more attention to the subject of dermatology. A few years ago it was a very popular belief that a birthmark could by no possible means be eradicated from the skin. We have only to go back a very short time to recall dramas in which the villain was tracked from town to town and eventually handed over to outraged justice through a scar or birthmark which revealed his identity. A drama built on such a foundation would meet with well-merited ridicule to-day. The villain would not be such a fool as to permit a facial disfigurement to advertise his personality. He would make short work of it by having it removed, and his changed appearance would then prove his impenetrable disguise. In ten days a person afflicted with a mortifying birthmark, with pimple or red nose, could have any one of these disfigurements completely removed. The science of dermatology has not advanced at a snail's pace. It has run the race of the hare, but has not paused within sight of the goal. Able physicians have brought to this science all the wealth of their experience, and knowledge, and if any one suffers to-day through facial blemish, it is his or her own fault.



OPERATING ON THE FACE.

Foremost among the scientists who have made undeniable triumphs in dermatology is John H. Woodbury, whose magnificently furnished parlors at No. 125 West Forty-second street, New York City, are daily filled with people who apply to him for relief from birthmarks, moles, superfluous hair on the face and kindred disfigurements. Prof. Woodbury is really the dermatologist of to-day. He is the inventor of Dermaform, which is sold to physicians only. He is also the inventor of Woodbury's Facial Soap for the skin, scalp, and complexion, which is for sale by all druggists; also the inventor of several facial appliances, which are patented at Washington. There are eminent medical practitioners in New York who stand in the front rank as specialists in rheumatism, consumption, etc., but there is none holding a higher place among those treating skin diseases than Prof. Woodbury. Many methods of removing facial disfigurements were tried before Prof. Woodbury solved the riddle. This physician treated the blood, this one used his scalpel, and another a useless powder.

Prof. Woodbury revolutionized the science. He advanced the extremely radical opinion that birthmarks or moles should be treated by penetration; that they could be reduced to such a state that they would take on a scab, and that when the scab fell the birthmark, or whatever the disfigurement might be, would necessarily disappear. This was a sweeping declaration, and old forms and practices were shattered by it. Yet it was a true solution of the riddle. He uses no scalpel, nothing more than a harmless lotion, which changes the birthmark into an ordinary scab. Many of the most eminent society people of the metropolis, who had been for years debarred from public life through a disfigurement of the face, testify every day to the success of the Professor's methods. There is no physician in this country who has not some time or other attempted to remove a facial blemish, but where is there one who can show such a record of uninterrupted success in so doing as Prof. Woodbury? He does not keep a record of all the epistles he receives testamentary of his skill as a dermatologist. There is one letter, however, from a prominent New Jersey banker, which is worthy of especial consideration, since it shows the deep interest of the writer in the physician who cured him. The banker, after reciting, like hundreds of other correspondents, how he had been cured of several very ugly marks on his face, suggested that the Professor write a book on Dermatology. He says he could not do a better thing for humanity. His volume would arouse public interest in the great science, and those who have for years believed that they must live all their life with a crimson birthmark on their face would take courage and no doubt eventually be relieved of their blemishes. The banker is not, however, aware that Prof. Woodbury has already written a very instructive treatise of 145 pages on the subject, and which any one may obtain by remitting 10 cents to his address. Prof. Woodbury's fame has now become so well established that he is busy with his patients day in and day out and can give no further time to literary work. He is the President of the Dermatological Institute, No. 125 West Forty-second street, New York City, which is the largest establishment of the kind in the world.

Decorative Don'ts.

Don't furnish a north room in blue or any cold color. Yellow or golden-brown hangings will produce the effort of perpetual sunshine.

Don't make a narrow door narrower by a heavy portiere. A small house is made stuffy by too many hangings.

Don't put chandeliers in a room with a low ceiling. Side brackets are fashionable and are to be had in artistic shapes.

Don't have too much of one kind of decoration in the house. Grille work and stained glass, repeated in more than two rooms become monotonous.

Don't buy a bright colored carpet to put into rooms where the furniture is not to be correspondingly toned up.

Don't have the floor, wall, and furniture in a room covered with material which has a decided pattern.

Azrael, the Angel of Death,

Hovers nearer us, sometimes, than we are aware. It is safer far when we are unwell to suspect his propinquity than to ignore the possibility of his nearness. Caution is a trait in which the majority of mankind are constitutionally lacking. The proneness to disregard a "slight cold" is particularly striking. This minor ailment is, however, a predecessor of la grippe, a malady, when developed, of the most fatal character, as mortuary statistics attest. After a chill, or when the premonitory symptoms of influenza—such as sneezing and shivering, succeeded by feverishness and dryness of the skin—are perceptible, immediate recourse should be had to Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a genial accelerator of the blood's circulation, which diffuses an agreeable, healthful warmth through the system inductive of perspiration, by means of which the complaint is expelled through the pores, and its further tendency counteracted. Wonderfully efficacious too is the Bitters for malaria, constipation, liver complaint, rheumatism and kidney trouble. A wineglassful before retiring induces health-yielding sleep.

Death List of British Railways.

It appears from a return issued that there were 1,247 persons killed and 11,500 injured during the year ending the 31st December last upon the railways of the United Kingdom, this being an increase on the numbers for the previous year. Accidents to trains, rolling stock, permanent way, etc., caused the death of seventeen persons and injury to 1,029, twelve of those killed and 154 of the injured being servants of the companies, and the remainder passengers. The far greater number of killed lost their lives by causes other than accidents to trains.—London News.

The New Great South American Kidney Cure.

The acknowledged superior cure and immediate relief for all derangements, painfulness and decay of the kidneys or bladder, Bright's disease, diabetes or any complaint that hurts or despoils either of these delicate organs. This new remedy has been thoroughly tested by learned physicians and found far superior to any medicine yet discovered for quickly relieving all weaknesses, aches, pains and distresses arising from disease of any part of the urinary passages. It is a great relief for the old, middle aged and children, male or female. It relieves at once retention and pain in passing water, and it is very effective in relieving prostatic troubles in the old, and for nightly incontinence of water in children, or others, caused by weakness of the bladder. It may be worth to many a hundred times its cost. This is a remedy of great value to ladies, because they are very liable to weakness and pain peculiar to their sex. The Whipping Trial.

This case was set for Friday at 9 a. m. and finding the justice's office too small, Justice Walborn obtained the use of the court room. Messrs Garwood, Moody and McClellan were attorneys for Little, and Baxter and Penfield for Husselman. H. E. Little the prosecuting witness called Live in Auburn. I know Cal. Husselman. Husselman met me near Shaffer's shop last Saturday, between five and six o'clock. I was walking south on Main street. I was in front of Madden's He called to me and said: Hank I want to see you. I did not look at him. Saw he was mad but did not know what about. He struck me three blows, and I asked him to stop. But he went on and struck me several more, then told me, you d—d cuss, you go home and if you ever say anything about me in your paper again, I will get a pistol and shoot you. He then drove away. This is all. Little was here asked by Moody to strip and show his back, which he seemed prepared to do, not having any shirt on. His back still showed marks of the whip. He also showed his wrist, which he claimed had been hurt, but said it did not show, now nor pain him. He said his little finger had been put out of joint, but was all right now. Don't know how many times he struck. I was not able to defend myself but was not under influence of liquor then, but had been drunk for a week. I had liquor to drink, but concluded to go to a saloon, and get a glass of beer, which I did. Saw no one near. I have been confined to bed or chair since. Am better but can't lie on back or left side. I suffered all I could suffer. I called Dr. Allen, Dr. Wood and Dr. Nusbaum. I am still weak. Think I am not injured otherwise. I had on one light undershirt and an outside shirt.

Cross ex. by Penfield. I have got no newspaper, and so could not lie about Husselman for years. Penfield read the article. You recognize this article? I did not write it? Did you not tell Husselman, you had been writing these articles? Ans. Have had no such talk with him. I know no more about that paper than you. Did not promise to stop writing such articles Never promised but one man any such thing. I have probably written some articles in regard to Husselman. Do you know who wrote "that article?" Ans. Don't know. Another article was shown. Did you write this? "Yes," and made same answer as to another. I have not been there for two weeks, was drunk, and don't know who wrote articles for Clipper. Have not been prosecuted for this drunk Husselman met me and said I had been abusing him two years I did not answer. On cross ex. Hank told about same as on direct. Think I did not have tremens as bad as before, as think Husselman knocked all the liquor out of me. I did not resist. Husselman said if I repeated my abuse of him, he would come to my house and shoot me. My brother Jack edited the paper this week. I don't know whether he wrote this article. Is that an arrangement you and Jack have each to say the other wrote objectionable articles? No. I only work by the week.

John Slussman called. Gave in substance about same story. He said that one of them said something about shooting, but don't know which one said it. When you first talked of this, didn't you tell that Husselman said he would shoot? (We could no hear the answer to this.) Little kept begging to be let off. Elmer Miller and others and Dietrick, saw it. Cross ex. Don't remember saying Husselman better get out of town quick. Heard Husselman ask Hank if he wrote the articles. Don't know what he answered. But Hank said he would not write any more such Elmer Miller called. Saw the fight. Husselman was going across road. Horse was hitched on west side After first blows, Cal. talked about paper. Hank said he would never say another word in the paper. As Little started away after being let loose, he said, "I will go home and get my revolver and I'll fix you." I have no feeling in this matter, whatever. Can't tell how many blows in all, but were two or three at first. Then stopped and the talk occurred, then he struck more blows. They were across the street from me, say 60 feet. Husselman did not let loose till done. Had not noticed Little's condition. It was between 5 and 6 p. m. Can't say whether Hank admitted that he wrote the articles or not. He was so scared he might or might not have said so, but he agreed not to write any more.

Dr. Allen called. Attended about an hour after it happened. Found him suffering from the blows, etc. I could not readily conceive what kind of whip had been used, as spots were cut badly. Asked if he had fallen, as I knew his condition Supposed he had been struck with a root or some rough stick. Skin was frayed, but not cut, bleeding some near point or bottom of strokes. Think he had only one shirt on when I got there. Hank's general condition was nervous, produced from his drunk, and the excitement of the whipping. The pain he was suffering was largely from the whipping, as he complained a good deal of his back. I treated him for the pain. His physical condition, was not such that he could stand injuries, such as would be safe in health. Blood poisoning might have set in but did not. Am acquainted with his physical condition, which is not good. Is nervous and may be laid up a week or two but can't say. No bones were broken or joints displaced, but seemed to be some injury of wrist and shoulder blade. I have treated him when recovering from a long drunk. He is always sick on such occasions. This spree was continued some days. When he breaks off of a drunk, he is always sick, and he would gradually have these spells harder each time A rawhide could produce all the bruises that were found. There was danger of blood poisoning. Adjourned to 1 p. m.

Afternoon Cal. Husselman, the defendant, was sworn. His statement agreed with that of Elmer Miller exactly, The lawyers had several spats about testimony being admitted. Then, the objectionable article was read. I began with a quotation from the COURIER's very correct report of the convention of the people's party, and the foul writer, went on to argue that because the COURIER reported the meeting its editor was a people's party man. Then it pitched into the COURIER and its editor in the usual slushy way. So the first of the article was really an attack on the COURIER, and going on it drifted to Husselman, said his farm was or had been mortgaged, that he had wrecked the creamery and put the profits into his pocket, and was now going to wreck the fair.

Husselman continued: My land is not under mortgage, has not been for years. I asked Little if he knew me. He said no. I took him by the shirt collar but not by his throat. Asked if he wrote the article of this week. He said he did write it. Asked if he knew it was all a malicious lie, and he said he did, but would stop if I would not strike him, and would take it all back. Did not take him by the throat. After I let go of him, he said he would let me alone. But after he got a little way off, called back that he would go home and get his revolver and shoot me. I told him if he made such threats, I would have him arrested. I did not say I would get or use a revolver. Cross ex. by McClellan. Have known Little since he was a young man. Think Little pitched into me about 5 or 6 years ago. My attention was called to this article, by Spangle, Baxter, Willis, Davis, Salyer and others. I read this article in at Spangle's. Salyer was there at the time. This was on Friday Saturday, I came to town, talked with Lockwood, Merica, Barns, Baxter, Salyer and others. I talked freely about it. Some advised me to do one thing and some another, and some said thrash him. I concluded I would rawhide him, but was not excited I bought the rawhide Thursday, and left it in my office. I was waiting for Little to get sober. I met him early on Saturday afternoon near McIntosh's. He was walking on the sidewalk. I did not trouble him then, as my wife was along, and I did not want a fuss. I thought he he was the man who wrote these articles He told me so when I last spoke to him about it, when he was on the walk in front of the public square He admitted then that he was the author of the articles complained of. Everything in the last article was false, except the one about the 2 per cent. allowed me as county agent. Here McClellan read the extract in the COURIER, before alluded to. I did not think this thing in the COURIER, was complimentary to me. It was simply a newspaper report of the meeting. Mr. Husselman explained that he was appointed county agent for the Alliance, got goods abroad at wholesale rates, and got 2 per cent, of the farmers for furnishing goods, such as oil, binding twine, etc. Never got a dollar rebate on any goods In this sense, I got goods of outside parties. Am still doing business for the Alliance men like C. C. Buss, G. H. Dunn and many others for whom I am getting binder twine.

Question by McClellan. Did you ever say anything to any of our business men that you would give them the business if they would give same prices? I asked them about it, but we did not make the arrangement. I was not paid for organizing Alliances, as stated, but did get about $4 for each Alliance I organized. The Alliance lodges paid me. If they published it right, would not have objected to the article, so much. Q. Did you not say, when you were organizing lodges, that there was no politics in it? Yes, there was no politics in it then. As to creamery, there might be some profits, but I did not get it. The creamey owes me money. I paid the receipts to treasurer, and he paid the bills and debts. Think they owe me $100 to $200. I was secretary or overseer, but not accountable for the success or failure, as the board had full control. "As secretary of the fair he has that on its last legs," the article says. Q. Is this right? Ans I am only secretary, and if any money comes to me, I turn it over to the treasurer. Directors control the tickets, etc. Here Husselman explained the various points in the article that were false, and intended to injure my credit and my character, and I will defy any fair minded men to say otherwise. I did not know I could fine him. I have borne this abuse for five years. Here his story of the whipping was repeated. I struck three blows across the back. Hank admitted that he knew the article was not true. I told him it must be stopped. Here the rawhide was produced. I think I hit him 20 times. I made up my mind that that was about the right number. I knew he was guilty, as he had told me he wrote the article, and knew it was false. I met Wm. Little, the day before and told him, if Jack came over from Garrett to come and see me. I wanted to see him about the articles, they had been publishing in the Clipper. I don't remember whether I said I would sue him for libel. The defense rested. The prosecution called Wm. Little another brother of Henry Little. I saw Husselman just before the the whipping. He asked me to tell Jack to come up before Monday morning or he would prosecute him for libel. Both sides rested. Arguments were in order. But Judge McClellan said he hought not much argument was needed as we don't yet know how much injury may yet come of this whipping. Thinks this matter should be certified to the circuit court. Don't feel vindictive, but the offense is great. He spoke in this line for some time. Penfield, for the defense said: We acknowledge the offense. All your Honor has to do is to fix the the penalty. Judge McClellan's idea to have this sent to the circuit court, is not the one originally intended, or they would have brought the case originally to the circuit court, instead of in the justice's court. Called attention to the fact that Little was held by the collar, and not by the wrist, or throat but that the injury on the wrist was caused as Dr. Allen seemed to think, by Little's falling down when intoxicated, or else in this affray. Counsel went on to say that a cold blooded, a malicious article in a paper, would be more unbearable than a physical punishment like whipping. Husselman, and his wife and children have probably suffered more poignantly by this series of newspaper articles, than Little or his family have by this whipping. A man may be so goaded by these slanderous articles in a paper, as to be justified in defending his private and personal character by force. Men have been hounded into the grave, by such venomous articles This thing has gone on here, long enough. There must be a halt. Talk about prosecuting Hank Little in the courts. It is all a farce. I shall speak the truth. There is no newspaper in the United States so foul and so indecent as the Garrett Clipper. Note how foully it spoke of the best young ladies in Auburn, when they went to Garrett, and the Clipper spoke of them in terms so shameless as to be a disgrace to the lowest bagnio He thought this might all be a lesson to other papers. But this was the only chance for redress Husselman had He would have to sue an irresponsible man, and pay his own costs. He had to bear this abuse, and slander for months and months, and his family suffered with him. It was a great aggravation. Husselman, in all his life, had never been in a fight or brawl. He is a man of respectability and stands well as a law abiding citizen. He closed. Husselman then stood up in his own defense an unusual thing. "I will speak briefly. I realize the situation and the charge brought against me—more fully perhaps than others feel it. I know from experience what it is to be slandered and maligned by a newspaper. We all understand that Hank Little has been the author of all these slanders in the Clipper. All papers have referred to him continually as its editor, and neither he nor his brother, has ever even attempted to deny it. I could not bring into this court the midnight tears shed by a loved wife, who has with me, borne for years, slanders. Is it possible you can measure the extent of the damage to a decent man's character, by fining or imprisoning a man who no longer has a sense of the disgrace such a punishment brings? A man too low to feel punishment or disgrace? If any of you should feel what I have felt, you will feel what mockery it is to be told to take this into court. I love peace, and believe in obeying the law. I have assaulted a man who has no feeling for decency. When your wife in tears, asks you "what have you done, that these things should be said of you?" Would it not goad a man to desperate deeds. I am not pleading for mercy. I am asking for justice. I did not strike him, as I would a man of my equal in strength, but with a full knowledge of his weakness and my strength, and punished him as if he were a child. If I have been a bad man and swindled my neighbors; if I have done the other bad things charged in the article, then punish me. All I have asked of the Garrett Clipper is to stop. Every self-respecting man has a right to ask this. He can demand no less. I only ask to be relieved, and have my innocent family relieved, from these malicious annoyances. Baxter spoke. Hank Little has often told Husselman and others, that HE was controlling the Clipper, and the matter published in it. And when the whipping happened, Hank admitted it was his writing, and promised to quit it. We see by the last Clipper, that it is much more decent than usual, so that Hank's punishment has accomplished some good, as people may now have a few weeks' safety from the Clipper's attacks. Moody spoke. He said there seems to be even among editors an opinion that no remedy exists for injuries from newspaper articles. He went on to combat this idea, and claimed that there is a defense, and that the law is ample. There never has been, so black an act in the history of this county, as the black lines that were published that week in the papers of the county, which designated them as "smut machines." Then he read and commented on the dignified and truthful articles published in the Dispatch and COURIER, though he did not deny their truth, but added that after publishing such items the editor of the COURIER would go to meeting the next Sunday, get down on his knees, etc. He also lugged in the pious editor of the Waterloo Advocate. The unusual digression closed with a glowing tribute to the virtues of Hank Little. He insisted that "Hank got the data of the Husselman article from the highest authority in the people's party," although he had just heard Hank swear he did not write the article. He said the Clipper contained more truth than all the other papers. He spoke of Hank's lovable disposition, and said all that people could object to was his pen, and added, "That is his own," from which we must infer it will be all right for the other editors to use "their own pens." He closed, and Justice Walborn before giving his verdict, said he had tried to get a jury, but could not. So he decided the case himself, putting Husselman's fine at $12. 'Squire Walborn presided with great ability and we feel sure the better portion of our people are suited with the verdict.

Another Pioneer Gone.

The subject of this obituary, John McClellan, was born August 10th, 1817, in Wayne County, Ohio, and died June 18, 1892, at Auburn, Ind, aged 74 years, 10 months and 8 days. The deceased was united three times in the holy bonds of matrimony, and leaves a history as follows:

His first wife was Mary Howman, of Wayne County, Ohio; married Oct. 16, 1844, by whom were born three children; all now living.

The second wife was Matilda Adams, of Ashland County, Ohio; married Feb. 17, 1852. Children by this union 2; one living.

The third wife was Ellen Armstrong, of Auburn, DeKalb County, Indiana; married July 3rd, 1879. No children.

He was grandfather to 25 grandchildren; 21 of whom are living, and four great-grandchildren; all living.

Mr. McClellan was a resident of this town for thirteen years, and when age and poor health necessitated his retirement from the active engagements of life, he soon became a familiar figure among those of abandoned occupations, who were in pursuit of quiet and individual pleasure. He enlisted as a cavalryman in Co. K., 41st Reg't 2nd Indiana Vols., Sept. 1st, 1862, and served his country about three years,—deporting himself as a brave and valiant soldier. He was discharged therefrom in 1865. He lived in this county for fifty years, and was well-known as a jolly, good-natured old pioneer. Retiring from farm life, he moved to Auburn, where he lived until his death. His sudden demise struck many friends and the public with amazement. Just the evening before he was seen in his accustomed place on the street, where acquaintances and passers-by nodded their heads in mutual recognition; the same being returned with a genial smile of approval. A large concourse of people assembled at the Lutheran church, Monday afternoon, to pay their last respects to a good citizen and respected neighbor. DeLong Post No. 67, G. A. R., took charge of the funeral and buried him with the honors of a departed hero, while the W. R. C., accompanied the procession in honor and sympathy to the bereaved sister in Fraternity. The services were conducted by Elder Joseph Neal, of Montpelier, Ohio, after which the remains were interred at Evergreen cemetery, where

Another pioneer has gone,
From the green shores of time,
To his long and eternal home,
And a sweet rest sublime.
Another soldier brave and true,
Lies silent in his grave;
He's gone to join the vet'ran corps,
Whose lives for their country gave.
No more for him the campfire gleams,
As it sheds its brilliant light,
Where freedom's silvry moonlight streams,
With radiance pure an' bright.
We'll remember the deeds he done,
While he wore the vict'r's crown,
And the name for himself he won,
When fighting on south'rn groun'
Let fervent lips speak words of praise,
Tinctur'd with purest love,
For the true soldier's vacant place,
And the Grand Army above.
Let our hearts their glad tribute give,
To him who wore the blue,
And now while on the earth we live,
Pay the debt of hon'r due

Obituary.

Isaac M. Hornberger was born in Berks Co., Penn., Feb. 25, 1824, and died June 6, 1892, aged 68 years, 3 months and 11 days.

He removed to Lancaster Co., Penn., thence back to Berks, from there to Stark county, Ohio, thence to Williams county, and from there to his present farm in DeKalb county, Ind., where he has resided for 37 years. Mother Hornberger preceded father to the spirit land a little over 10 years ago, but now there is a final reunion of the two. They leave seven children to mourn their loss. Father Hornberger became a christian in early manhood and the community loses in him a christian man in all the term "christian" can imply. His children lose a loving, affectionate and truly devoted father. But—

Let us be patient! These severe afflictions
Not from the ground arise,
But oftentimes celestial benedictions
Assume this dark disguise.
He is not dead—the father of our affection—
But gone unto that goal,
Where he no longer needs our protection,
And Christ himself doth rule.
Then when on earth we breath no more,
The prayers oft mixed with tears before,
We'll sing upon a happier shore,
"Thy will, Thy will be done."

It would be impossible to find a more pitiable sight than a republican honestly trying to work himself into a state of enthusiasm over Harrison and Reid.

Let me Show you

what a saving I have made during the last year by being my own doctor. Last year I paid out $96.25 for doctors and their medicine; this year I paid $5.00 for six bottles of Sulphur Bitters, and they have kept health in my whole family. They are the best and purest medicine ever made—Charles King, 61 Temple Street, Boston, Mass. 10

Tom Platt: Before the nomination—"Harrison cannot by any possibility carry New York". After the nomination—"I shall support the ticket". Even Mr. Platt lacks the "gall" to say that Harrison and Reid can carry New York.

Mr. Norman Lichty, Des Moines, Ia.

Dear Sir;—A sample of Krause's headache capsules was left in my husband's office a few days since, and as I am subject to headaches—neuralgic, nervous, and in fact every other kind—he thoughtfully brought the sample box home. The very next day I had a chance to try them and one capsule relieved me in less than half an hour my head felt as well as ever, with no bad feeling as the after result I have had these terrible headaches for twenty years, and have tried every remedy I ever heard of, but nothing I have ever taken has cured or relieved me as quickly as Krause's Headache Capsules. MRS. N. A. SKINNER.

Have I any objections to your printing a portion of my letter? No! If my testimony will induce any one who suffers with headache to buy your capsules I will be glad. MRS. N. A. SKINNER.

Hon. Levi P. Morton could a tale unfold of the ingratitude of the republican party. He should go up to Bar Harbor and whisper it to Blaine.

Physicians Outdone.

My wife has been suffering with female trouble of the severest kind for over three years. I have paid twenty-five dollars during the last three months, and she had no relief. She had doctored continually with the best of physicians. I bought three bottles each of Dullam's Great German Female Uterine Tonic and Dullam's Great German blood, liver, stomach and kidney cure, and can say to day that she is entirely cured.

Sworn to before me on this 23d day of June, 1890, JOHN C. DULLAM. Notary Public, Flint, Mich., Genesee Co. $1 a bottle. For sale by Casebeer & Matheny.

The labor organizations rejoice at the nomination of Whitelaw Reid for Vice President; it gives them an opportunity to even up a long score.

Don't get Imposed Upon.

Is a good motto to follow in buying a medicine as well as in everything else. By the universal satisfaction it has given and by the many remarkable cures it has accomplished, Dullam's Great German blood, liver, stomach and kidney cure has proven itself unequaled for building up and cleansing your system and for all diseases arising from impure blood. Do not experiment with an unheard of or untried article which you are told is as good, but be sure to get Dullam's. All druggists keep it. $1 a bottle. For sale by Casebeer & Matheny.

What is
CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."
DR. G. C. OSGOOD,
Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."
DR. J. F. KINCHELOE,
Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."
H. A. ARCHER, M. D.,
111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

Great Britain's building at the World's Fair is now in process of erection. The structures of a number of other foreign nations will be begun within ten daye or two weeks, as commissioneas are on the ground preparing to inaugurate work.

Pronounced Hopeless, Yet Saved.

From a letter written by Mrs. Ada E. Hurd, of Groton, S. D., we quote: "Was taken with a bad cold, which settled on my lungs, cough set in and finally terminated in consumption. Four doctors gave me up, saying I could live but a short time. I gave myself up to my Savior, determined if I could not stay with my friends on earth, I would meet my absent ones above. My husband was advised to get Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds. I gave it a trial, took in all, eight bottles; it has cured me, and thank God I am now a well and hearty woman." Trial bottle free at Robbins & McCords' drugstore, regular size, 50c. and $1.00. 4

A very fine collection of tropical plants including some of the largest specimens will be sent from Jamaica to the World's Fair. The arrangements for their transportation have already been made.

Good Looks.

Good looks are more than skin deep, depending upon a healthy condition of all the vital organs. If the liver be inactive, you have a bilious look, if your stomach be disordered you have a dyspeptic look and if your kidneys be affected you have a pinched look. Secure good health and you will have good looks. Electric Bitters is the great alternative and tonic acts directly on these vital organs. Cures pimples, blotches boils and gives a good complexion Sold at Robbins & McCords drugstore 50c. per bottle, 4

One at Night.

One dose of Dr. Marshall's Lung Syrup taken in the evening before retiring will give you a good nights rest. It will cure your cough quicker than any other, and is pleasant to take. AUBURN AND VICINITY.

The vote at the election was 56 to 32 and was cast on strict party lines for during this period, political sentiments were intensely radical and the ballot was a trial of strength and an expression of position. Straight tickets were the rule and party was stronger than personality. The larger vote represented democracy, the smaller, republicanism although each went by other names.

Messrs Miller, Fluke and Larimore were elected school trustees, Joseph Stiefel town treasurer and A. J. Ralston marshal.

During the trustees' term ended, there had been few meetings of the town board all of whom were re elected. Little business had come before them and their salaries were but $7 each. Some orders had been paid during the fiscal year, and there was but 38 cents in the treasury.

The old cemetery no longer sufficed for public need and the demand for a new burial ground became pressing. To provide for this necessity, Thomas D. Gross was appointed to ascertain on what terms eight lots situated across the road north of the old grave yard, could be purchased. He was offered four lots for $400. The land was surveyed by Geo. W. Weeks on Aug. 15, and C. S. Hare owner was authorized on delivery of a deed to receive a warrant on the town for $385.

The vexations question which has generally arisen in most localities regarding the use of school houses for other than school purposes confronted the board who under a suggestion made by W. Griswold, by a unanimous vote decided that they had no jurisdiction in the case.

The law wisely charges the trustee with location, construction and control of school buildings and all authority otherwise is temporarily delegated by him.

Every locality has its transient or permanent queer ones. Of the former class to Auburn there came periodically a man advanced in years, of distinguished bearing, wearing a profusion of long hair spread over massive shoulders, kindly spoken to children, and courteous to women.

Impressive in manner, grandiloquent in speech, he attracted public attention and a good sized audience got to hear him lecture at the court house of an evening on the subject of "Truth and the Union." His name was J. N. Free and little else was known of him. The Immortal J. N., as he is called made occasional visits here till about five years ago, since which date we have heard little of him.

Henry Bruentz, a home character, was once a familiar figure on our streets, the delight of the boys and enigma to men. He emigrated from Germany in the early 50's with parents, brothers, sisters and sweetheart, a hopeful and happy family expecting to make their fortune in America. The cholera broke out on ship load and of all, Bruentz and sister, only survived. His mind affected, he came to DeKalb, acquired a piece of land and has been a resident since. His visits to town have grown less frequent of late, his steps are feeble and he will soon cease to be known, save as a chance copy of this COURIER is preserved.

There are many costly, imposing and ornamental public buildings at the county seats of this state, but there are few better arranged internally for the comfort of officials and the convenience of the public than is our present court house which dates its origin in 1863.

On April 20th, the commissioners met to select plans and specifications for the building of a new court house.

Plans were drawn by Alpheus Wheelock and William Valleau which were accepted by Samuel W. Sprott and Ephraim Berry. The committee appointed by the board compared such plans as might be presented, in response to public notice by the auditor, of the proposed building.

The lowest bidder was William Lowrey of Auburn, who, however having withdrawn his bid before its acceptance the contract for furnishing material and erecting the court house was awarded to A. Wheelock, W. Valleau and John McKay, these parties being the next lowest bidders.

The proposed structure being designed to stand on ground occupied by the old house, W. Valleau accepted and executed the job of removing the latter.

The contract price for the new court house was $23,372 00 to be paid one-half cash and one-half county orders, in monthly installments, not to exceed 80 per cent, of estimated work done. No additions to increase contract price could be made except as presented in writing and approved by the county commissioners who were to superintend the work.

To be prepared for emergencies retaining fees were paid to James B. Morrison, William H. Dills, John Morris and Andrew Ellison. Their services were not needed.

The contract required that the stone work five feet from the ground should be done by Nov. 1st, following and the court house to be finished by Dec. 1, 1864.

A bond for faithful performance of the contract in the sum of $10,000.00 was signed by S. W. Sprott, J. J. Davis, J. N. Miller, J. R. Cosper and John Ralston.

The work was let June 4th, and a few days thereafter D. J. Silvers of Fort Wayne purchased the interests of Messrs Valleau and McKay and took upon himself their portion of the contract, to execute.

Within a week, Woodbury farm which lies about three-fourths of a mile east from the town, then owned by Mrs. Ross Saxton, was purchased and the making of brick commenced.

By the first of July, the stone for the foundation was on the ground and the foundation pits had been excavated.

(To be continued next week.)

Obituary.

REINŒHL—At his residence in this, Wednesday, June 8, 1892, at 5:30 a. m., Abraham L. Reinœhl, aged 42 years.

Not since the death of Colonel Dickinson has the Record been called upon to chronicle the passing away of a citizen of National City who was so universally known and respected as A. L. Reinœhl. He was a man of rare attainments, deep thought and pronounced opinions—a man of the people, whose whole soul and being was wrapped up in the welfare of his fellow men. He was a reformer of the pronounced type—always championing the cause of the weak as against the strong—always on the side of the people as against the money power and monopoly.

Abraham L. Reinœhl was born on a farm near Wooster, Ohio, where he received the meager education which a country school could afford. He early developed a predilection for debate and his natural talents were recognized as fitting him for the profession of the law. He was soon recognized as an apt scholar in his chosen profession and was admitted to the bar at an early age. Shortly after obtaining his majority he removed to Nebraska, where his advancement, both professionally and politically, was rapid. In 1887 he removed to California, locating in this city, where he has ever since enjoyed a lucrative practive in his profession. He was twice named as the attorney of the city, holding that position at the time of his death.

He leaves a wife and two boys.

The funeral services will be held at the residence at 10:30 Friday morning.

A precious one from us has gone,
A voice we loved is stilled,
A place is vacant in our home,
Which never can be filled.
God in His wisdom has recalled,
The boon His love has given
And though the body slumbers here,
The soul is safe in heaven.

—National City Calif., Record.

Unseasonable.

That this has been a very unpromising year, so far, no reasonable person is willing to deny. But all join in the one common complaint of muddy roads, wet weather, poor crops and general discouragements. Ah, yes, finances, purposes and the best energies of many industrious persons have run to a low standard. Fondest hopes have been dashed to earth and the highest anticipations of success drowned in the floods of falling waters. Existence with such dark and gloomy environments seems to lend but little enchantment to mortality. But brace up, humanity! Don't let this morbid state of melancholy despondency destroy the placidity of your usually blithesome spirits. Behind the darkest cloud a golden sun is shining whose warm rays will ere long break through the murky darkness, casting its glorious light across the mouldy landscape and transform it to a bright picture of scenic grandeur. All is not rough that looks uncomely. It may be the Supreme Ruler of the universe has in store one of the grandest lessons man has ever been permitted to learn. Cheer up! Be as happy and gay as the circumstances which surround you will permit. Put on a smiling face and remember that A. Lewis & Co., are the most reliable lumber dealers in northeastern Indiana. They have great resources of silent capital to draw from and are constantly getting in a seasonable stock of the most desirable grades of lumber. The muddy roads and bad weather has had but little effect upon their business, and those who have bought lumber this spring realize that Mr. Lewis, general manager, is just as genial, good natured and business-like in his dealings with men as ever. He sells at prices to suit the times and guarantees that you get what you pay for every time.

INDIANA REPUBLICANS.

THEY HOLD THEIR STATE CONVENTION AT FORT WAYNE.

Ira J. Chase Renominated for Governor and Theodore Shockney for Lieutenant Governor—Full Text of the Platform Adopted—The Convention in Detail.

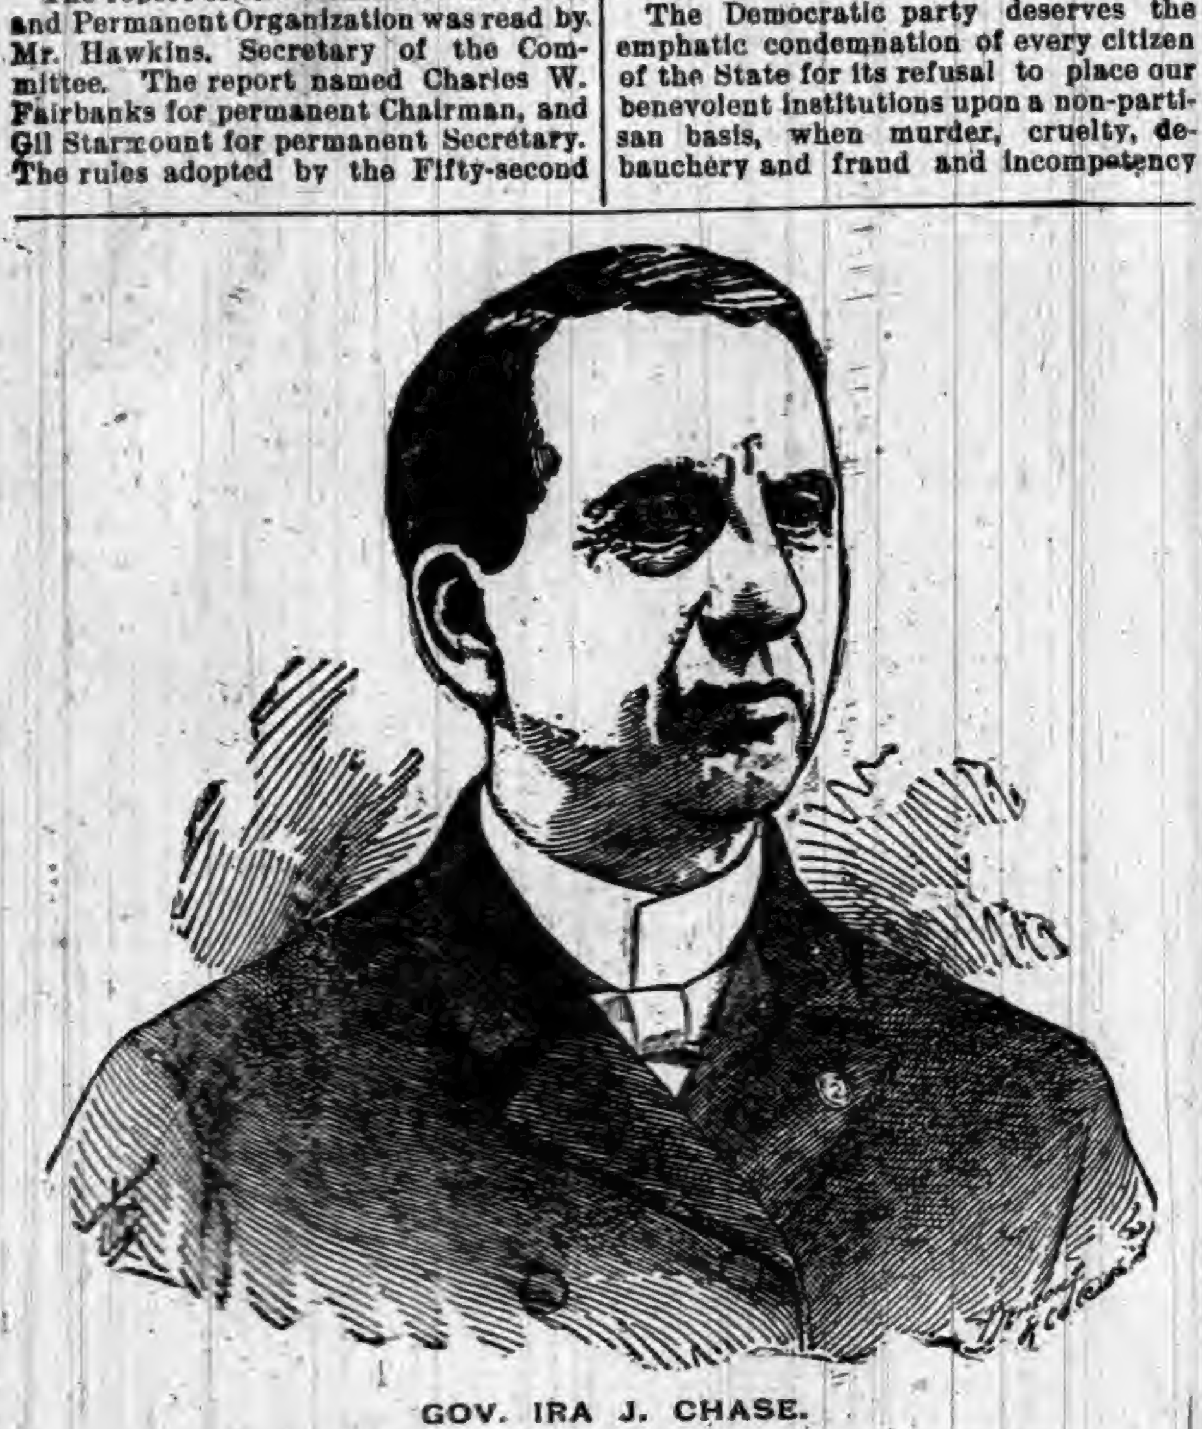
An enthusiastic throng numbering over 5,000 were comfortably seated in the vast hall, the tasteful and profuse decoration of which with national emblems made it not only a thing of surpassing beauty, but an ever present inspiration to the 1,430 delegates there assembled.

The convention was called to order by Chairman John K. Gowdy, of the State Central Committee, who introduced the Rev. Dr. Moffat.

The audience reverently arose and stood with bowed head while the Rev. Dr. Moffat invoked divine guidance through and over all the deliberations and acts of the convention.

The report of the Committee on Rules and Permanent Organization was read by Mr. Hawkins, Secretary of the Committee. The report named Charles W. Fairbanks for permanent Chairman, and Gil Starmount for permanent Secretary. The rules adopted by the Fifty-second Congress were to be used for the government of the convention insofar as they were applicable to a political gathering. The report was unanimously adopted.



GOV. IRA J. CHASE.

Chairman Fairbanks took up the gavel surrendered by Mr. Gowdy, and in distinct, measured tones clearly audible in every part of the hall, addressed the first State Convention of a great political party that ever assembled in Indiana outside of the State Capitol.

At a quarter past one Chairman Fairbanks seized the emblem of authority, called for order and asked for the report of the Committee on Credentials.

The committee, finding no contests, recommended that the list of delegates reported to the State Central Committee be recognized. The report was unanimously adopted.

Next in order was the report of the Committee on Resolutions. The reading of the platform was listened to with rapt attention, interrupted with generous and sometimes vociferous applause when an especially strong or striking plank was reached.

The following is the platform in full:

First—The Republicans of Indiana heartily approve the declaration of principles adopted by the Republican National Convention at Minneapolis. As citizens of Indiana, we congratulate the people of the State upon the nomination for President of the United States of our fellow citizen, Benjamin Harrison. The administration of the National Government under his leadership has been marked by such wisdom and patriotism as to embrace the whole country and to give abundant assurance of its continuance, will add luster to the American name and increase the comfort of the American home. We commend the candidates of the Republican party and Nation as eminently worthy of the suffrages of an intelligent and patriotic people.

The Democratic party has ever demonstrated its incapacity for government in both National and State affairs. In Indiana, believing itself intrenched behind a gerrymander of surpassing iniquity, it has show a reckless disregard for the people's interests and welfare, imposing intolerable burdens without benefits. We therefore condemn the Democratic management of our State affairs as incompetent, wasteful and in the interests of office holders and party managers, and direct attention especially to the subjects hereafter mentioned. Debt and Democracy are synonymous terms with the taxpayers of this State. Unparalleled extravagance in public expenditures has marked the course of the Democratic party in Indiana during the past decade, until the State is now burdened with a debt of $9,000,000. The current expenses of the State government have been rapidly increased by reckless mismanagement. The burdens thus imposed have become too oppressive to be endured. Our progress as a people has been frequently impeded and the credit of the State will soon become seriously impaired unless radical changes in the conduct of our public business are freely introduced. Relief lies with the people and we invite the voters of all political opinions to unite in turning out of power the party that has always been false to its pledges of honesty and reform.

We arraign the Democratic party of Indiana for enacting an unequal and unjust tax. It imposes upon the farmer, laborer, and householder an excessive and unjust share of the public burden; it creates a great number of unnecessary offices hitherto unknown to the law; to the burden that is already too heavy, it adds more than one hundred thousand dollars to the fees and salaries and expenses of these offices and officers. We demand its radical revision. We pledge ourselves to enact such amendments to the present tax law as shall relieve the farm and the home from the unjust taxation now imposed by them, which should place a just share of that public burden on capital and corporate property and provide a more simple and less expensive method of assessment.

We condemn the action of the last Democratic Legislature in largely increasing the fees and salaries of both [illegible] and county officers. It made many public offices sinecures by providing for the performance of official duties by deputies paid out of the public treasury.

The laws passed by the last Democratic Assembly apportioning the State for legislative and congressional purposes were designedly and wickedly framed so as to deny to many counties and localities fair and equal representation in the legislative departments of the State and nation and to place and retain under Democratic control in this State all its public institutions and affairs and to give that party increased and unfair representation in Congress and the State Legislature. Such a policy is dangerous and destructive of all government and merits the condemnation of all patriotic people. And we now pledge the Republican party to continue the warfare against this dishonest policy of the Democratic party until the State shall be honestly apportioned by giving each county and locality its fair and equitable representation in the legislative departments of the State and Nation and each party representation in proportion to its members.

We denounce the purpose of the Democratic party, clearly avowed in the National platform, to repeal the law imposing the 10 per cent. tax on State bank issues and thus remove the only barrier to a return of "wild-cat money," which once disgraced our State and largely impoverished our people.

The Democratic party deserves the emphatic condemnation of every citizen of the State for its refusal to place our benevolent institutions upon a non-partisan basis, when murder, cruelty, debauchery and fraud and incompetency mark that party's management of many of those institutions, and for still persisting in retaining partisan control of these asylums of the helpless and unfortunate, that they may be made the coin in payment for party services. We therefore demand absolutely non-partisan management of the benevolent, penal and reformatory institutions of the State through boards whose members shall be appointed by the Governor from the different political parties of the State, to the end that they may be relieved from their present profligate management.

We favor amending the law concerning the construction and maintenance of the public highways so as to utilize to the best advantage the large sums yearly expended thereon and thus put the farmer in close and easy communication with the market at all seasons of the year.

We believe in the enactment by Congress of a law which was recommended by President Harrison, compelling the use of the standard safety couplers for the protection of the lives and limbs of employes engaged in inter-state commerce. The people in the employ of railroad companies in this State form a large percentage of its population and are justly entitled to such legislation as will place them on an equality with such corporations before the law. And we are opposed to railroads maintaining insurance companies by coercing their employes to become members of them. The employers of labor should be liable for damages for injury to persons or destruction of life where the employer is more at fault than the employe.

We also believe in a law governing convict labor in the convict institutions of the State that will work the least possible injury to free labor. We are in sympathy with all well directed efforts of laboring men to improve their condition by united action or otherwise, and pledge ourselves to give them such aid by legislation as will tend to advance the interests of wageworkers.

We most heartily endorse the generous pension laws enacted by Republicans in Congress, and congratulate the country that during the administration of President Harrison no pension bill has been vetoed.

We demand that suitable and proper provision be made for the care and maintenance of indigent soldiers and their wives and widows, that no soldier, or wife or widow of a soldier shall ever be an inmate of a poor house in the State of Indiana, and that such provision be made that the soldier when overtaken by poverty and adversity, shall not, in his declining years, be separated from the wife of his youth. We therefore advocate the establishment by the State, in connection with the Indiana department of the Grand Army of the Republic, of a suitable state soldiers' home for the care and maintenance of indigent soldiers and their wives and widows, upon the plan recommended by the Grand Army of the Republic.

The people of Indiana cherish the memory of Alvin P. Hovey, who was a native of this State, and with only such opportunities as were open to all, rose to high positions in the State and Nation and distinguished himself as jurist, soldier and statesman. The Republicans of Indiana lament his death as the loss of a trusted leader and of a statesman who crowned a long and useful career by a courageous and manly defense of the constitution he helped to frame and of the just powers of the State's chief executive.

We tender to that eminent Republican leader, the Hon. James G. Blaine and the members of his family our sincere sympathy and with them mourn the loss of one who so recently formed a part of their family circle.

The platform was adopted amid great enthusiasm.

The following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That we hereby adopt the American eagle as the emblem of the Republican party for use on the ballots to be voted throughout the State of Indiana, in conformity to the law on that subject.

The Chairman then announced that nominations were in order and the following ticket was chosen:

For Governor—Ira J. Chase, Hendricks County.

For Lieutenant Governor—Theodore Shockney, Randolph County.

Secretary of State—Aaron Jones, St. Joseph County.

Auditor of State—John W. Coons, Marion County.

Ninth—David Colter of Clinton.

Tenth—L. M. Brackett of Fulton.

Eleventh—Jesse J. M. Lafollette of Jay.

Twelfth—A. R. Walters of Allen.

Thirteenth—William M. Kendall of Marshall.

Mr. Williamson offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That this convention congratulate the citizens of Fort Wayne in having redeemed their pledge made to the State Central Committee, and that we tender to them the hearty and sincere thanks of this convention, and shall carry to our homes lively remembrances of their magnificent hospitality.

The resolution was unanimously adopted and the convention adjourned.

Buying Out a Hotelkeeper.

Once more the foaming beaker was passed around, and then the second old man began his second anecdote. Our company played one night in a town eight miles distant from Danielsonville, Connecticutt. It was in the spring, and the weather was beautiful. In the morning, before the company started for Danielsonville, two of the men, who were great pedestrians, went to the manager and asked his permission to walk to the next town. The permission was granted, and the two fellows ground off at the rate of four miles per hour, arriving in Danielsonville a little before the rest of the company rolled in on the cars. Accommodations for the entire party had been engaged by the advance agent at the one hotel of the place. The manager went to the hotel and inquired what kind of rooms were ready for his people.

"I don't know that we can give you any, said the clerk, looking coldly at the manager."

"What do you mean? Didn't our agent make arrangements with you?"

"Yes; but I've changed my mind since."

"Changed your mind! What for, I'd like to know?"

"That's my affair."

"And the clerk cooly turned his back and walked away. The enraged and mystified manager rushed out to seek other accommodations. Of course, he did not find any. But while out he met the two men who walked down.

"Didn't get any rooms, did you? asked one of them.

"No; what's the matter here?"

"Well, I'll tell you. Some kind friend of the hotelkeeper telegraphed him that the company was broke and two of them had to walk."

The hearers of the second old man gave vent to various expressions of disgust at this instance of Yankee shrewdness.

"What did the manager do?" asked Ptaxrimander.

"Well, I'll tell you," answered the narrator. "He had $1,500 in small bills done up in two rolls so that they looked as if they contained much more. He went back to the hotel and called for the proprietor. That person approached in a haughty manner and coldly said. "Well, sir, what do you want?" The manager looked at him from head to foot. Then he drew out his rolls of money and, slamming them down on the counter, asked in a voice of thunder:

"What'll you take for your infernal little shanty?"

"The astounded landlord fell of about two tons. Then he bowed very low and, rubbing his hands together, said: "What can I do for you to-day, sir?"—Theatrical Reminiscence New York Times.

Would Starve Before He'd Pay That.

At Perryville, on the Pennsylvania railroad, a thin old man with a month like a cruller climbed on board a south-bound train. He carried an umbrella tied up with a shoestring, and an old valise, which looked as if it had been with Lee at Appomattox. He sat down on a cross seat near the door, deposited his property, and beckoned to a train boy who was passing with a basket of sandwiches.

"Got anything ter eat, young feller?"

"Sandwiches—ham, chicken, and tongue."

"Are they fresh?"

"Certainly."

"There ain't no 'certainty' about it," objected the old man emphatically; "the sandwich business is ticklish in hot weather."

"They're fresh," said the boy impatiently—"only been made an hour."

"I'd rather like a chicken sandwich," remarked the old man, "if I knowed I wouldn't draw a wing."

"No wings, sir—all clear meat."

"Spose you let me see one of them sandwiches?"

"Can't, sir—they are all wrapped up. Take one?"

"How much do you ask fer 'em?"

"Ten cents."

"Not by the dozen, young feller; how much for one?"

"Ten cents."

"Great day 'n mornin'" gasped the old man, horror-stricken—"ten cents fer two bits of bread and a smell of chicken?" I'm hungry enough ter eat a pickax, but I'm game, and I tell you, boy, before I pay ten cents for one little sandwich I'll set here and roll my eyes and swoller all the way to Bowltermer."

MINISTER—My dear sir, you are full of whisky. You'll pay for it some day. Tipplerre—Will I? Then (hic) step across the street and tell the saloon-keeper. He'll be glad to know it.

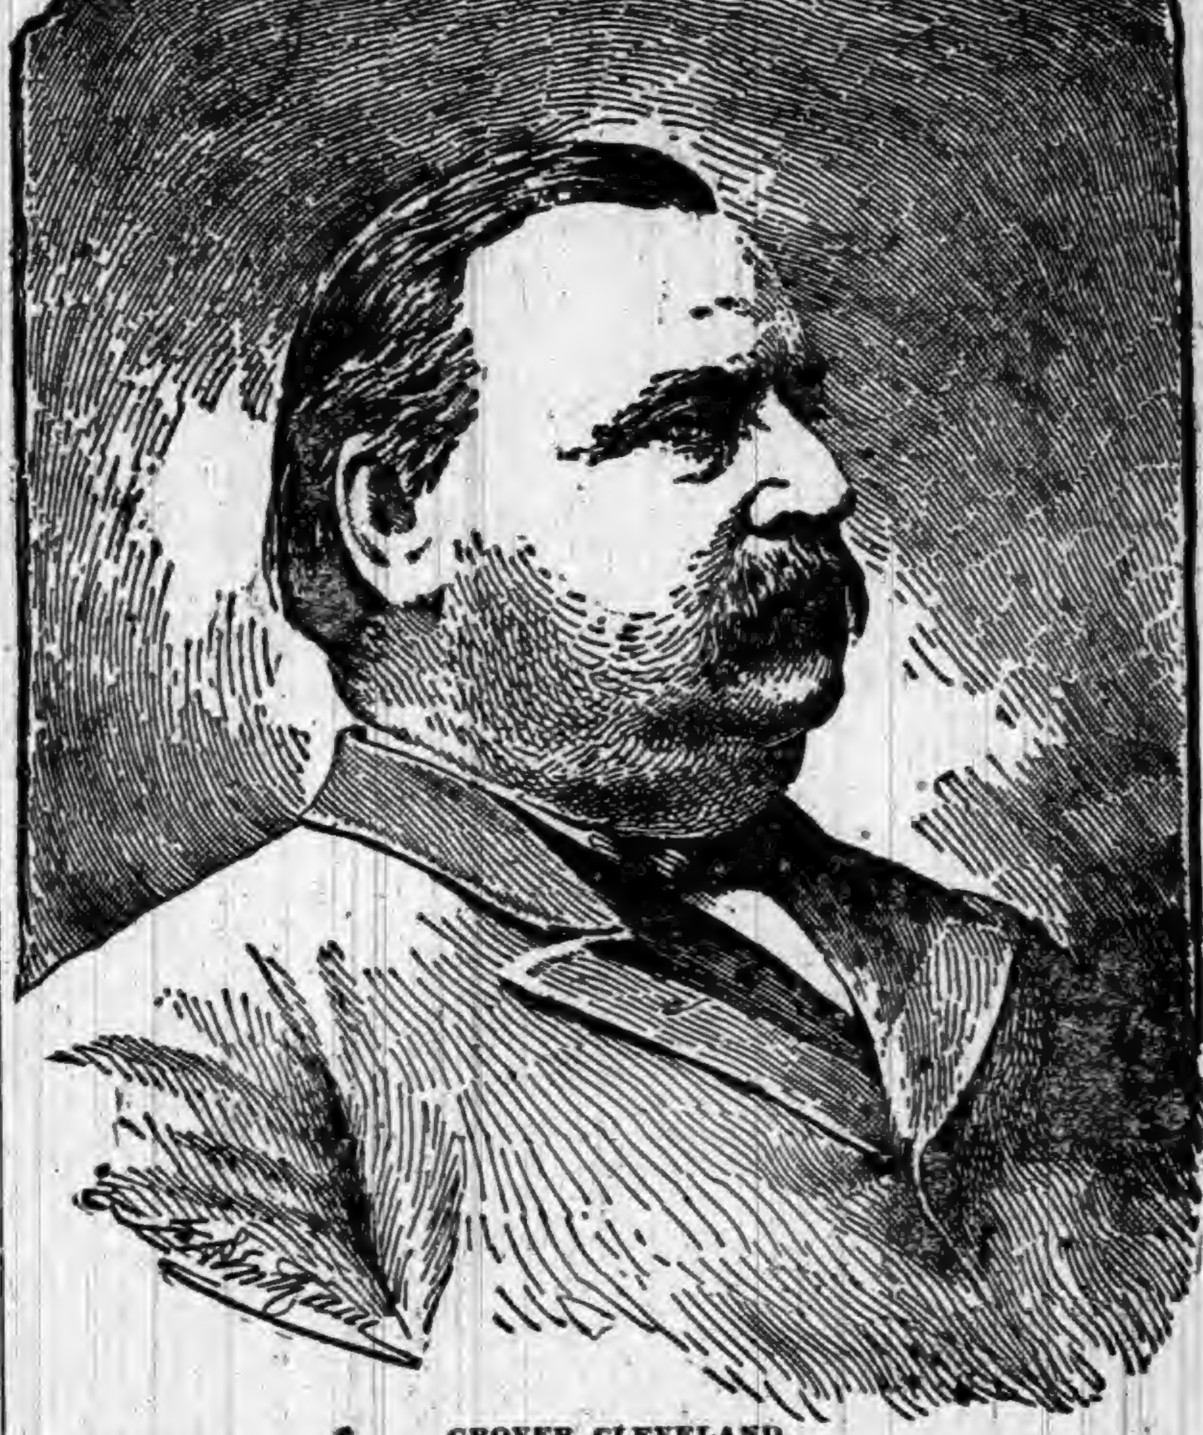
When the first taps of the gavel were heard in the Wigwam Wednesday evening the great building was packed from top to bottom. For more than an hour the thousands of hot and impatient people had been bombarding the barn doors or jostling each other in the tunnel entrances. Under the acre of pine roof the heat was intense. No breeze moved the muggy and stagnant atmosphere.

At the announcement that the Committee on Resolutions was ready to report a wild shout went up, and Editor Jones sidled up to the front of the platform and attempted a little extemporaneous introduction to the committee's report, which was drowned out by yells of "Louder!"

The resolutions were handed to ex-Secretary Vilas, of Wisconsin, but before he had a chance to speak Mr. Patterson, member of the committee from Colorado, who was already on the platform, lifted up his voice and cried that the minority of the committee had a report to make through him, and he should expect the committee to listen to this before ordering the previous question. This suited the convention exactly, and it roared its assent.

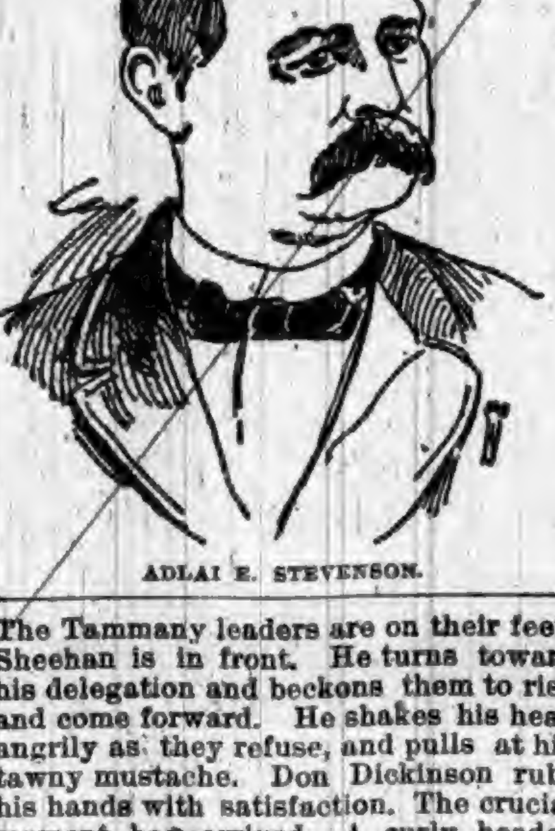


GROVER CLEVELAND.

Reading of the Platform.

Colonel Vilas stepped to the edge of the platform, resolutions in hand, and slowly and with a powerful voice he began the reading. He got on as far as the reference to the Democratic leaders who had succeeded the immortal Jefferson from Madison to Cleveland when he stopped. He had touched off the powder magazine. The explosion was instantaneous, and it shook the wigwam. With one wild, shrill warwhoop of delight the greater part of the convention and the spectators jumped to their feet and waved hats, handkerchiefs, fans, and umbrellas, and uttered shout after shout, and as fast as one set of throats and arms showed signs of weariness another set took up the jubilation and carried it on with increasing volume and greater vibration of light wearing apparel and the adjuncts of hot weather.

The reading finished, like a tin whistle in a hurricane sounded the voice of the Chairman. He called for a vote on the adoption of the platform. "The platform is adopted," he cried, and then without a moment's delay: "The next business is the call of the roll for the nomination of candidates for President." The great amphitheater was in disorder, commotion was everywhere.



ADLAI E. STEVENSON.

The Tammany leaders are on their feet. Sheehan is in front. He turns toward his delegation and beckons them to rise and come forward. He shakes his head angrily as they refuse, and pulls at his tawny mustache. Don Dickinson rubs his hands with satisfaction. The crucial moment has arrived. A curly headed clerk steps to the edge of the platform and sings out in a high nasal tone: "State of Alabama."

A dozen men are standing on chairs asking for information. Fenlon, of Kansas, moves to adjourn. The chair pays no attention to him. "Alabama," again cries the clerk. "Arkansas" was the next, and at the call a tall, lank Southerner mounts his chair. "Arkansas yields her place to New Jersey," he says. There is a great shout. The Cleveland men are smiling. Again Tammany is in turmoil. The whole convention knows that Gov. Abbett, of New Jersey, has been chosen to present the name of Grover Cleveland.

Abbett Names Cleveland.

Slowly the New Jersey Governor walked down the center aisle. He is broad-shouldered, heavily bearded, dignified. He climbs the steps and Chairman Wilson meets him with outstretched hand. In slow and measured tone he began to speak. "It is the name of a man who has twice carried the electoral vote of my State whom I shall name," he declared, and the Cleveland crowds cheered. Gov. Abbett was making a strong, thoughtful speech. Without warning, without rhetorical ornament, he mentioned the name of Cleveland.

The volcano is in uproar. Up, up, all about the hall the delegates are climbing; yelling as they rise.

Above the tumult floats the white banner of Michigan. On either side looks down the face of Cleveland. Up again comes the wild storm of cheers, beating in waves against the snowy ensign. From the seats of Michigan a delegate carries the banner across the aisle to the seats of New York. Gen. Sickles waves his crutch in anger. "Back!" "Back!" cry the chiefs of Tammany. The whole body of delegates face inward about the circumference of the great floor. In the center the Tammany tiger, crouched low, growls ominously at the floating banner of Cleveland. It is like a gigantic prize ring. Lieut. Gov. Sheehan, blue-eyed and smiling, leans over to Don Dickinson. "Don't you worry," he cried. "You have the noise, we the votes." From the galleries hundreds of men, in their shirt sleeves, leaned out into space and screamed.

"The candidate I have named," cries Gov. Abbett, "will carry New York." Up jumps Tammany in protest. "No," they cry, with one voice, and hisses answer them. As chance came, the speaker struggled through his speech. "I nominate that plain, blunt, honest citizen, Grover Cleveland," and so he closed.

A storm of deafening applause united with the thunder of the storm outside seemed to shake the great wigwam from foundation to roof.

At this point proposals to adjourn were volunteered from the galleries, but the convention took a stern view of its duties and kept at work.

Hill and Boies Named.

After the confusion the secretary called the State of Colorado, which replied that it yielded its right to the floor to New York, and New York, in the person of W. C. DeWitt of Brooklyn, took the platform. In due time he said that David Bennett Hill was the candidate of the common people. Mr. DeWitt made ingenious use of Senator Hill's reputation for partisanship, and made a clever appeal to the convention not to nominate a New York man who was not sustained by the delegation of his own State. He distributed graceful compliments to Boies and Palmer and Gorman and Pattison and Carlisle, whose friends were invited to reciprocate.

John F. Duncombe, of Fort Dodge, in a speech characteristic of the brainy Iowan, placed the nomination of Gov. Boies before the convention. At the mention of the Governor's name his adherents became wildly enthusiastic, and, being joined in their applause by several of the other delegations, it was some time before the speaker could conclude.

The nominations being seconded the convention proceeded to ballot, and at 3:20 o'clock Thursday morning the result of the first ballot was announced. The necessary 605 votes had been recorded for Cleveland.

Grover Cleveland's nomination was made unanimous. The convention then adjourned until 2 o'clock Thursday afternoon.

Stevenson for Vice President.

The convention assembled in the afternoon, with Gov. Gray, of Indiana, in a fair way to win the second place, but the New York delegation, by throwing its strength to Adlai E. Stevenson, of Illinois, succeeded in making him the victor. He was then formally declared the nominee for Vice President, and after the usual resolutions, etc., the convention adjourned sine die.

DEMOCRATIC PLATFORM

HOW THE PARTY STANDS ON IMPORTANT QUESTIONS.

Republican Protection Declared to Be a Fraud on Labor to Benefit a Few—A Tariff for Revenue Only—The Coinage Question.

Text of the Resolutions.

The representatives of the Democratic party of the United States, in national convention assembled, do reaffirm their allegiance to the principles of the party as formulated by Jefferson and exemplified by the long and illustrious line of his successors in Democratic leadership from Madison to Cleveland. We believe the public welfare demands that these principles be applied to the conduct of the Federal Government, through the accession to power of the party that advocates them; and we solemnly declare that the need of a return to these fundamental principles of a free, popular government, based on home rule and individual liberty, was never more urgent than now, when the tendency to centralize all power at the Federal Capital has become a menace to the reserved rights of the States that strikes at the very roots of our government under the constitution as framed by the fathers of the republic.

Federal Control of Elections.

We warn the people of our common country, jealous for the preservation of their free institutions, that the policy of Federal control of elections, to which the Republican party has committed itself, is fraught with the gravest dangers, scarcely less momentous than would result from a revolution, practically establishing monarchy on the ruins of the republic. It strikes at the North as well as the South, and injures the colored citizen even more than the white; it means a horde of deputy marshals at every polling place armed with Federal power, returning boards appointed and controlled by Federal authority, the outrage of the electoral rights of the people in the several States, the subjugation of the colored people to the control of the party in power and the reviving of race antagonisms now happily abated, of the utmost peril to the safety and happiness of all; a measure deliberately and justly described by a leading Republican Senator as the "most infamous bill that ever crossed the threshold of the Senate." Such a policy, if sanctioned by law, would mean the dominance of a self-perpetuating oligarchy of officeholders, and the party first intrusted with its machinery could be dislodged from power only by an appeal to the reserved right of the people to resist oppression which is inherent in all self-governing communities. Two years ago this revolutionary policy was emphatically condemned by the people at the polls, but in contempt of that verdict the Republican party has defiantly declared in its latest authoritative utterance that its success in the coming elections will mean the enactment of the force bill and the usurpation of despotic control over elections in all the States. Believing that the preservation of republican government in the United is dependent upon the defeat of the policy of legalized force and fraud, we invite the support of all citizens who desire to see the constitution maintained in its integrity with the laws pursuant thereto which have given our country a hundred years of unexampled prosperity, and we pledge the Democratic party, if it be intrusted with power, not only to the defeat of the force bill, but also to relentless opposition to the Republican policy of profligate expenditure, which in the short space of two years has squandered an enormous surplus and emptied an overflowing treasury, after piling new burdens of taxation upon the already overtaxed labor of the country.

Declaration for Tariff Reform.

We denounce, Republican protection as a fraud on the labor of the great majority of the American people for the benefit of the few. We declare it to be a fundamental principle of the Democratic party that the Federal Government has no constitutional power to impose and collect tariff duties except for the purposes of revenue only, and we demand that the collection of such taxes shall be limited to the necessities of the Government when honestly and economically administered. We denounce the McKinley tariff law enacted by the Fifty-first Congress as the culminating atrocity of class legislation; we indorse the efforts made by the Democrats of the present Congress to modify its most oppressive features in the direction of free raw materials and cheaper manufactured goods that enter into general consumption, and we promise its repeal as one of the beneficent results that will follow the action of the people in intrusting power to the Democratic party. Since the McKinley tariff went into operation there have been ten reductions of the wages of laboring men to one increase. We deny that there has been any increase of prosperity to the country since that tariff went into operation, and we point to the dullness and distress, the wage reductions and strikes in the iron trade, as the best possible evidence that no such prosperity resulted from the McKinley act. We call the attention of thoughtful Americans to the fact that after thirty years of restrictive taxes against the importation of foreign wealth in exchange for our agricultural surplus the homes and farms of the country have become burdened with a real-estate mortgage debt of over $2,500,000,000, exclusive of all other forms of indebtedness; that in one of the chief agricultural States of the West there appears a real-estate mortgage averaging $105 per capita of the total population, and that similar conditions and tendencies are shown to exist in the other agricultural exporting States. We denounce a policy which fosters no industry so much as it does that of the Sheriff.

The Question of Trade Reciprocity.

Trade interchange on the basis of reciprocal advantages to the countries participating is a time-honored doctrine of the Democratic faith, but we denounce the sham reciprocity which juggles with the people's desire for enlarged foreign markets and freer exchanges by pretending to establish closer trade relations, for a country whose articles of export are almost exclusively agricultural products, with other countries that are also agricultural, while erecting a custom-house barrier of prohibitive tariff taxes against the richest countries of the world that stand ready to take our entire surplus of products and to exchange therefor commodities which are necessaries and comforts of life among our own people.

Trusts and Combinations.

We recognize in the trusts and combinations which are designed to enable capital to secure more than its just share of the joint product of capital and labor a natural consequence of the prohibitive taxes which prevent the free competition which is the life of honest trade, but we believe their worst evils can be abated by law, and we demand the rigid enforcement of the laws made to prevent and control them, together with such further legislation in restraint of their abuses as experience may show to be necessary.

Lands for Actual Settlers.

The Republican party, while professing a policy of reserving the public land for small holdings by actual settlers, has given away the people's heritage, until now a few railroad and non-resident aliens, individual and corporate, possess a larger area than that of all our farms between the two seas. The last Democratic administration reversed the improvident and unwise policy of the Republican party touching the public domain and reclaimed from corporations and syndicates, alien and domestic, and restored to the people nearly one hundred million acres of valuable land to be sacredly held as homesteads for our citizens, and we pledge ourselves to continue this policy until every acre of land so unlawfully held shall be reclaimed and restored to the people.

The Coinage of Silver.

We denounce the Republican legislation known as the Sherman act of 1890 as a cowardly makeshift fraught with possibilities of danger in the future which should make all of its supporters, as well as its author, anxious for its speedy repeal. We hold to the use of both gold and silver as the standard money of the country and to the coinage of both gold and silver without discriminating against either metal or charge for mintage, but the dollar unit of coinage of both metals must be of equal intrinsic and exchangeable value or be adjusted through international agreement or by such safeguards of legislation as shall insure the maintenance of the parity of the two metals and the equal power of every dollar at all times in the markets and in the payment of debts; and we demand that all paper currency shall be kept at par with and redeemable in such coin. We insist upon this policy as especially necessary for the protection of the farmers and laboring classes, the first and most defenseless victims of unstable money and a fluctuating currency. We recommend that the prohibitory 10 per cent. tax on State-bank issues be repealed.

Reform of the Civil Service.

Public office is a public trust. We reaffirm the declaration of the Democratic National Convention of 1876 for the reform of the civil service, and we call for the honest enforcement of all laws regulating the same. The nomination of a President, as in the recent Republican convention, by delegations composed largely of his appointees, holding office at his pleasure, is a scandalous satire upon free popular institutions and a startling illustration of the methods by which a President may gratify his ambition. We denounce a policy under which Federal officeholders usurp control of party conventions in the States, and we pledge the Democratic party to reform these and all other abuses which threaten individual liberty and local self-government.

The Nicaragua Canal.

In support of national defense and the promotion of commerce between the States we recognize the early construction of the Nicaragua Canal and its protection against foreign control as of great importance to the United States.

An Honorable Foreign Policy.

The Democratic party is the only party that has ever given the country a foreign policy consistent and vigorous, compelling respect abroad and inspiring confidence at home. While avoiding entangling alliances it has aimed to cultivate friendly relations with other nations, and especially with our neighbors on the American continent, whose destiny is closely linked with our own; and we view with alarm the tendency to a policy of irritation and bluster which is liable at any time to confront us with the alternative of humiliation or war. We favor the maintenance of a navy strong enough for all purposes of national defense and to properly maintain the honor and dignity of the country abroad.

Oppression in Russia and Ireland.

This country has always been the refuge of the oppressed from every land—exiles for conscience sake—and in the spirit of the founders of our government we condemn the oppression practiced by the Russian Government upon its Russian and Jewish subjects, and we call upon our national government, in the interests of justice and humanity, by all right and proper means, to use its prompt and best efforts to bring about a cessation of these cruel persecutions in the dominion of the Czar, and to secure to the oppressed equal rights. We tender our profound and earnest sympathy to those lovers of freedom who are struggling for home rule and the great cause of local self-government in Ireland.

Restriction of Immigration.

We heartily approve all legitimate efforts to prevent the United States from being used as the dumping ground for the known criminals and professional paupers of Europe, and we demand the rigid enforcement of the laws against Chinese immigration and the importation of foreign workmen under contract to degrade American labor and lessen its wages, but we condemn and denounce any and all attempts to restrict the immigration of the industrious and worthy of foreign lands.

Pensions for Soldiers and Sailors.

This convention hereby renews the expression of appreciation of the patriotism of the soldiers and sailors of the Union in the war for its preservation, and we favor just and liberal pensions for all disabled Union soldiers, their widows and dependents, but we demand that the work of the pension office shall be done industriously, impartially, and honestly. We denounce the present administration as incompetent, corrupt, disgraceful, and dishonest.

Waterway Improvements.

The Federal Government should care for and improve the Mississippi River and other great waterways of the republic so as to secure for the interior States easy and cheap transportation to the tide-water. When any waterway of the republic is of sufficient importance to demand the aid of the Government, such aid should be extended upon a definite plan of continuous work until permanent improvement is secured.

The World's Fair.

Recognizing the World's Columbian Exposition as a national undertaking of vast importance, in which the General Government has invited the co-operation of all the powers of the world, and appreciating the acceptance by many of such powers of the invitation so extended and the broad and liberal efforts being made by them to contribute to the grandeur of the undertaking, we are of opinion that Congress should make such necessary financial provision as shall be requisite to the maintenance of the national honor and public faith.

The Common Schools.

Popular education being the only safe basis of popular suffrage, we recommend to the several States most liberal appropriation for the public schools. Free common schools are the nursery of good government, and they have always received the fostering care of the Democratic party, which favors every means of increasing intelligence. Freedom of education, being an essential of civil and religious liberty as well as a necessity for the development of intelligence, must not be interfered with under any pretext whatever. We are opposed to State interference with parental rights and rights of conscience in the education of children, as an infringement of the fundamental Democratic doctrine that the largest individual liberty consistent with the rights of others insures the highest type of American citizenship and the best government.

Admission of the Territories.

We approve the action of the present House of Representatives in passing bills for the admission into the Union as States the Territories of New Mexico and Arizona, and we favor the early admission of all the Territories having the necessary population and resources to entitle them to Statehood; and while they remain Territories we hold that the officials appointed to administer the Government of any Territory, together with the District of Columbia and Alaska, should be bona-fide residents of the Territory or district in which their duties are to be performed. The Democratic party believes in home rule and the control of their own affairs by the people of the vicinage.

Protection of Railway Employes.

We favor legislation by Congress and State Legislatures to protect the lives and limbs of railway employes and those of other hazardous transportation companies, and denounce the inactivity of the Republican party, and particularly the Republican Senate, for causing the defeat of measures beneficial and protective to this class of wage-workers.

The Sweating System.

We are in favor of the enactment by the States of laws for abolishing the notorious sweating system, for abolishing contract convict labor and for prohibiting the employment in factories of children under 15 years of age.

Sumptuary Laws.

We are opposed to all sumptuary laws as an interference with the individual rights of the citizens.

Upon this statement of principles and policies the Democratic party asks the intelligent judgment of the American people. It asks a change of administration and a change of party, in order that there may be a change of system and a change of methods, thus assuring the maintenance, unimpaired, of institutions under which the republic has grown great and powerful.

Miles and Miles of Salt.

One of the natural curiosities of Asia is the Great Salt Desert of Persia, which covers a large territory about seventy miles south of Teheran. C. E. Biddulph, who recently visited this place, says that Darya-i-Namak is an extensive tract of ground, sloping on all sides toward the center, covered with an incrustation of solid salt several feet thick in most places, while in some parts it is of unknown depth. According to Goldthwaite's Geographical Magazine, it must have taken many centuries to form. As he saw it from the mountain top it stretched away for many miles, appearing like a vast frozen lake. It extended as far as the eye could reach toward the south and west and glistened in the sun like a sheet of glass.

His party finally approached the margin of the salt plain and decided to cross it. They found swampy ground for a mile or so and then entered upon the sheet of salt itself. Near the edge the incrustation was thin and the salt sheet was soft, sloppy and mixed with earth. At a distance of three or four miles from the edge the salt looked like solid ice as it is seen on any pond in northern latitudes during the winter. The surface was not quite level but resembled that of ice which had partially thawed and then frozen again after a slight fall of snow. Of the solidity of this incrustation there could be no doubt, for camels, horses and mules were traveling over it without a vibration of any kind being perceptible.

After marching for about eight miles upon this unusual surface the party halted to examine its composition. They tried, by means of a hammer and an iron tent peg, to break off a block of salt to carry away as a specimen. The salt, however, was so very hard that they could make no impression up it. They managed at last in another place to chip off a lot of fragments which were of the purest white. In two or three days they had absorbed so much moisture that they became soft and slately blue in color.

THERE are few more rugged figures among the Scotch scholars of the present generation than is Prof. Blackie, of Edinburgh. Though 83, he has never worn a pair of spectacles, and for thirty years he had no need of medical advice. He attributes the vitality of his old age to his custom of living by an unvarying system, and it is noteworthy that Oliver Wendell Holmes, who is of about the same age and equally well preserved, told an interviewer some time ago that his own good health was due to his habit of living strictly by rule, even to the temperature of his bath. It is interesting to know that Prof. Blackie does not go to bed until the clock strikes 12. He rises at 7:30, and always after his midday meal he takes a nap.

HELP! HELP! THE LADY FAINTS.

"'Tis the twink of an eye,
'Tis the draught of a breath,
From the blossom of health,
To the paleness of death."

When sudden fainting spells come upon a lady, you may always suspect some uterine disturbances or trouble, or some great disorder in the circulation and nerve centers. A remedy that has always proved successful in warding off and removing the tendency to a recurrence of fainting spells—that removes the cause of them, corrects the circulation of blood, and gives to the system that even running nervous energy so essential, is Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

The "Prescription" is guaranteed to give satisfaction in every case, or money refunded. Nothing else does as much. You only pay for the good you get. Can you ask more?

As a regulator and promoter of functional action, at the critical period of change from girlhood to womanhood, "Favorite Prescription" is a perfectly safe remedial agent, and can produce only good results. It is equally efficacious and valuable in its effects when taken for those disorders and derangements incident to that later and most critical period, known as "The change of Life."

The Reciprocity Fake.

United States—Hello! hello!

South America—Hello!

U. S.—Is that you, South America?

S. A.—What do you want?

U. S.—This is United States. You know, we put a reciprocity clause into what we call the McKinley bill, that we passed here last fall?

S. A.—Yes, I heard you did.

U. S.—Well, that clause authorizes the President to put duties on tea, coffee, sugar, molasses and hides.

S. A.—Arn't you mistaken? I thought your constitution gave your Congress full and exclusive power to lay and collect taxes, duties, etc.

U. S.—Yes, so it does, but I haven't time now to discuss a constitution more than a hundred years old and made to suit different times. As I was going to say, the President can put a duty of 3 cents per pound on your coffee, 1½ cents per pound on your hides, and 2 cents per pound on your sugar; if, in his opinion, you unduly tax the goods imported into your countries from the United States. It is to learn what you intend to do in regard to this matter that I called you up.

S. A.—Well now, I'll tell you frankly, Jim Bl——

U. S.—Please mention no names.

S. A.—I beg your pardon, but this is what I think: If your President wishes to put a tax on these articles—all of which are now on your free list—and your people don't object to paying it, I don't see why we should. As to what kind of duties we should have, I think we can decide for ourselves without any foreign interference.

U. S.—Of course we don't wish to interfere, but don't you understand that if we tax our imports of these articles from your countries and not from other countries, you will lose some of your trade up here?

S. A.—Oh, yes, of course we might lose a little with you, but we would gain about as much with other countries. If you tax raw hides and increase their cost to you, your manufacturers will make fewer gloves, shoes, etc., but Europe will make more; so if you tax sugar as you have been doing, your canners and preservers will do less business and Europe will do more in this line. I see clearly that while such a policy might injure us a little it would harm you much more—so much more that I can't think you would be so foolish as to adopt it, but only intend it for a bluff. No; we don't care to swap any tariffs this year.

U. S.—But wait a little; don't talk quite so loudly. After I shall have explained a few things you may take quite a different view.

S. A.—Well, go on.

U. S.—You see we, have had a high protective tariff here for thirty years.

S. A.—Yes, I know that's what you call it. I agree, though, that it's high.

U. S.—Well, the Republican party that made this tariff has been telling the farmers and laborers that it was to help them by giving them home markets, high wages, etc.

S. A.—You didn't have to give reasons to your manufacturers, I guess. They didn't object to a policy that would give them exclusive ownership of your "home markets" and——

U. S.—Please wait until I am through. As I was going to say, the farmers, who expected everything of protection, became spendthrifts, and, because nearly half of their farms were mortgaged, and because farms east of the Mississippi River have lost half of their value, during the last fifteen years, they got it into their heads that "protection" was to blame for all their extravagance and foolishness. The same kind of an absurd idea was taking possession of the wage-earners, who, because they have to do more work or see their wages reduced nearly every year, began to think that protection was at fault, though it was explained to them that it was due to over-production, excessive competition, etc. Well, anyway, by 1890, when McKinley was revising the tariff, a few of us saw clearly that the protection system could not stand much longer, unless it was again repaired, with a view to helping the farmer. It was for this purpose that I—that is, we—hit upon this scheme of reciprocity to open markets in your countries for our farm products.

S. A.—Yes, I see; but you don't expect to find markets for farm products down here? We are in the farming business ourselves, and unless your farmers look well to their laurels they will soon lose some of their markets in Central America and the West Indies, where we are already selling flour and other agricultural products. It is implements of agriculture rather than products of agriculture that we want. It is strange you did not think of this before you promised the farmers to find new markets for them down here.

U. S.—It is unnecessary to cast reflections like this upon our intelligence. When politics is running high here, and the tide is going against us, we must devise some expedient to turn it. We can't always do what is best or promise what is likely to be fulfilled.

S. A.—Oh, yes, I begin to understand; your reciprocity was only a piece of "Jingoism" to catch the farmers' votes and keep the Republican party in power.

U. S.—No, not exactly that; but I don't care to stop to explain everything now. I desire only to give you a few tips so that you will not take matters so seriously, and jump on reciprocity as if it were intended for a sound economic doctrine, instead of a political scheme. This was the mistake made by most of the leaders of Republicanism here when the scheme was first broached. For instance, Senator Dolph said "The cause of protection is being betrayed;" Senator Hale and Tom Reed ridiculed the plan; Major McKinley called it a "Blaine fad," and objected to having it inserted in his tariff bill; the American Economist, our great organ of protection, ridiculed the idea of "trying to revise this defunct and obsolete system of discriminations; and this, too, in order that we make the effort to sell packed meats to meat-packers and breadstuffs to the exporters of grain." I could mention dozens of other Republicans who made fools of themselves by not thinking twice before they spoke. They are all sorry now that they were so premature. It is is amusing now to hear McKinley talking for "protection and reciprocity;" and to read in the American Economist that "reciprocity is the handmaid of protection." The truth is that they recognize that Senator Hale spoke the truth when he said, "The reciprocity feature is the part of the measure (McKinley tariff) which has floated the whole act . . . and kept it from being swamped." Now you understand our predicament. We must make the farmers believe that we really expected that reciprocity would open up new markets for them abroad.

S. A.—But isn't the scheme a sad commentary on your "home market" theory? Doesn't it admit that protection can't make home markets?

U. S.—I don't care to discuss theories now when we are confronted by conditions. But will you not try to help us out by revising your tariff schedules a little—just enough so that we can show our farmers that reciprocity has really opened markets for them, or at least that it has been the means of inducing countries to permit our agricultural products to enter their market under less duty? It matters but little to us that these same markets want manufactured and not agricultural products. Please make some change so that we can announce that "reciprocity treaties" have been made, and that we can continue to import sugar, coffee, and hides free.

S. A.—We will consider your case; but another objection occurs to me just now. Isn't such a policy of discrimination contrary to the policy adopted long ago by your own and several other American republics, which is opposed to "entangling alliances" with countries?

U. S.—Bosh! That's an exploded idea up here, except with a few Democrats who have had but little practical experience in state and foreign affairs for over thirty years.

S. A.—We may be able to accommodate you a little, as you have for years had some of our most important exports on your free list; and, besides, we don't care to be boycotted by your country. We do, however, think that you should have adapted your reciprocity to fit countries that want agricultural products and that have a large commerce. Our people down here don't trade much anyhow. The whole of South America takes less than 2 per cent. of your agricultural products, while Great Britain alone takes 60 per cent. Reciprocity with us may help some of your manufacturers in the same way that "protection" has helped them, but it can't help your farmers and I should think they would soon see through your little game; though if you insist we shall——

Canada—Hello! hello! Is this United States?

U. S.—Yes, yes, and I am certain I am talking to Canada; she always puts in when not wanted and gives me a cold chill. Please state your business.

C.—I called you up to learn what kind of a reciprocity treaty you intend to make with us.

U. S.—We are not considering any reciprocity treaty with you, and we are not certain that we shall do so. We do not care to dicker with you.

C.—But our 5,000,000 people purchase as much of you as the other 51,000,000 people on the Western hemisphere, and we are the only country that buys more from you than we sell to you. For the last forty years you have had a balance of trade in your favor of over $250,000,000, while the balance of trade against you with these other 51,000,000 people was over $1,000,000,000.

U. S.—Really, Canada, I don't care to talk with you now. I would have to explain too many things. I will only say that the farmers of New York State, so far as I can learn, don't want free trade with you even "in spots," such as reciprocity would give, and you know New York is a doubtful State. Good-day.

"Big Labor War Imminent."

Last week we heard of a big combine composed of Carnegie, Phipps & Co., the Homestead Works, and several other big steel mills. It needed no prophet to foretell the reduction of wages now promised. Give a set of organized manufacturers, especially tariff-protected ones, a monopoly of any product and of the labor of the producers as well, and they may be counted upon to depress the price of labor and enhance the price of goods to the full extent of their power. The extent and explanation of these reductions is given in the New York Times of June 10, 1892, as follows:

A WHOLESALE CUT IN WAGES.

While the high-tariff statesmen are talking glibly at Minneapolis about wages and the protected workingman, the Republican and high-tariff manufacturers of iron and steel are conspiring to make a great deal of trouble for them and to enliven the approaching campaign with a great contest for a sharp reduction of the wages of their employes. The story was told in the high-tariff Philadelphia Press on Monday last, under the headlines, "Big Labor War Imminent—Iron Manufacturers Will Make a Wholesale Cut in Wages—Reductions to Vary from 15 to 50 Per Cent.—Workers in a Crippled Condition for a Fight."

The Press explained that the Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers was very soon to be confronted by "a very startling proposition," involving "the largest reduction ever asked for by the manufacturers." It continued as follows:

"The proposition comes to the association through the Mahoning and Shenango Valley Iron Manufacturers' Association, which comprises the great establishments of Brown, Bonnell & Co., the Mahoning Valley Iron Company, Cartwright, McCurdy & Co., Youngstown Rolling Mill Company, Buhl Iron Company, Trumbull Iron Company, and all the other mills in Cleveland and St. Louis."

It then set forth the reductions demanded, saying that "the very first item is an indication of the wholesale slaughter in wages asked for by the manufacturers." This is a reduction from $5.50 to $4.50 per ton for puddling, with additional reductions to be caused by an increase of the quantity of work required. Said the Press:

"The great slaughter comes on the guide, ten-inch, hoop, and cotton-tie mills. Where the rollers, heaters, roughers, and catchers now make $5.88 per ton, they are asked to accept $4.20, and on grades where they now make $5.13 they are asked to be satisfied with $4."

This does not appear to have been foreseen by McKinley and his associates when they largely increased the duty on cotton ties. The price for rolling pipe iron in sheet and jobbing mills is fixed at $2.50 per ton, instead of $3.40. The Press closed its review of the proposed reductions with the following remarks:

"The workers will be brought face to face with a stern determination on the part of the manufacturers to force an acceptance of their scale this year, which, if they succeed, practically means the permanent crippling of the Amalgamated Association. The manufacturers are said to be a unit in their determination to accept nothing less than they propose, and, as a consequence, one of the bitterest struggles that have taken place in iron circles in years is just beginning to dawn."

The Iron Age of the 9th inst. confirms these assertions and publishes the full scale of reductions proposed. Says this authority:

"Large reductions have been made in nearly every department. We are advised that manufacturers at the above places (the Mahoning and Shenango Valleys and Cleveland district) have a thorough understanding among themselves, and that this scale is in the nature of an ultimatum from them from which they will not recede."

The Pittsburg manufactures have not yet formulated the reductions which they will demand, but the Iron Age reports that trouble has arisen "at the Homestead Steel Works of Carnegie, Phipps & Co."

"It is understood that the reason for this is that the firm have made large reductions in the scale, which the men are not willing to accept."

The changes proposed by Mr. Carnegie and his associates "mean a clear reduction of about 17 per cent. to every man who works by tonnage. In addition to this, other large reductions are made, in some cases over 25 per cent." The workmen have been told that they must sign the new scale "on or before June 24."

There are several gentlemen in Minneapolis who should not overlook this news. One of them is Mr. H. W. Oliver, chairman of the convention's sub-committee on the tariff, who reported to the iron and steel manufacturers after the passage of the McKinley bill that the rates in the new iron and steel schedule "were those proposed by the manufacturers themselves." Another is ex-Speaker Reed, who declared that the manufacturers had "obtained just what they wanted," and who said at Buffalo on Oct. 15, 1890:

"They ask me whether I consider the McKinley bill just to the poor. Well, I should say so. A bill which has for its object the aiding of the poor by raising their wages, it seems to me, is a just one."

Mr. McKinley himself should meditate upon the great reductions now demanded by the iron manufacturers of his own State. Perhaps the convention can be induced to say something in its platform about the impending conflict between the manufacturers and their workmen.

New Sanitary Ware Trust.

When McKinley raised the duties on sanitary pottery ware from 55 to 65 and 70 per cent. by putting duties on packing cases, the seven manufacturers at Trenton, with one at East Liverpool, Ohio, and one in Baltimore, practically had a trust, though each firm owned its own factory. Since duties were increased the manufacturers, some of whom have made millions in a few years, cut wages about 15 per cent. after a long strike against a reduction of 10 to 40 per cent. This method of doing business by "understandings" or "agreements" is not entirely satisfactory to the manufacturers, and on May 28 five of the big manufacturers at Trenton incorporated in one company with a capital of $3,000,000. Those in the combine are the Empire Pottery, Enterprise Pottery, Delaware Pottery, Equitable Pottery, and Crescent Pottery.

Column advertisements of the stock of this new trust in New York papers, say "these five companies manufacture and sell about 75 per cent. of the entire output of the famous sanitary plumbing ware made in this country. The earnings for 1891 will pay the dividends on the preferred stock (8 per cent.), and over 16 per cent. on the common stock, after providing for the expense of management. The venders express the belief that the economies and improved system in the conduct of business that can be put in operation by the proposed combination of these companies will still further increase the net earnings."

The men who had their wages reduced in 1891 must relish this kind of talk. Consumers who are acquainted with the "economies of trusts" will expect soon to receive another "revised" price list of sanitary ware, similar to the one issued in April, 1891, advancing the price of goods.

These same manufacturers also announced that "the manufacture of these goods requires skilled labor of the highest grade." It might be supposed from this declaration that these highly skilled laborers were receiving unusually high wages. In 1883, the Bureau of Labor of New Jersey collected accurate statistics of the earnings of workmen in a representative pottery in Trenton. They are as follows:

Hollow ware pressers	$10.38
Dish makers	16.35
Flat pressers	12.18
Handlers	9.12
Jiggerers	17.10
Turners	12.19

The commissioner said "many of these workmen are among the most rapid operators in Trenton." Many of the workmen have submitted to several reductions since 1883, making great inroads into their princely salaries. The "economies and improved system" of this new trust may be counted on to close down at least one of these potteries, or in some other way to throw out one-fifth of these men.

The dependence of wages upon tariffs is demonstrated with remarkable clearness in this industry. While duties have been going up wages have been going down. It is the object of a protective tariff, as explained in the Minneapolis platform, to levy duties on imported articles equal to the difference in wages at home and abroad. The duties on pottery not only cover this difference, but, in some kinds of ware, they are two or three times the total labor cost of making such ware in Trenton.

Monopolies and Millionaires.

The New York Tribune has published a list of 4,095 millionaires in the United States to show that the majority of them have not made their wealth in protected industries. It, however, finds that 1,175 of these have removed themselves thus far from the poor-house largely by the aid of "protection." After omissions are supplied, which good judges say are numerous, it will probably be found that there are 5,000 of these tariff beneficiaries, tax-evaders, and land sharks among us.

Supposing that they will average $4,000,000 apiece, these few men, less than 1-100 of 1 per cent. of our population, then own $20,000,000,000, or over 30 per cent. of our total wealth, which according to our last census was $63,548,000,000. It is entirely reasonable that 100,000 more persons can be found whose total accumulations will add $20,000,000,000 more, making fully 50 per cent. of our total wealth in the hands of 1-6 of 1 per cent. of our population. It is quite probable that 1 per cent of our population owns 80 per cent., and perhaps 90 per cent., of all our wealth, and the gap between the rich and the poor is growing wider and more threatening every day.

Read in any part of this list and you will be convinced that the sources of every one of these fortunes have been in monopoly of some kind. The greatest monopoly, if the Tribune's data are correct, is that of land in different forms—lots, farms, mines, etc. This appears to have made more than one-half of our millionaires. The second is undoubtedly that from tariff taxation, giving a few of our manufacturers the monopoly of our markets, a monopoly they have made doubly secure by means of trusts in nearly every protected industry. Other and less objectionable monopolies come from patent and copy rights, government contracts, etc. The most striking feature of these millionaire producing monopolies is that they are nearly all the direct results of tariff taxation, or they can be removed by direct taxation that shall neither take from the poor to give the rich nor leave any person in possession of what he has not earned.

Republican Platform on the Tariff.

The New York World, speaking of the Republican party, as portrayed in its recent platform, says: "It reiterates its preposterous claim that the country has been made prosperous by taxation—which is equivalent to saying that if crops grow in spite of frosts, frost is good for crops."

THE argument put forward in defense of the McKinley tariff by Andrew Carnegie, that "it possesses free-trade features to a greater extent than protective ones," is intended for English use only. On this side of the water the tariff is defended for other reasons.

A DISPATCH from Guayquil, Ecuador, says that Marie Juneau, a French woman, has given birth to seven perfectly formed and healthy babies.

CHAIRMAN WILSON'S SPEECH.

An Eloquent Arraignment of Republican Fraud and Hypocrisy.

Hon. Wm. L. Wilson, of West Virginia, on being presented as permanent Chairman of the National Democratic Convention, said:

GENTLEMEN OF THE CONVENTION: I thank you most heartily for this honor. I shall try to meet the duties of the high position to which you call me with the spirit of fairness and equality that is Democracy. This convention has a high and patriotic work to perform. We owe much to our party; we owe more to our country. The mission of the Democratic party is to fight for the under dog. When that party is out of power we may be sure there is an under dog to fight for, and that the under dog is generally the American people. When that party is out of power we may be sure that some party is in control of our Government that represents a section and not the whole country; that stands for a class and not the whole people.

Never was this truth brought home to us more defiantly than by the recent convention at Minneapolis. We are not deceived as to the temper, we are not in doubt as to the purpose of our opponents. Having taxed us for years without excuse and without mercy they now propose to disarm us of further power to resist their exactions. Republican success in this campaign, whether we look to the party platform, the party candidates, or the utterances of the party leaders, means that the people are to be stripped of their franchise through force bills in order that they may be stripped of their substance through tariff bills.

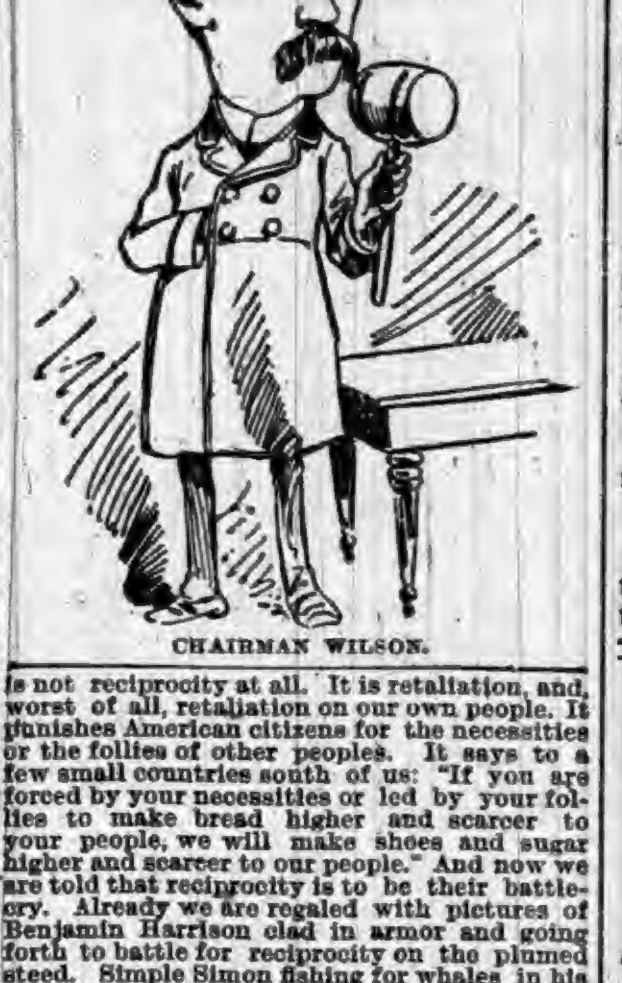
Free government is self-government. There is no self-government where the people do not control their own elections and levy their own taxes. When either of those rights is taken away or diminished, a breach is made, not in the outer defenses, but in the citadel of our freedom. For years we have been struggling to recover our lost right of taxing ourselves, and now we are threatened with the loss of the greater right of governing ourselves. The loss of the one follows in necessary succession the loss of the other. When you confer on government the power of dealing out wealth you unchain every evil that can prey upon and eventually destroy free institutions—excessive taxation, class taxation, billion-dollar Congresses, a corrupt civil service, a debauched ballot box, and purchased elections. In every campaign the privilege of taxing the people will be bartered for contributions to corrupt them at the polls. After every victory there will be a new McKinley bill to repay these contributions, with usury, out of taxes wrung from the people. For every self-governing people there can be no more momentous question than that of taxation. It is the question, as Mr. Burke truly said, around which all the great battles of freedom have been fought. It is the question out of which grow all the issues of government. Until we settle this question wisely, permanently, justly, we build all other reforms on a foundation of sand.

We and the great party we represent are to-day for tariff reform because it is the only gateway to genuine democratic government. The distinguished leader who presided over the Republican convention boasted that he does not know what tariff reform is. Let us hope, with that charity that endureth all things, and believeth all things, that he is fully as ignorant as he vaunts himself to be. Unfortunately the people are not so ignorant of the meaning of protection; at least of the protection which is doled out to them in the bill that bears his name. They see that meaning written large to-day in a prostrated agriculture, in a shackled commerce, in stricken industries, in the compulsory idleness of labor, in law-made wealth, in the discontent of the workingman and the despair of the farmer. They know by hard experience that protection as a system of taxation is but the old crafty scheme by which the rich compel the poor to pay the expenses of government. They know by hard experience that protection as a system of tribute is but the old crafty scheme by which the power of taxation of the people is made the private property of a few of the people.

Tariff reform means to readjust this system of taxation and to purge away this system of tribute. It means that we have not reached the goal of perfect freedom so long as any citizen is forced by law to pay tribute to any other citizen and until our taxes are proportioned to the ability and duty of the taxpayer rather than to his ignorance, his weakness and his patience. Governor McKinley further charges that the Democratic party believes in taxing ourselves. I am afraid, gentlemen, we must admit this charge. What right or excuse have we for taxing anybody else? With a continent for a country, with freedom and intelligence as the instruments for its development, we stand disgraced in the eyes of mankind if we can not and if we do not support our own government. We can throw that support on other people only by beggary or by force. If we use the one we are a pauper nation; if we use the other we are a pirate nation.

The Democratic party does not intend that we should be either. No more does it intend that they shall falsely call it taxing other people to transfer the expenses of government from the possessions of those who own the property of the country to the bellies and backs of those who do the work of the country. It believes that frugality is the essential virtue of free government. It believes that taxes should be limited to public needs, and be levied by the plain rule of justice and equality.

But, gentlemen, we are confronted with a new cry in this campaign. The Republican party, says Governor McKinley, now stands for protection and reciprocity. He was for protection alone when he framed his bill in the House, or rather permitted its beneficiaries to frame it for him, and firmly resisted all efforts of the statesman from Maine to annex reciprocity to it. No wonder that he favors the reciprocity added by the Senate. You may explore the pages of burlesque literature for anything more supremely ludicrous than the so-called reciprocity of the McKinley bill. It is not reciprocity at all. It is retaliation, and, worst of all, retaliation on our own people. It punishes American citizens for the necessities or the follies of other peoples. It says to a few small countries south of us: "If you are forced by your necessities or led by your follies to make bread higher and scarcer to your people, we will make shoes and sugar higher and scarcer to our people." And now we are told that reciprocity is to be their battle-cry. Already we are regaled with pictures of Benjamin Harrison clad in armor and going forth to battle for reciprocity on the plumed steed. Simple Simon fishing for whales in his mother's rain-barrel, and in great triumph capturing an occasional wiggle-waggle, is the only true, realistic picture of the reciprocity of the McKinley bill.



CHAIRMAN WILSON.

We are for the protection that protects, and for the reciprocity that reciprocates. We are in favor of protecting every man in the enjoyment of the fruit of his labor, diminished only by his proper contribution to the support of the Government, and we are for that real reciprocity, not through dickering diplomacy and Presidential proclamations, but by laws of Congress, that removes all unnecessary obstacles between the American producer and the markets he is obliged to seek for his products.

But, gentlemen, I must not keep you from the work that is before you. Let us take up that work as brothers, as patriots, as Democrats.

It is not for me, gentlemen, the impartial servant of you all, to attempt to foreshadow what your choice shall be or ought to be, in the selection of our candidates. You will make that selection under a deep sense of responsibility to the people you represent and to your country. One thing only I venture to say: Whoever may be your chosen leader in this campaign, no telegram will flash across the sea from the castle of absentee tariff lords to congratulate him. But from the home of labor, from the fireside of the toiler, from the hearts of all those who love justice and equity, who wish and intend that our matchless heritage of freedom shall be the common-wealth of all our people and the common opportunity of all our youth, will come up prayers for his success and recruits for the great Democratic host that must strike down the beast of sectionalism and the moloch of monopoly, before you can have ever again a people's government run by a people's faithful representatives.

Kleptomania Caused by a Fall.

A curious case of kleptomania is reported from Milan, Italy. A rich Russian had been thrown off his horse and landed on his head. He was confined to his bed for a long time, but was finally pronounced cured. He was all right bodily, but immediately commenced stealing the jewelry of his brother and sisters. There seems to be no help by the common doctors' practice, and the patient has to look for a cure in a private asylum for the deranged.

Opening for a Young Man.

Ambitious Youth—I see you advertise for a private secretary?

Millionaire—Yes. Did you ever play base ball?

"Um—yes; I've always been very fond of base ball, but, of course, I would not neglect my employer's interest to attend a game. No, indeed, sir!"

"Are you a good player?"

"Well, yes; for an amateur."

"Belong to a nine?"

"Yes; but I'll resign if you wish. I'm captain and catcher of the Nevermuff club."

"Good! You'll do."

"Eh? I thought you wanted a secretary."

"So I do. But I want a secretary who can catch the bombs which the cranks throw at me, so the infernal things won't hit the floor and explode."—Puck.

Couldn't Board Him Free.

Young Man Lodger—Will you marry me?

Landlady—Let me see. You have boarded with me four years. You have paid promptly. You have never grumbled at your food. No; I cannot marry you.

"Perhaps if I had acted like Duffer and abused the coffee, grumbled at the scarcity of butter, always been a month behind in pay, you would have married me."

"Yes, perhaps I would. As it is I will marry Duffer."

"What!"

"Yes, I will mary Duffer. He needs some discipline. You are too good a boarder to put on the free list.—Tid-Bits.

All Aboard!

Make haste. Your baggage is all right, but have you got a supply of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters? No! Then you have made a sad omission, and if you are troubled with stomachic qualms en route—if you are sea sick, my dear sir, or madam, you will have deserved your fate. How dreadfully the waves or the jarring of the engine or screws shake you up! Now there is a mute but awful call to the ship's side. Now, if you had the Bitters along with you this wouldn't happen. Travelers and tourists, take our advice, and before you start on your yachting or ocean voyage, your coast-wise trip or inland outing, obtain the Bitters, and thus fortify yourselves against stomachic difficulties, malaria, dyspepsia, and the effects of exposure in rough weather or bad diet or water. Take it, too, for biliousness, kidney trouble, and rheumatism.

Syrians in Gotham.

The recent signs of activity among the Syrian residents of New York City, who number about 1,000 are interesting. They now have a weekly paper of their own, printed here in Arabic, and they also have formed an organization known as the Syrian Society of New York, which will have a free reading-room and school for the benefit of those who need them. The Syrians live in extreme squalor and poverty near the Battery: yet one of ther leaders, Ameer Haddad, who is a doctor and a scholar, says that a good many more immigrants from Syria will land this year.

Dear housewife are you burning that youthful complexion of yours away, over the heat of a red-hot stove? Stop that folly at once and buy a nice neat and convenient Gasolene Stove, the use of which will preserve your beauty and health, so far as a stove has to do with health and good looks.

The editor of this paper met O. J. Powell, formerly of the Garrett Herald, when in Chicago last week. He is looking well and evidently prospering. He still takes a deep interest in DeKalb county, and especially his old home, Garrett, and he often wonders why a live town like Garrett, does not establish a newspaper.

Complaint comes from some of our citizens, about abuse to horses. While the roads have been so bad, teams are forced to pull full loads, though the roads are so bad as to make this more than double the work on good roads. It would be more humane if these poor animals could be given a rest till the roads are better or if not that, if they must keep going, then give them lighter loads, as much lighter as the roads are worse.

The ratification meeting at Garrett Saturday evening was a success every way. Mr McNagny made a brilliant and effective speech, and made an excellent impression. The attendance was good and the audience listened to him with the most earnest attention. A good many had arranged to go over from Auburn but when it was learned how bad the roads were, so that the teams could not take half as many as usual, the trip was reluctantly abandoned. But those who did go, say it was in everyway a gratifying success. Our candidate for the legislature, Marion Franks was present, and made a neat speech. He is proving what we have always said that he is a man of ability.

Judge McClellan, who remained at Chicago to the close of the convention, describes the last hours of the great meeting as very interesting and exciting. At times there appeared as much interest felt, as when voting on the nomination of president. And right at that time, came on the terrible storm that swept over the city. Total darkness enveloped everything, and made many apprehensive that the vast building would be torn down over their heads. The band was called on to play and the crowd broke out into the new campaign song:

> "Grover, Grover, four more years of Grover,
> In he goes,
> Out they go;
> Then we'll be in clover."

They were led by a delegate who stood up on the chairs, and the vast audience joined in and swelled the chorus with a mighty voice. The thunder roared, and in places, the water poured in in torrents, but the song kept on, and was not only a pleasant diversion but helped to allay the fears of the crowd, and possibly prevented a panic. Another exciting episode occurred, just before the people left the hall. A big electric lamp fell, and came near hurting several, but fortunately did no serious damage. Our judgment as to the size of the wigwam is, that it was about the size of the public square in Auburn, and more than 20,000 people were in it, at one time. The work of pulling it down began the next day.

Whoever the two-thirds vote of the national convention at Chicago nominates will be the strongest man in the democratic party, and he will be the representative of the party to be supported by the whole party.—Roswell P. Flower.

Ha! Ha!! It makes me smile all over my face to think that J. Beuret has the new process Gasolene Stove that takes lead for neatness, convenience and general durability. He sells them at such reasonable rates that anybody can afford to buy.

W. H. McIntosh has the most abundant and beautiful patch of poppies, or did have, that we have ever seen. Of course, they are now past their most lovely season, but while it lasted, they made a scene of bright colors and beauty almost bewildering.

The band practices nearly every evening. Now if we could play as well as the Auburn Band, we would rest easy and wait for some one to come along who could beat us, and we would have a long rest, for not many can stand up and toot a horn with our boys.

The Loyal Temperance Legion, of which a note was made last week, will give its first entertainment, a free one, next Tuesday eve. Read the notice, and don't forget these worthy young people. Go and hear them. It will cost nothing, will do you good while giving them encouragement.

Orva Kuhlman started yesterday morning for Denver, Col., where he expects to make his permanent home, if his health improves. He has been in Mr. Harter's employ for several years, and has made for himself many friends who will join with the COURIER in wishing him success in his new field.

The third party folks had a good attendance at the Ben. Terrill meeting Monday. The opera house was full, but Terrill was a disappointment to many of the spectator. Much of his theory is of the wildest and most visionary character. The party will not be a success that follow such leaders.

We would like to have our readers turn once more to the COURIER of the past three or four weeks and notice the amount of fresh, original, local matter. No other paper of the county gave so much matter, or so full reports of the several important events occurring. It takes hard work and plenty of it to get up a good paper.

South Bend Times: Senator Vilas expresses the utmost con fidence that Wisconsin will give her electoral vote to Cleveland. Don Dickinson promises Michigan, and Senator Palmer says Illinois will be recorded for Grover. Under such a promising condition of things there is no occasion for gloomy forebodings, despite the boasts of Chauncey Depew and other republican lights.

While at Chicago last week we met several Auburn boys. Frank Davenport, Ollie Buss, Dan Link, Jerry Bitner and Romeo Tarney. Frank and Ollie are employed in the large wholesale drugstore of Lord, Owen & Co. Dan is studying law, Jerry is setting type of course, and Romeo is working for a house that does decorating, etc. All are getting along nicely we are glad to say.

We have received a copy of the new Year Book of DePauw University, Greencastle, Indiana. The progress which this institution has made during the last few years has been phenomenal. The enrollment for the year in all the schools is 1,063, an increase of 102 over last year. This is the largest attendance in the history of the University. There is an increase in all of the departments. The reputation of the institution has extended far and wide, and students are in attendance from all parts of the nation, and from different nationalities. The University is keeping pace with the progress of the times. The poor young men and women have a chance. John P. D. John is President.

E. H. Fisher, one of our popular teachers was in town Saturday. He had just returned from Ft Wayne, where he has been prosecuting his studies for some months. He will spend the summer vacation canvassing for that masterpiece of American history, Lossing's Cyclopoedia of U. S. History, a work that stands at the head of its department of literature, as Webster's dictionary is at the head of that department. Mr. Fisher will probably start out on his first canvass in Wilmington township next week. We speak for him a generous patronage, as he makes his rounds among our patrons. Notice of the localities he will canvass, and of the good words said of the work by leading educators will appear from time to time.

The Auburn Rflies got their new suits last week, and they look as neat as West Point cadets. In fact if their uniforms were gray, it would take an expert to tell the difference. If they don't get the prize at Angola, next week, we shall feel surprised.

I regard Garfield Black as a royal little gentleman with no aristocracy, but that of golden speech. Clear headed, keen eyed, with the power and grace of a Greek. To hear him is to know him; to know him is to love him.

Mrs. Rebecca Dickinson started Monday night for another extended visit with her sister, whose home is at Bodkins, Shelby county, Ohio. She will remain there till August. The sister is in poor health, and has been for about seven years, and as she is now over 81, Mrs. Dickinson feels that she should go and be with her for a time. Mrs. D's son John Sibert, resides there.

Barnabas C. Hobbs one of the best known educators in Indiana, died last week at his home in Bloomingdale in Parke county. He was state superindent of public instruction about 1869 and assisted at the DeKalb county institute that Mr. McIntosh held in Auburn that year. Those who met him then will not soon forget the earnest, stately yet very gentle and scholarly old man, who had traveled across the state to meet with and assist and encourage the teachers of this comparatively new county. He made an excellent impression on all. He has since held several honorable positions, and his death removes one of the brightest of the pioneer school men of the state.

A letter from Mrs. D. S. Cochran at Ontario, Calif., dated June 9, says their wheat and barley are all cut at that date, and they have had fine weather. By the last of June, they say the fruit season will be on them, a very important season for that section. After speaking of the good health of herself, Dave and Mary, and sending good wishes to the COURIER folks, she adds: "We always look for COURIER every Tuesday and it is always thoroughly read and enjoyed. If you want to learn how to thoroughly appreciate it yourself, just leave Auburn for a few years." To which we would respond, we are thankful for the good words, as well as for the other "remembrance" the letter contained.

Mrs. Jerry Bitner, who has been here visiting Frank Hoff's family, was called home to Chicago this week by a telegram stating that her husband had typhoid fever, contracted as we suppose, by his recent fishing trip.

Gugerli, the merchant tailor, has moved to the Mart Sheets building south of the jail, and will be there about two months, till his new building is done. Don't forget this change.

Lagrange Democrat: Our Clearspring correspondent sends us the following political information: Did you notice it? The democrats carried New York in 1868, lost it in 1872, carried it again in 1876, lost it in 1880, carried it in 1884 and lost it in 1888. According to the regular order it must go democratic again this year. It is the same year with Indiana—republican in 1872, democratic in 1876, republican in 1880, democratic in 1884, republican in 1888 and this year democratic, and don't you forget. So mote it be.

We are informed of the publication of a novelty in the book line which is certain of an enoromous sale. This book is "Glimpses of the world. A Portfolio of Photographs" prepared under the supervision of the great traveler and lecturer —John L. Stoddard. It contains photographic views so famous scenes and places in all parts of the world. Every view is fully described. As an educator it is invaluable. It contain 550 pages, and nearly 275 views, and is sold by subscrition at popular prices. The B. S. Peale Co., Chicago, are the publishers and they desire an agent in this locality. They will gladly mail descriptive circulars, sample views and terms to all, on application.

J. G. Clapp has sold his photograph gallery, and will go to the city in about a month. He is a good artist and deserves the good patronage he has received here. He sold to a man named Landis, not the man he bought out when he came here, but another of the same name. He will take possession in a month or so.

A. L. Reinœhl, who some years ago was a leading teacher of this county, died last week at his home in National City, Calif. He resided at Fairfield Center, and many relatives live there yet. After leaving his home at Fairfield he practiced law at Garrett for a time, and then went west. It is said he was in good circumstances. See his obituary elsewhere.

The Auburn Normal School is likely to have a large patronage this year, larger than ever before. Mr. Coe informs us they never had such flattering prospects as at present. The session begins July 11, and closes August 19. Mr. Harrison and Mr. Coe are too well known to need good words from anyone. Their work shows for them. We hope to see a large attendance.

Miss Blanche Daviron, of Waterloo, called up to see the COURIER, Monday. She is working in the office of her father's paper, the People's Advocate, setting type, etc. Still we dare not call her a "devil," much less a "she devil," for she is really a good looking and sensible young lady. And that is the kind we always see in printing offices. The COURIER has two of them.

John Shugers brought in some specimens of wheat this week, that shows a new danger from the bad weather we are having. The heads are either utterly empty in the upper half, or are filled with a worthless, half-grown kernel, and the covering of the berry, as well as the awns or beards begin to look rusty and dead. At present, the outlook for crops is bad, and even the grass and clover will not be a success, with the weather as wet as it has been.

Residents of the south part of town complain that some of the boys in that section take a dangerous delight in setting their dogs on to people, usually strangers, but some times on well known residents. Only a few days ago, a little child was sent up town, on an errand, and was attacked by a small dog. Whether these troubles are caused by vicious dogs or vicious boys, a stop should be put to the practice. A child's life is worth more than all the worthless dogs of DeKalb county.

We received last week, a paper from Westerville, Ohio, with protraits, notices, etc., of the graduating class in Otterbein University. Mr. Sanders the president is well known here, as he was several years in charge of the Butler schools, and we see he is continuing his ably work at Westerville. Among the graduates, we find Miss Flora, daughter of Isaac Spear, of Waterloo, and note with pleasure, the compliments she receives at the hands of the "class poet." Her picture, however, does not do her justice. However that is no business of the COURIER'S and we send her our heartiest congratulations.

Everybody should hear the boy orator, Garfield Black, at the Presbyterian church Saturday evening.

Dr. Mathews of Hudson was here yesterday. He is now on his farm and appears in much better health, than when we saw him last.

The "Boy Orator may be heard on Saturday eve. Every one who has ever heard him would not miss the opportunity to hear him again.

Children's exercises were held at the Lutheran church last Sunday evening, and were about the best they ever had, and the attendance was great, in spite of the bad weather.

Rev. H. Stackhouse will preach and administer baptism at Hopewell, next Sunday at 3 p. m., and Rev. L. Coomer, of Marion, Ind., will preach at Butler Center at 8 p. m., same day.

Notice the removal of Gugerli, the merchant tailor, to the Sheets' building. He will have ample means to accommodate all his patrons, So call there when you want a good suit of fashionable clothes.

At the contest at St. Joe Saturday evening, we hear that a little girl of that place received the gold medal. We had two from here and of course we wished to have it come to Auburn. They all did so well.

Next Monday is the grand and glorious old Fourth. But if the weather comes good, very few farmers will celebrate With work in corn, clover and grass all at once, and getting in shape for harvest, there will be no rest for some time.

Having heard Garfield Black, the "Boy Orator" several times, I take great pleasure in commending him to the public. His public entertainments have seen much applause. Hear him by all means.

Work on the new Gugerli block begins this week. He moves the frame building out and will take it to the lot west of his residence. The new building will be brick, two stories in front, and we believe three at the rear and will not only be a good business room, but an addition to the looks of that part of the street.

The Loyal Temperance Legion, will give their first entertainment on next Friday evening at the Baptist church. The program promises to be one of interest, and will begin at 8 o'clock. No admission fee, so everybody come but don't forget your pocketbooks. Come and encourage these boys and girls.

L. Bowers was over at Albion last week, Tuesday when they had the hard storm. He said it did a good deal of damage to chimneys, signs and even to buildings. Elza Shaffer had the transom over his store door blown in. Many shade trees and orchard trees were uprooted, and in many places filled the street, making it difficult to get along.

The Ashley Times, is the second newspaper started at the seat of the boom on our north boundary. The Hudson Sun had set in clouds and thick darkness, about three weeks before, but the new paper at the new site seems to bid fair for a longer life. It is published in the first building put up in the cornfields at Ashley, and is a bright, newsy sheet. We suppose it will be assisted by the townsite company till the town grows, when it can take care of itself. We shall keep our eye on the Times, and hope Brother Slayer is also a stayer.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF DeKALB COUNTY.

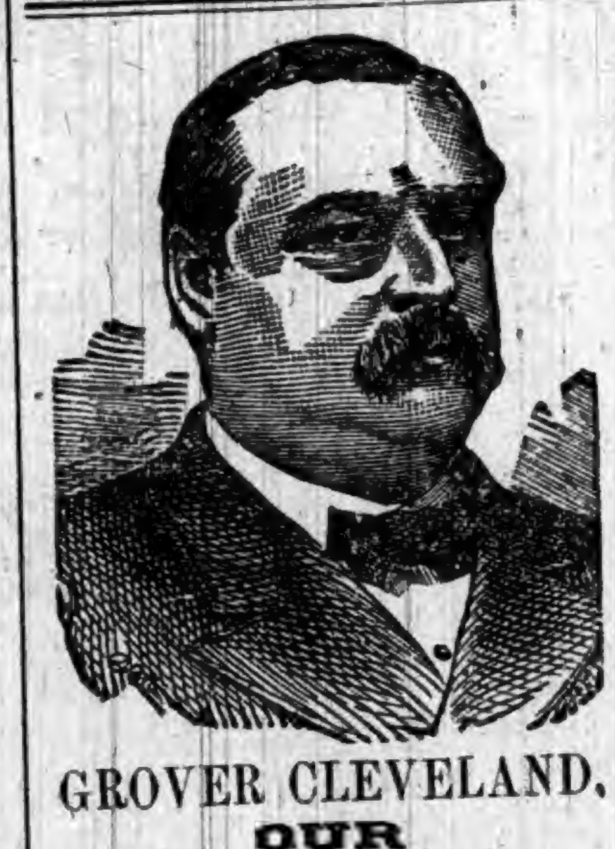
THURSDAY............JUNE 30, 1892.



GROVER CLEVELAND,

OUR

NEXT PRESIDENT.

NATIONAL DEMOCRATIC TICKET.

For President.
GROVER CLEVELAND, of New York.
For Vice-President,
ADLAI E. STEVENSON, of Illinois.

CLEVE AND STEVE.

THE ticket is a winner.

CLEVELAND will get there.

McNAGNY is already there.

CLEVELAND and STEVENSON.

DEMOCRATS are for Grover all over.

WITH Stevenson on the national ticket, Senator Palmer says we can carry Illinois.

THE nomination of Stevenson for vice-president is generally believed to add strength to the ticket.

GOV. FLOWER, of New York, has wheeled into line for Cleveland. He says he never had an idea of being a sorehead.

GOV. GRAY had not desired the vice-presidency, and told his friends so. Therefore, the convention has left no sore places to be healed.

TERRIBLE rains with much damage to bridges, railroads, crops, etc., reported over the country last week, especially in the west and northwest.

THE Indianapolis light artillery scored a grade of 98.7 at the great Omaha drill last week. This is about the highest record ever made in a competitive drill.

REPUBLICANS are being driven step by step to adopt democratic ideas. Look at the reciprocity scheme, which is the democratic idea of free trade on a small scale. Look at free sugar and now at the tendency to have free ships.

DELANO E. WILLIAMSON, a life-long republican residing at Greencastle is said to have come out for Cleveland and reform in tariff taxes. He says war taxes, should now come down. He was attorney-general of this state some years ago.

THE democratic press all over the country as far as heard from is a unit for Cleveland, since the nomination. Some had originally prefered some other man. But they realize that all cannot be suited and that it is now Cleveland or Harrison.

CORN bread is making its way into Europe slowly, in spite of prejudices against it. In Berlin it is called "Murphy-brod," from the name of the man who has done so much to get Germans to eat it. The sale of corn abroad is likely to increase.

REPUBLICAN bosses, when they meet a democrat, say "the ticket just suits republicans", then go off behind the barn and weep, and it don't seem to make any difference which ticket they are talking about either. They don't mean what they say in either case, but tears tell

THE tin industry that was to start up at Anderson, under the benign influence of the McKinly tariff, turns out to be a small affair, in which imported European laborers dip imported English sheet metal into imported Welsh tin. This is the boasted "American tin."

THE South Bend Times and Shelbyville Democrat, the two most pronounced Hill papers in the state, come down gracefully, like true democrats and say that Cleveland is now their man. They had a choice before the convention, but now they accept the people's choice.

TAMMANY Hall falls into line for Cleveland. Its leaders, Gov. Flower, Croker, Cochran, Murphy and others say they have made their fight and were worsted. Now, they will roll up their sleeves and work for the ticket, and believe they will be able to hold New York in the democratic column.

A DISPATCH from Topeka, Kansas, dated June 26, says that Frank McGrath, ex-president of the Kansas Farmer's Alliance, has gone back to the republican party, and is trying to get the other republican Alliance men to do the same and leave the democratic alliance voters to catch the snipe.

STEVE ELKINS, Harrison's secretary of war, says republicans need not console themselves with the belief that there will be a divided democracy to fight. He insists that before the campaign is two months old, there will be a united front on both sides of the political fence, and that the fight will be a hard one.

THOSE who were counting on Senator Voorhees to oppose Cleveland were mistaken. He early saw the drift of democratic sentiment and would have made one of the speeches seconding Cleveland's nomination, but that ill health kept him in his room. He sent a letter to that effect, and it was read in the convention.

Two colored southern delegates to the republican convention at Minneapolis, ran out or money on the way home, and tried to beat their way on the train. The conductor demanded fare, and a free fight followed. They were overpowered, and jailed at Peru, Ind., tried for assault with intent to kill, and sent to Michigan City for two years.

J. MILTON TURNER, the colored man, who a few years ago made a republican speech in Garrett, is now a democrat, and resides in Missouri. He and representative negroes from 18 states, met in Chicago last week, and organized a democratic national club, all colored men. They say the democrats have done well by them, especially Cleveland.

W. C. B. HARRISON, a well known newspaper man is talking of starting a newspaper in Garrett. This is something the better element in that town has needed for years, as the town has not had a newspaper since the Herald was moved away, and it is a town nearly or quite as large as Auburn. And Auburn has two successful papers, both with a large business and good circulation. We believe Bro. Harrison could not do better.

THE Chicago platform has a tariff plank that just suits us. It is no straddle. The one first reported, was a sort of straddle and talked as republicans do, about the amount of tariff necessary to protect labor. Tariff does not protect labor, never has and never will. Protection by a tariff is a fraud, just as the platform now states it. They must have been reading the COURIER, when they got up the new plank, that they concluded to put in place of the one that was first reported. We repeat, protection is a fraud, and protects no one except the man who don't need it.

INDIANA democrats feel disappointed at the defeat of Gov. Gray for vice-president, for it had been generally understood that he would get it. Many wanted to see him nominated for president, but there was never any chance for that. He would have got second place, but for the New York Tammany crowd. They felt sore, because they had not beaten Cleveland, and made up their minds they would beat somebody who was Cleveland's friend, or at least who was backed up by the Cleveland strength. So when New York was called, she cast her 72 votes solid for Stevenson. Other great states followed, and when the last was reached, he had 402 and Gray 343. Then, before it was announced, states began to change their votes, till at last he had the needed two thirds, or 599, when it was given him by acclamation. He is a man of ability and experience, was Cleveland's first assistant postmaster general, and they are warm friends. He is a life long democrat, but not much of a civil service reformer. He believes in giving offices to those in power, and so far will suit Tammany.

THE COURIER has no crow to eat in the matter of presidential candidates. We have carefully avoided entering into any contest over candidates, for we believe every newspaper should keep its position so solid that it can as well support one man as another after nominations have been made. From the first it was plain, however, that Cleveland would be the man, for the great bulk of the people wanted him. And in our opinion he is the strongest man all things considered, that could have been selected. He has the confidence of the people, more than any other man so far named, in connection with the office. He has a record of honesty and ability that has been excelled by that of no other president since Washington's day, and even his worst enemies can charge nothing against him, except that he is a democrat, and they prefer a republican. A few democratic papers, and but a very few, not over half a dozen of the hundred or more in Indiana, would have preferred some other man, and of these a very few have said things they will wish they had not said. But not one will be found sulking. The democracy of Indiana, and of the nation, will move forward in a united line for the election of GROVER CLEVELAND, and democratic success.

As Other Editors see It.

Auburn's recent whipping episode has called for remarks from nearly every publisher in this end of the state. To show that the COURIER has not been unduly severe, we copy below an article clipped from the Warsaw Indianian, Gen. Reub. William's paper, who in turn has clipped it from the South Bend Times, John B. Stoll's paper. Williams stands about the head of republican editors and Stoll occupies a similar position among the democratic papers. Neither has suffered the abuse that our people justly complain of. So it proves what we have often said, that no other community would have endured as much as we have. It reads:

> It will be a pleasure to hear what the editor of the Garrett Clipper has to say after reading this from the South Bend Times: "Cal. Husselman, a farmer of DeKalb county, has been nominated as the People's candidate for Congress in the Twelfth (Fort Wayne) District. Mr. Husselman recently distinguished himself by giving the irresponsible editor of a blackguard sheet at Garrett an unmerciful drubbing for having made outrageous personal attack upon him. If Mr. Husselman had never done anything else to merit public gratitude, this single act would be sufficient to place a long-suffering public under lasting obligation. This scalawag editor has for years abused decent people without stint. The wonder is that his worthless hide hasn't long since been perforated with buckshot."

The Butler Normal, at Butler, Ind.

The normal term of the Butler school will begin Tuesday, July 12, 1892. We gladly refer you to our pupils of the past, as to the thoroughness and class of our work. Special classes will be conducted in the interest of those intending to teach. All the branches in which examinations are held for teachers' license, will receive careful attention. Special instruction will be given on the latest and best approved methods of teaching, on the organization, management and government of schools. One can not be too well posted in the art of teaching. It is the aim to educate and train teachers for their educational work. This will be a special select normal of six weeks, and will close just before the teachers' institute. Not more than from twenty to thirty will be permitted to enter, so that it will be necessary to apply early. Pupils can use any text book they have, as all classes will be taught by topic or outline. Tuition, per term, $5 in advance. Anyone desiring further information call on or address, Bridge Broken.

An unusual happened to a bridge over a small stream near the Ohio line, east of Butler, in one of last week's storms. The high wind blew over a large oak tree, that up to date had withstood all the storms since the early settlement of the county. In falling, the huge top went squarely onto the bridge, and crushed it in. To add to the interest of this, several boys were under the bridge at the time, but were not hurt. They had been in swimming and when the storm came up, took refuge under the bridge for shelter. They were badly scared when the crash came. The damage will cost the county about $200, which we suppose republicans will blame the commissioners for, as in other cases.

ALAS!

How wretched is the man who has fallen a victim to Biliousness, Indigestion, Sick Headache, or diseased Liver, with all the horrible attendants. Look upon the picture. Poor man, being tired of dragging out a miserable existence, he is the picture of despondency; altogether, he is rather a forlorn specimen. Do we pity him? Of course; but at the same time feel assured that in a measure he is to blame for the bad state into which he has fallen. A sure, safe, speedy and easy cure can be found in Simmons Liver Regulator—Nature's own remedy. No mercury or deleterious drugs, not unpleasant to the taste, and always reliable—just such a remedy as you can pin your faith to without a shadow of disappointment. Read the testimonial, don't take our word for it:

TROPHIES OF A CHASE

AFTER THE FLEETING ITEMS OF NEWS.

Horrible Hanging at Fort Smith, Ark.—Lost an Arm to a Lion—Frightful Situation in Chicago—The Guns Carried in Columbus' Flag Ship in Chicago.

FAMOUS CANNON.

The Guns Carried in Columbus' Flag Ship in Chicago.

Chicago special: Two of the cannon, which were at one time, it is believed, mounted on board Christopher Columbus' flag ship, have been received in this city. Nothing but the body of the guns remains, the woodwork, of course, having rotted away. The guns themselves are almost worn to pieces, and are not much more than huge chunks of rust. Indeed the cannon are put on the "scrap iron" list in the custom house papers. One of the officers who was detailed for work in connection with the exposition found the relics at one of the West Indian Islands. Tradition and more substantial proof showed that the cannon had been used in a fort erected by Columbus' son, and that they were brought from Spain with Columbus' fleet. The ruins of the fort are still to be seen. The Government prizes the cannon as the best exhibit yet secured.

Horrible Hanging.

Thornton was hanged in the jail yard at Fort Smith, Ark. The execution was repulsive in the extreme. When the drop fell, the rope nearly severed Thornton's head from his body. Many of the spectators were overcome by the horrible sight. When he mounted the scaffold Thornton protested that he was innocent of the crime for which he was to suffer. John Thornton murdered his daughter at Krabs, Choctaw Nation, in November of last year. The motive of the murder is unknown, but it is believed that Thornton attempted to assault his daughter, who had been recently married, and then killed her to prevent her from testifying to the assault.

Anarchists and Freedom.

Chicago special: Friends of Neebe, Schwab and Fielden are organizing to secure their pardon. A meeting was held recently attended by enthusiastic believers in the innocence of the Anarchists now confined at Joliet. Over two hundred delegates from labor organizations were in attendance, representing the local chapters of about one hundred and forty societies, including Odd Fellows, Free Masons, Foresters, Knights of Honor, Knights of Labor and numerous mutual benefit and aid associations, Turner Bunds and Socialistic societies. Resolutions expressive of the sentiments of the meeting were passed.

A Frightful Situation.

Chicago special: A frightful condition of affairs exists in St. Albert's cemetery, the Bohemian-Polish burying ground away out on Milwaukee avenue. The city of the dead is a vast swamp, and the drainage percolating through it flows into the river and then out into the lake, perhaps to be taken into the mains and distributed through the homes of Chicago citizens. There are 26,000 bodies in the cemetery, and burials are taking place there at the rate of 150 a month. The graves are scarcely a foot apart and often half full of water when the coffins are lowered into them.

Lost an Arm to a Lion.

At Duluth, Minn., Edmond Reed placed his right hand on a lion in a circus to make him rise to please the spectators. Reed had been cutting meat to feed the animals. The lion struck his arm a terrific blow with its paw and closed its jaw upon the arm above the elbow. The keeper's prong was jabbed into the beast's nose, but it did not release its hold. The fainting man was torn away, his arm being stripped of flesh and the bones smashed. He was removed to the hospital and the arm amputated at the shoulder.

A Foiled Highwayman.

At Denver, Col., a young man 18 years old, giving the name of Herbert Sullivan, walked into the National Bank of Commerce, presented a pistol to the head of the paying teller, D. A. Barton, and demanded $5,000. Mr. Barton reached for his revolver and fired at the man, who dropped his pistol and ran out of the bank. He was pursued and arrested and lodged in jail.

A Panther at Large in the Jungles of St. Louis.

St. Louis special: A panther has been prowling round in the extreme southern portion of the city, for more than a week. Sheep and young calves have been disappearing. Three of the deer at Carondelet park were killed. Traps have been set for the animal.

A Negro Hanged.

Wm. Black was hanged in the jail yard at Pine Bluff, Ark., for the murder of Georgia Smith, in January last. Both parties were negroes. The victim was the 16-year-old daughter of Black's paramour. The execution was successfully carried out.

Parliament Dissolved.

The London Royal Gazette publishes the Queen's proclamation dissolving Parliament and summoning the new Parliament to meet on Thursday, August 4. The writs are being issued accordingly.

Millions of Words.

The Western Union Telegraph Company at Chicago, during the Democratic Convention handled 2,586,455 words of press report.

Mrs. Boutelle Dead.

Mrs. Boutelle, wife of Congressman Boutelle, died suddenly at Bangor, Me., of heart failure.

Many Burned.

A disastrous fire occurred at Bercy, a suburb of Paris. Three tenements were destroyed and a number of the occupants burned to death. Many others were injured while trying to escape. The damage amounts to 1,500,000 francs.

Child Drowned.

The 5-year-old child of Jacob Henry, of Fort Wayne, fell into a cistern and drowned before it could be rescued.

Crushed to Death.

Thirteen persons were killed and more than forty injured in a collision at Dock street, on the Pennsylvania railroad, in Harrisburg, Pa., at 12:30 o'clock Saturday morning. The second section of the Western express ran into the first section, completely telescoping two cars.

Murdered in Court.

A murder was committed in the New York Court of General Sessions. Max Clerget, who was before the bar to answer to the charge of assaulting 15-year-old Sarah Divin, was shot through the heart and instantly killed by the girl's brother, Edward Divin, who is 25 years old.

FAILURE OF A KANSAS GROCER.

A Chicago Firm Is Among His Creditors—Other Troubles.

At Lawrence, Kansas, W. H. Pendleton, wholesale grocer and produce shipper, assigned for the benefit of his creditors. Liabilities, $125,000; assets, estimated, $100,000. The Popular Grocery Company of this city, $12,500, and Murdock, Reid & Co., of Chicago, $3,300, were secured by chattel mortgage. Pendleton has been in the produce business for years, and three months ago he bought $125,000 worth of groceries. W. Behrendt & Co., dry goods and clothing merchants, at Albuquerque, N. M., failed; liabilities, $20,000; assets, $20,000. At Yankton, S. D., the retail dry goods house of Jacob Max, one of the oldest in South Dakota, was closed by the sheriff on an execution amounting to $14,000. The entire stock of dry goods, boots and shoes, the real estate and buildings are included in the judgments. The house has outstanding accounts amounting to $70,000, but collections have been poor and the credit of the firm hopelessly injured.

COUNTERFEITING GANG CAPTURED.

California Detectives Arrest a Crowd Which Has Made Over $100,000.

At San Francisco, a big counterfeiting gang was unearthed by the arrest of Giovanni Abbett and Paglo Visconte, two of the leaders. They were captured at work in their rooms, where all the paraphernalia of making bogus coin was found. The gang is composed of about a dozen men and has been in operation for over twelve months. In that time it must have put over $100,000 worth of counterfeit money into circulation. Since Secret Service Agent Harris has been on the trail of counterfeiters he has often captured their money in express offices, but has failed to get the receivers or makers of the coin and bills. Recently the counterfeiters turned their attention to lottery tickets and made much money. Detectives finally located the counterfeiters in Rooker's, on Telegraph Hill, and the place has been watched day and night for three weeks in order that the criminals might be captured in the act of counterfeiting. This was done and evidence sufficient to convict both was secured.

ONE BOY KILLED, SIX MEN INJURED.

Accident Near Stillwater Caused by One Train Running on the Other's Time.

The Wisconsin Central passenger train which leaves Stillwater, Minn., at 12 o'clock was delayed fifty-eight minutes Tuesday, the result of a collision with the Duluth passenger train going to Stillwater. Jas. E. Stenson, was killed, and six men injured, two fatally. The two trains should meet at the junction, six miles out. The Central train runs on the St. Paul and Duluth tracks up to that point, and the Duluth train should have waited its coming, but instead of doing this ran in at a high rate of speed. As the trains rounded a curve the engineer of the Central put on the brakes and succeeded in checking his speed. The trains came together, both engines being completely demolished. Both baggage-cars turned over and rolled down an embankment. Young Stenson, who was but 11 years of age, was on the engine of the Central and was thrown into the wreckage. He was taken out alive but lived only a few minutes.

ROBBED HIS EMPLOYERS.

Willie H. Hoerr, a bright, attractive ruddy-cheeked boy of 17, a trusted young clerk of Messrs. Biggs & Co., Pittsburg jewelers, and a member of the German Lutheran Church choir, was arrested on the complaint of his employers and taken to jail in default of $1,500 bail, charged with systematic stealing of jewelry and diamonds to the extent of several thousand dollars. The lad broke down completely and confessed that he had stolen as charged. He declared that he neither drank nor gambled, but stole to get money for buggy rides and other means of amusing his young lady friends and because he was fond of jewelry. He was engaged by the firm in February at a salary of $5 a week.

BIG FIRE AT ATLANTIC CITY.

The Property Loss Heavy and the Insurance Very Small.

Atlantic City (N. J.) firemen Wednesday night fought their hardest battle in that city's history. The fire began in the engine-house in the rear of the big observation wheel on the beach front, three doors east of Kentucky avenue. The flames spread rapidly and within ten minutes made a seething sea of fire a half-acre in extent. The firemen were handicapped by the failure of the water supply. The loss is estimated at $150,000, with not more than $25,000 insurance.

KILLED A WOMAN AND HIMSELF.

Melvin Letts, of Cobleskill, N. Y., Shoots His Sister-in-Law and Commits Suicide.

At Cobleskill, N. Y., Melvin Letts shot and killed his sister-in-law, Miss Katharine Swart, and shot and killed himself. Martin Swart, the father of the woman, died several years ago, leaving considerable of an estate. Letts had invested his wife's portion in Western property and wished to do the same with that of the other sisters, but Miss Katharine opposed his plan.

Identified by His Victim.

At Cincinnati, Squire Smith, a negro, was arrested, charged with assaulting Mrs. Parsons near her Elsmere home the other evening. Smith was taken to police headquarters, where Mrs. Parsons, after fully identifying him, fainted away. Mr. Parsons grew frantic. The prisoner calmly denied everything, and this so enraged the husband that, without a word, he pulled a revolver and tried to use it. Detective Hudson saw the move, and as quick as a flash caught Parsons' arm and snatched the revolver away. Parsons swore he would kill the negro in court.

Assaulted by Three Negroes.

At Williamsport, Pa., Mrs. Nora M. Shetter, the pretty young wife of a base-ball player, was on her way home on a lonely street when she was felled by a stone thrown by one of three negroes. The men picked up the helpless woman, stifled her cries, and carried her to a vacant lot. Mrs. Shetter lay unconscious in the field for an hour, after which she succeeded in crawling to her home. Earlier in the evening Mrs. John Keen was assaulted by a white man, but she succeeded after a heroic struggle, in defending herself. The police have no clew to the assailants.

Abducted His Own Child.

George E. Cunningham, actor and proprietor of a dramatic agency in New York, was arrested at Troy on the charge of abducting his 3-year-old daughter. His wife, Carrie Cunningham, a singer, is the complainant. Mr. Cunningham says his wife has been consorting with low characters and exposing the child to vice. The father has the child and the case stands adjourned.

Died While Attempting Escape.

Albert Tobey, a boy, escaped from the Reform School at Plainfield, Ind., and was discovered at Gosport. Officers attempted to arrest him, but he eluded their grasp and ran. Spirited pursuit was given and the lad, becoming overheated, fell dead.

Louisiana Will Make an Exhibit.

The Louisiana House, by a vote of 50 to 18, passed a bill appropriating $36,300 for a Louisiana State Exhibit at the World's Fair. The amount originally asked for was $50,000.

Is Positively Dead This Time.

About a year ago Edward McCarten, an aged and well-known resident of Clark County, Ind., was reported to have died at his home near Hamburg. Arrangements were made for his funeral and the death bell was tolled. Some of the family were opposed to the burial of the body at the time fixed for the funeral, and a delay ensued. In a few hours the supposed corpse showed signs of life and shortly afterward regained consciousness. The old man recovered sufficiently to go about the farm, but his death finally occurred on Sunday, his life going out like a candle.

REMARKABLE PENSION FRAUD.

An Iowa Woman Draws Her Husband's Pension While He Is in an Asylum.

Chief Pension Examiner Stibbs and District Attorney Milchrist, of Chicago, have finished an investigation of a most remarkable pension fraud, and compelled the restoration of over $8,000 diverted from the rightful beneficiary. The most astonishing feature about the case is that the parties in interest are man and wife. The latter kept the pension money due her husband, who was insane, and for years he lived as a pauper in the insane asylums of the State. The wife is well connected, and has achieved considerable fame in Iowa as a temperance lecturer.

GOSHEN BANK CLOSES ITS DOORS.

Cashier Murray and a Good Sized Sum of Money Are Missing.

At Goshen, N. Y., the National Bank failed to open its doors for business at the usual hour Monday morning. William M. Murray, the cashier of the bank, is missing and is said to be in New York. At a special meeting of the directors it was discovered that the bank had been making loans to Mr. Murray and others on insufficient securities and that its finances were in a very confused and unsatisfactory condition. It is generally reported that there is a shortage of from $50,000 to $66,000.

Seattle's Second Great Fire.

Fire at Seattle, Wash., threatened to sweep the town Monday as it did three years ago, but the progress of the flames was checked after a loss of half a million dollars had been caused. The fire started in the heart of the city and gained headway so rapidly that consternation prevailed. Schwabacher Brothers' wholesale grocery was destroyed, and the Hotel Northern was badly damaged. Dexter Horton's new bank building was saved by hard work. The insurance on Schwabachers' was $300,000.

Fourteen Persons Hurt.

Sunday night two electric cars in widely separated parts of Boston were struck either by lightning or by the motor current through burned out insulation, and several passengers were hurt in the rush to escape. Of the passengers in car No. 2046 eight were attended by neighboring physicians and taken to their homes in carriages, and three taken to the City Hospital. The women passengers in the other car were sent to their homes in carriages by the company.

Killed a Man with Rabies.

A man named Odel was bitten by a mad dog two months ago at Sciotoville, Ohio. Monday he went mad and bit trees, posts and everything else he came to. Near his home he ran after a boy named Hension, who had been hunting. Odel gained on him and the boy turned and fired his rifle. The ball took effect between Odel's eyes, killing him instantly.

A Careless Mother Kills Her Child.

At Phillipsburg, N. J., while Mrs. John Skillman was playing with a Flobert rifle the weapon was discharged and the ball passed through the heart of an 11-year-old daughter, killing her instantly. The mother says she did not know the weapon was loaded.

Sympathy for an Outlaw.

There is much excitement in Southwest Virginia over the refusal of the Court of Appeals to grant Talton Hall, the noted outlaw, a new trial. He was convicted at Wise Courthouse, Va., several months ago for the murder of Policeman Hilton, at Norton, Va.

Death of a Nebraska Murderer.

Myron Pratt, the slayer of Mrs. Margaret Sperry, a crime which divided attention with the sensational shooting of Banker C. E. Montgomery, died in the Lincoln, Neb., county jail. He was taken sick soon after his incarceration.

Will Work Together.

THE sugar trust and the wholesale grocers have entered into an agreement whereby the grocers will maintain uniform prices, and the trust will give those that do so a rebate to protect them from loss.

Campbell Succeeds Clarkson.

James S. Clarkson has been succeeded as Chairman of the Republican National Committee by W. J. Campbell, of Illinois. Land Commissioner Carter, of Montana, was chosen Secretary and Cornelius Bliss, of New York, Treasurer.

China Buying Munitions of War.

Thirty thousand Mauser rifles and 150 tons of cartridges are being shipped from Hamburg for Pekin, consigned to the Chinese Government.

To Reapportion Wisconsin.

A special session of the Wisconsin Legislature to reapportion the State into Senate and Assembly districts has convened.

Drowned by the Capsizing of a Boat.

At Memphis, Julius Frauenthal and Matthew Schloss, two boys were drowned by the capsizing of a boat.

Fierce Fire in a Mine.

Concealed by Their Beauty.

One of the most interesting things that the naturalist finds to study is the effect of various colors and forms in rendering animals visible or inconspicuous. This means of concealment is useful mainly in enabling the animal possessing it to remain hidden from the searching eyes of its enemies. Some of the accounts given by travelers and naturalists of the eclipsing effect of certain color combinations seem hardly credible. Among the most gorgeous of the inhabitants of the air are the sunbirds of Africa, and yet Mrs. Barker, the traveler, assures us that even the keen eye of a hawk will fail to detect these birds when they are flitting in a field of flowers.

Most species of the East Indian sloth, which feeds upon trees, have an orange-colored spot on their backs, which renders them very conspicuous when they are seen out of their ordinary environment; but when they are clinging to the trees the color of their hair resembles withered moss, while the orange spot on their backs so closely imitates the scar made by the breaking off of a branch that even hunters are deceived by it.

The color and stripes of the tiger sometimes render it invisible in bright sunshine amid the dried yellow grass of a jungle. Maj. Walford, an English hunter, says:

"Once while following up a wounded tiger I failed for at least a minute to see him under a tree in grass at a distance of about twenty yards—jungle open—but the natives saw him, and I eventually made him out well enough to shoot him; but even then I could not see at what part of him I was aiming."

But perhaps the most wonderful effect of color and contrast in concealing large animals is in the case of the zebra and giraffe. Alfred Russell Wallace says of the giraffe that the large, blotch-like spots on the skin, and the strange shape of the head and horns, like broken branches, so tend to its concealment that even the keen eyed natives have been known to mistake trees for giraffes, or giraffes for trees.

As to zebras, Professer Henry Drummond says in his book on "Tropical Africa," after describing how the black and white stripes seem to take away the sense of a solid body altogether, the two colors blending into an unconspicuous gray, while at close quarters the effect is as of bars of light seen through the branches of shrubs:

"I have found myself in the forest gazing at what I supposed to be a solitary zebra, its presence betrayed by some motion due to my approach, and suddenly realized that I was surrounded by an entire herd, which were all invisible until they moved."

A recent writer in Nature, after quoting this passage from Drummond, together with a statement from Francis Galton that in clear moonlight a zebra may be invisible although so near that its breathing can be heard, carries the idea of protection furnished by the zebra's stripes a step further by suggesting that they conceal it from the eyes of its enemies while it sleeps.

Who Owns a Mailed Letter.

A letter once mailed no longer belongs to the sender, but is the property of the person to whom it is addressed. Such is the postal law, but it is a law often violated by postmasters in small places, where correspondents are likely to be personally known to the postoffice authorities, and sometimes leads to curious complications in large ones where this is not the case.

Important business interests have been affected by the same law. A firm which had long been really insolvent had succeeded in keeping the knowledge from the public, and continued to receive money from investors, which the partners employed dishonestly for their own advantage. It was their intention to raise one more large sum of money, part of which was to be contributed by a business friend of one of them, and then to leave the country with their spoil, and let their creditors shift for themselves.

But the wife of the business friend and the wife of the man who meant to victimize him frequently corresponded with each other, and the latter wrote a gay, gossiping letter to the former in which she mentioned that her husband had been in poor health lately on account of business troubles, but that she trusted their approaching trip to Canada would restore him.

Remembering, too late, that her husband had asked her to mention neither of these facts, and fearing to vex him, she went to the post-office to recall the letter. The post-master refused to give it up. She could give no reason for demanding it, and became petulant and irritated when he continued to refuse. He remained firm and the letter was sent.

The recipient showed it to her husband whose suspicions it aroused. He made an investigation, and as a consequence the dishonest firm was broken up, and both the partners arrested and punished.

Intercepted letters have long been a popular theme of drama and romance. A letter which could not be intercepted, but had to go in spite of the sender's express desire and entreaty, might offer an interesting variety.—Youth's Comanion.

Aniline Coloring.

Aniline dyes are noted for their great coloring power, one part of rosaniline salt in one million parts of water still possessing a deep crimson color and instantly dying a skein of silk moistened with vinegar. The dyes are used for many purposes—coloring toys, sweetmeats, wines, dress fabrics, and other articles. The fugitive nature of some of them is rather a drawback. Germany is now the headquarters of the manufacture of these dyes. Large quantities are produced and used in this country also.

In China.

In visiting China you see men with their fingers nails growing to the length of three or four inches. They are the scholars or mandarins, and the nails are worn to distinguish them from common men or laborers. And if you should attempt to grasp them by the hand to shake it they would not respond, but simply clasp their own hands together and give you a "salaam," or bow.

CHARLES DICKENS
FREE!
The Most Valuable and Remarkable Premium Ever Offered Free with any Periodical.
A MARVEL IN BOOK-MAKING.
A Set of the Works of Charles Dickens, IN 12 LARGE VOLUMES, FREE.

There has just been published A Set of the Works of Charles Dickens, in Large and Handsome Volumes, printed from entirely new plates, with new type. By special arrangement with the publishers we are enabled to offer to our patrons this splendid set of Dickens' Works, postpaid, free. Charles Dickens was the greatest novelist who ever lived. No author before or since his time has won the fame that he achieved, and his works are even more popular to-day than during his lifetime. They abound in wit, humor, pathos, masterly delineation of character, vivid descriptions of places and incidents, thrilling and skilfully wrought plots. Each book is intensely interesting. No home should be without a set of these great and remarkable works. Not to have read them is to be far behind the age in which we live. The twelve volumes in this set contain the following world-famous works, each one of which is published complete, unchanged and absolutely unabridged:
DAVID COPPERFIELD,
MARTIN CHUZZLEWIT,
NICHOLAS NICKELBY,
DOMBEY AND SON,
BLEAK HOUSE,
LITTLE DORRIT,
OUR MUTUAL FRIEND,
PICKWICK PAPERS,
BARNABY RUDGE AND CHRISTMAS STORIES,

THE PLAN.
We will send a complete set of these books FREE, by mail, postage paid, guaranteeing safe delivery, as follows:
To any old subscriber, who sends one dollar, and renews their subscription to either of the following publications for one year:
THE PEOPLE'S LITERARY COMPANION,
—OR—
The National Farmer and Home Magazine
To any new subscriber, who sends one dollar for either of the above periodicals for one year.
This is the grandest offer ever made, and the greatest bargain ever offered. Up to this time the price of a complete set of Dickens' Works has been ten dollars or more. The use of modern, improved printing, folding and stitching machinery, the present extremely low price of white paper, and the great competition in the book trade are the factors which made this wonderful offer possible. Bear in mind that we offer, not a single volume, but the entire set of twelve volumes all free to subscribers. All may now afford the luxury of owning a handsome set of Dickens' works. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. Do not neglect or put off this wonderful opportunity. Send at once; you will be delighted with the charming books, and, as long as you live, never cease to regard it as the best investment of a dollar you ever made. Address all communications to and write, and are possessed of fair intelligence, you are fully qualified to make a grand success of what we offer you. We have lately published at great expense and labor a perfect wonder in the way of an illustrated Gift Book, suitable to all classes, an ornament to any home, and at a price that brings it within the reach of all, even those of moderate means. Heretofore only those who indulged in luxuries have felt that they could afford a book of this class, as they are sold in book stores at $5.00 and upwards. The book which we offer is not in any way inferior to those above referred to, but is far superior to hundreds of books of this nature that are sold at prices exceeding ours by an enormous per cent. It is selling with a rush wherever shown. Agents have only to show the book and mention the price, and it sells on its merits without further talking. No better Christmas, New Year's or Birthday present can be selected. It will sell, not only for holiday trade, but at all seasons of the year, for the reason that all will want it in their homes, and will have it as soon as they know the low price at which our agents can furnish them. Reader, if you need profitable employment, and a business in which you can and will take pride, as well as make money rapidly, do not fail to send for circulars containing private terms to agents, and full information, which will be sent FREE upon application. Old and new agents alike are making handsome salaries—yes, fortunes. Many of those who are making the best records are new at the agency business, having had no previous experience. ☞Make a start—the field is entirely new. No such terms have been offered agents as we now offer on this wonderful book. Special qualifications not necessary, for it sells everywhere at sight. Perhaps you have at some time been unsuccessful at the agency business. If so, there is every reason why you should try this, the PRINCE of gift books, as failure is impossible if you make A START. Write us to-day, study our circulars and directions, then order an outfit and go to work with push and energy. You may make the greatest mistake of your life, if you allow this GOLDEN opportunity to pass unimproved.

E. C. Allen & Co., Box 202, Augusta, Maine.

SHALL WE START YOU
in a pleasant and successful business, that will bring you money rapidly and honorably? A grand opportunity for one person in each locality, young or old, of either sex, wherever you live. Reader, it is a royal chance for you, and such a one as may never again come to your attention in a lifetime. Beginners easily secure an income of $30 to $50 per week from the very start, and much more as the business becomes established. YOU can earn as much as any one. There is not the slightest risk on your part. No capital required. We start you FREE, and furnish everything needed to carry on the business successfully. Hundreds just starting report wonderful success and great profits. Will you write us, and take advantage of this grand offer, or will you delay and allow others to profit by it. We leave it for you to decide, but we tell you frankly that you will lose the golden opportunity of your life if you fail to test the business now. Act quickly and your reward is sure. Address E. Dear Sirs:—The Bicycle came promptly. The boy is overjoyed. He acted like a crazy child for awhile. Over and over he repeated, "It seems as if I were dreaming, but no, there it is"; and then he would go to it and pat it and talk to it. We have found you men of your word. Thanking you for your faithfulness to your word, I remain, Yours respectfully, H. A. Day, for Leo Day.

HEARTS OF GOLD —OR— THE HEIRESS OF MAPLE LEAF FARM

BY GENEVIEVE ULMER.

CHAPTER XIV.

"SOMETHING UP!"

Ralph Prescott awaited the effect of his words with eager triumph. He counted on frightening his enemy by betraying a knowledge of his affairs—by threatening to employ that knowledge to cause him serious trouble.

He had miscalculated his man, however. Paul Dalton, the farm superintendent, had been a problem to him in the past—Paul Dalton, the heartless seeker after wealth, was no less an enigma.

He had started slightly at Prescott's revelation, but that was the only evidence of internal emotion that he betrayed.

A cool, derisive smile on his sneering lips, he laughed jarringly.

"Oh! you've found that out, have you?"

"And that would be your first move?"

"Yes, it would."

"Bigamy, I believe you said?"

"Yes, and an ugly word it is in the country courts, I can tell you. It ain't like your city divorce courts, and bribed juries, and corrupt judges—it's the unbought, indignant verdict of honest men."

"Like you and I—eh, Prescott?" jeered the other.

"No!" fairly choked the plotter, driven to the verge of uncontrollable rage by the tantalizing audacity of his companion, "farmers and—millers."

"So," purred Dalton. "Very good. Quite a joke, Prescott," and he placed his hand familiarly on Prescott's shoulder, while the latter started as if stung by a serpent. "Well, that will be move one, eh?"

"Yes, it will."

"Bigamy?"

"I said it."

"It won't work."

"Won't it?"

"No. I see move one, and checkmate it."

"Do you?"

"Yes. I silence all that babble with a letter I have in my pocket."

"From who?"

"Never mind that, but it shows that Isabel, first wife of Paul Dalton, died exactly two months before Paul Dalton married wife number two. Come on, Prescott."

With mock friendly familiarity, as if they had been brothers, comrades, all their lives, Paul Dalton locked arms with his companton.

The latter was a smoldering volcano of passion. Chagrin, disappointment, rage seemed to consume his soul like the blast of a red-hot furnace.

The stony-hearted man at his side little dreamt of his peril.

Had Ralph Prescott been armed he would have struck his victorious foe his death-blow then and there, made half frantic by the stinging taunts that fate seemed to award him at every new move he made.

Oh, it was maddening! This man was a demon, a trickster in magic.

He escaped scot-free from nets that would enmesh and destroy an average man.

He let others plot, bided his time, and appeared at a critical moment to put out his hand and pluck the rich fruit before him, while the schemer gnashed his teeth in impotent rage.

Rather dragged along than led, Ralph Prescott was forced to accompany the man who seemed to be the master of his fate.

As in a dream, he found himself, ten minutes later, seated in the library of Lawyer Drew's house, with Paul Dalton opposite him, smiling blandly.

"Thought I might want a witness," spoke the latter. "It's no use, Prescott; I won't fight with you."

Lawyer Drew, prim, severe and keen-eyed, entered the room a minute later.

"Good evening, Mr. Prescott; good evening, Mr.——?"

"Dalton."

The lawyer started, and stared sharply at the last speaker through his gold-rimmed eye-glasses.

"Ah! yes," he said slowly and dubiously; "Mr. Dalton—Mr. Paul Dalton. I see—I see. The legatee of my client, Mr. Geoffrey Forsythe. I believe I have seen you at Maple Leaf farm?"

"Once or twice," assented Dalton, carelessly.

"I would not have known you."

"I have changed, I suppose."

"Remarkably."

"Well, beggary makes a man wear a mask of humility sometimes," was the bare-faced admission of audacity. "You know my business, Mr. Drew?"

"I can surmise it."

"I come about the Forsythe legacy. I believe the old gentleman left me quite a sum."

"Yes. In cash and securities, it aggregates some $50,000."

"I want it."

The lawyer looked grave. He did not like this young man with his flippant eyes and aggressive ways.

"I presume you are aware that a transaction of this importance and magnitude cannot be consummated in an hour?" he remarked.

"I don't see why not," interrupted Dalton impatiently. "It was left to me, wasn't it?"

"Yes, to Paul Dalton."

"And I am Paul Dalton."

"I won't deny that. I can remember your face well enough for that, and Mr. Prescott, of course, knows you, and Mr. Elliott."

"Certainly, sir. So, if I am the heir I expect the money."

"Very well; I will consider this a formal demand and expedite matters as much as possible. There are certain forms to obey, certain papers to execute. Come again in a week. Meantime, if your necessities are pressing——"

"They are," bluntly admitted Dalton.

"I will advance you some money. How much—fifty—a hundred?"

"Two hundred will do."

The lawyer took out his check book.

"In a week, then?" said Dalton, as he folded up the bit of paper.

"Yes, we shall be ready for you then."

He saw money that he had expected to handle given freely to another; he saw an almost utter stranger to Geoffrey Forsythe as claimant of his fortune.

Oh, it was maddening, hate-inspiring. The decrees of fate were cruel, unjust!

"Cash it, then," growled Prescott.

"Come, don't be wrathy. I may throw a few hundreds in your way yet. I bear you no ill-will."

"Shouldn't think you would, seeing that you've got all the plums in sight."

Dalton smiled complacently.

"That's my good luck," he remarked. "Come; get the check cashed for me. I've got a friend I'm to meet at the hotel to-night, and I need ready funds. Keep out a tenner for your trouble."

It suddenly dawned on Prescott that he could gain nothing by sullen animosity; much, perhaps, by playing the sycophant.

He led the way to his old friend, the tavern-keeper, explained the situation, and got the money, for Lawyer Drew's check was as current as gold coin in Ridgeton.

He watched Dalton indorse it with a flourish, and then, his glance falling to the name, his eyes bulged.

"Hello!" he ejaculated forcibly.

Dalton handed him the promised ten dollars, but Prescott was strangely lost in reverie.

"I'll see you again, Prescott," he said. "Suppose I'll have to call around on Ruth soon. Pretty busy for a week or so, though, so if she gets better tell her I came, but was called away again. I've a friend to meet. See you again."

He passed from the tavern as he spoke. Jaunty, self-possessed, the sleek, successful knave, if there ever was one, voted Ralph Prescott.

The latter scratched his head thoughtfully. He stood for some moments like a man in a dream. He was thinking of Lawyer Drew's check for two hundred dollars, and Paul Dalton's indorsement on it.

"What does it mean?" he muttered, as he too left the tavern. "Something's up! What? Why, Paul Dalton has even changed his handwriting!"

CHAPTER XV.

UNMASKED!

Something's up!

Ralph Prescott described the situation in that terse expression. There was something up, to a certainty. Something dark, mystical, suspicious.

But what? He had made a new discovery—that even the handwriting of Paul Dalton had changed; but what of that? A man acting a part for two years might, upon resuming his original identity, have changed his appearance, manner and handwriting back to the real from the false, and emerge as different into his new existence as a butterfly from a chrysalis.

He was always "discovering" something, and every additional discovery generally resulted in disaster for himself.

He had set out to sweep his enemy from the field by a simple plot, and had only succeeded in precipitating a climax that had richly benefited that foe and impoverished himself.

Still, plotting was like drinking—fascinating, cumulative. Once in the swim, to put it tritely, the victim plunged deeper and deeper into the labyrinths of crime.

Besides all this, things looked queer. He could not imagine Paul Dalton so eminently heartless and insensible to the rare beauty of Ruth Elliott as to utterly ignore her and prefer wealth to her love, when he might have both.

"I'll keep him in view a bit, if only for curiosity," soliloquized Prescott. "He said he was going to meet a friend at the hotel. I may learn something by watching them."

To the hotel, therefore, Prescott took his way.

He passed by the open doors and glanced in, but caught no sight of the man he sought.

Through the window of the smoking-room, however, opened to admit the fresh air upon the tobacco-smoke tainted atmosphere of the apartment, he made out Paul Dalton and a stranger.

They occupied the room alone, and, tilted back in chairs, sat conversing animatedly.

Prescott had become quite an expert shadower of late, and he was soon lurking near the window.

Distinctly on his hearing sounded the conversation of Paul Dalton and the black-bearded man who was his companion.

"So you could not make it, Paul?" the latter was asking, in a disappointed tone of voice.

"Not all of it; but what's the odds?"

"A week's the odds!" returned the other; "and a week sometimes changes the destinies of nations."

"It won't change mine," asserted Dalton, confidently.

"You don't know that?"

"Oh, yes, I do. Here's the plain facts of the case: Paul Dalton falls heir to a fortune. Paul Dalton appears and claims it."

"Proceed."

"He is accepted as heir, rightfully and undisputed. Very good."

"But the side entanglements?"

"The girl?"

"Yes."

"She's sick. May die. Sick enough anyway, to be out of the way for a week."

"That's good."

"By that time fortune and Paul Dalton will have disappeared."

"But her father?"

"Won't even look at me if he saw me, and this simpleton of a Prescott I can wind about my finger."

"Can you?" ground out the enraged listener.

"Well, everything looks all right," remarked the bearded man.

"And after we're gone?"

"Let these people figure out the cost of being too sure of a man at their own leisure."

"It will be a surprising awakening to reality," smiled the other grimly. "Paul, about him——"

"You mean——"

"S—st. No names. Him. What of him?"

"He's safe and sound, isn't he?"

"For the present."

"For a week, surely?"

"Yes; but afterwards?"

"Unlock the door, say 'Go!' We'll be safe and far away by the time he comes here."

"All right. Ah! thank you. A hundred? I need it. No instruction?"

"Yes, get back to Black Rock, and stay there. Watch him close. If he escaped——"

"Don't fear, he won't."

"It would mean ruin to our plans."

"I realize that as well as you. I guess I'll go."

"Very good. I'll take a look at the rich girl, just for policy's sake. Then I'll try and devise a way to kill time until the lawyer's ready to pay me my fortune."

"What does it mean?"

Over and over again the marvelling Ralph Prescott asked himself the question.

Here was a plot, beyond the peradventure of a doubt—here was mystery.

Who was the bearded man? A fellow-conspirator? In what? A plot. A plot for what? The fortune. But why?

The acknowledged, proven and accepted heir to the legacy, why should Paul Dalton plot to secure that which was already his?

"I'll find a way!" he asserted stubbornly, a few minutes later. "Black Rock! At that place this accomplice of Paul Dalton makes his headquarters, and a gruesome, desolate place it is. There he has him. I'll drive there to-night, and take a look around. No, I won't. Dalton spoke of going to see Ruth. Out of sheer curiosity I'd like to see how he acts when he does meet her."

Prescott left his place of espionage and hurried back to the former home of Geoffrey Forsythe.

He met the woman in charge of Ruth at the door.

"How is she?" he asked, concernedly.

"Wandering—delirious at times, then rational. She sits up every now and then, looks around her confusedly, and then with a wild shriek, covers her face with her hands, and cries out wildly that her heart is broken that her husband is false! false! false!"

"A man will call here in a few moments," spoke Prescott; "show him in when he comes. It is her husband, Paul Dalton."

The woman looked startled.

"And leave him with her alone for a few moments," went on Prescott. "If she recognizes him, he may be able to quiet her."

"All right, Mr. Prescott."

Prescott proceeded to the apartment adjoining that in which Ruth lay. He placed its door slightly ajar, so he could look into the sick-room, and see and hear all that was going on.

There was a ring at the door bell, and a parley a few minutes later.

Curiously the watcher in the next apartment regarded him.

The latter advanced to the couch and glanced down at Ruth.

Then he started back quickly.

"Paul!"

Springing up suddenly, Ruth Elliott with staring eyes transfixed the intruder. Fascinated by the weird manner of the invalid, he seemed utterly overcome.

"Paul!" gasped the tortured girl, "you have come back, and—changed! Paul! Paul! I know all. You deceived me. You were wedded to another."

Her visitor seemed nervously anxious to leave the room, but he managed to articulate confusedly:

"No, it is not true. I was wedded once, but she, my wife, died, and——"

A shriek interrupted him—ringing, echoing, appalling.

As he spoke, Ruth Elliott had started. Not upon his words did her interest hang, but upon that strange, changed tone.

Viewing him as if she would read him through and through, she cried wildly:

"He is not false. Oh! I see it all, Paul Dalton! The mystery, the secret he spoke of. Stay! I command you to remain where you are."

The man absolutely cowered. Amazed at his craven fear, the watching Ralph Prescott could only stare and marvel.

"He is true, my loyal love," went on Ruth, excitedly. "I know it now; I divine the mystery now. Ralph Prescott was only mistaken, but you, impostor—I read your craven soul!"

White as death, the intruder recoiled, for Ruth, leaning toward him, projected the thrilling words:

"Speak, ere I call for help to unmask you! I know what you are, not what you seem. Speak, imposter, coward, perhaps murderer! What have you done with my husband—the real Paul Dalton?"

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

Sharks in a Ladies' Bath.

The last Australian mail brings a thrilling shark story from Melbourne. A Mrs. Ffrench and a Mrs. Macmeikan were bathing with several ladies and children in the Melbourne Sea Baths, when Mrs. Ffrench's little boy, who was not bathing, noticed a large shark rapidly approaching the party, and immediately told Mrs. Durant. The boy then called out to Mrs. Macmiekan that there was a shark in the water. She glanced round and with horror saw a shark turning over within a foot of her. She kicked and splashed and nearly fainted away. The shark made for the children, going between the rope and the shore.

Mrs. Macmeikan speedily recovered her presence of mind, and darted to the rescue of the children. Quickly securing Roy, this brave lady placed the child in about one foot of water. Then she turned to secure Mrs. Ffrench's child. She was just in time to effect the rescue. As she grasped the little one, and was making for the shore, the shark, with a big companion, made a dash. The undaunted woman succeeded in frightening the monsters away, and safely bore the children from all danger. Mrs. Macmeikan was much exhausted after her adventure. The battle between life and death was most exciting, and two ladies fainted. The sharks were fine specimens, the largest one being about twelve feet in length, and the other about six feet. The pair had effected an entrance into the baths through some broken pickets. Some men were subsequently called in, and succeeded in killing the smaller shark. The big one managed to get into the open sea. The men stuck a boat-hook into him six times. The shark darted through the hole and nearly smashed the boat, the jerk precipitating one of the harpooners into the water.—Pall Mall Gazette.

THE GREAT SOUTH AMERICAN NERVINE TONIC —AND— Stomach AND Liver Cure

The Great South American Nervine Tonic

Which we now offer you, is the only absolutely unfailing remedy ever discovered for the cure of Indigestion, Dyspepsia, and the vast train of symptoms and horrors which are the result of disease and debility of the human stomach. No person can afford to pass by this jewel of incalculable value who is affected by disease of the stomach, because the experience and testimony of many go to prove that this is the ONE and ONLY ONE great cure in the world for this universal destroyer. There is no case of unmalignant disease of the stomach which can resist the wonderful curative powers of the South American Nervine Tonic.

HARRIET E. HALL, of Waynetown, Ind., says: "I owe my life to the Great South American Nervine. I had been in bed for five months from the effects of an exhausted stomach, Indigestion, Nervous Prostration, and a general shattered condition of my whole system. Had given up all hopes of getting well. Had tried three doctors, with no relief. The first bottle of the Nervine Tonic improved me so much that I was able to walk about, and a few bottles cured me entirely. I believe it is the best medicine in the world. I can not recommend it too highly."

MRS. ELLA A. BRATTON, of New Ross, Indiana, says: "I cannot express how much I owe to the Nervine Tonic. My system was completely shattered, appetite gone, was coughing and spitting up blood; am sure I was in the first stages of consumption, an inheritance handed down through several generations. I began taking the Nervine Tonic, and continued its use for about six months, and am entirely cured. It is the grandest remedy for nerves, stomach and lungs I have ever seen."

No remedy compares with SOUTH AMERICAN NERVINE as a cure for the Nerves. No remedy compares with South American Nervine as a wondrous cure for the Stomach. No remedy will at all compare with South American Nervine as a cure for all forms of failing health. It never fails to cure Indigestion and Dyspepsia. It never fails to cure Chorea or St. Vitus' Dance. Its powers to build up the whole system are wonderful in the extreme. It cures the old, the young, and the middle aged. It is a great friend to the aged and infirm. Do not neglect to use this precious boon; if you do, you may neglect the only remedy which will restore you to health. South American Nervine is perfectly safe, and very pleasant to the taste. Delicate ladies, do not fail to use this great cure, because it will put the bloom of freshness and beauty upon your lips and in your cheeks, and quickly drive away your disabilities and weaknesses.

Old Settlers.

We were absent much of the time last week and so failed to notice the old settlers' meeting that was held here. It was in everyway a pleasant meeting, although work was so behind, that many could not come. Still, there was a good attendance and all seemed to enjoy the reunion greatly. The speeches were good especially the address of Mr. McIntosh, was an able effort. In spite of his poor health, he made himself heard all through the assembly, and sustained himself to the last. Many called for a few words from Elder Ward, and we believe he would have talked a few minutes at least, but Dr. McConnell, who had just made one of his wild harangues, got hold of him, and shook him and turned him over and over, as one might say, till he was apparently glad to escape to the quiet of his home. Mr. Rose presided at the meeting, and to him and Mr. Boland, Hoffman, Hartman and others much is due for the good management of the meeting. Mr. Hartman read the list of those who had died during the year. Their names are: Mrs. Jerry Plum, Samuel Till, Mrs. Wyatt, Samuel Swihart, Wm. Draggoo, Jas. Revett, Mrs. M. Owens, S. M. Knott, Mrs. Guthrie, Mrs. Lovina Dilgard, J. Hull, Mrs. Samuel Wasson, Mrs. Annie Wise, Henry Sailor, Mrs. Matilda Henderson.

R. G. Daniels was elected president for the coming year; Gilbert Showers, vice-president; D. Z. Hoffman, secretary; J. M. Brumbeck, treasurer; M. B. Willis, biographer. For the township committee men of the association they chose: Phillip Noel of Butler township; Wm. Carr, of Jackson; Robert Culbertson, of Concord; W. Headley of Newville; S. Wartenbee, of Stafford; W. L. Blair, of Wilmington; James E. Rose, Union; Sol. Harding, Richland; O. C. Clark, Keyser; F. W. Willis, Grant; P. D. Childs, Fairfield; Cyrus Bowman, Smithfield; O. H. Taylor, Franklin; E. M. Coll, Troy.

The meeting was made pleasant by fine singing and good speeches. Gen. Blair who is one the among the very earliest of the old settlers, made an acceptable speech, and the pioneers returned to their homes, hoping for better weather and a full meeting next year.

Surprise.

Last Thursday evening June 23, the Y. P. S. C. E., of the Lutheran church, called on the pastor and family at the new parsonage, but came not empty handed, but came through the rain with cheerful hearts and smiling faces. They brought with them a handsome ingrain carpet containing 25 yards; not only did they bring it, but they put it down on the floor. The carpet is of the best quality and most attractive style. It is something of which anyone might feel proud and cheerful and most of all very grateful. Whenever we look or tread upon this valuable gift, we are led to think of their noble lives, and open hearts. The deep gratitude of our hearts to the young people for their benevolent act, is far beyond the possibility of human expression. We have many encouraging words to say of our young people they are, as you all know bright, noble, energetic and open-hearted, not only because they remembered their young, but unworthy pastor with a beautiful carpet, but are always ready to respond to any and every call before them. Success has attended the earnest efforts of the Y. P. S. C. E., of our church. Every where do we see the great need of such ambitious and energetic young people. Every pastor should exert all his God-given powers to bring the young people to Christ. Who are the promise of present and future prosperity in the christian church. The church by the help and influence of the young people is taking higher ground, and forming far-reaching plans, and moving onward in its triumph with greater rapidity than ever before. May heaven's refreshing dews fall in copious showers upon the young people of our churches as they go forth in the prosecution of the work of their Master. The Y. P. S. C. E., have the sincerest thanks of their pastor and family for their kindness. I suppose all who read these lines will regret that they are not preachers when they think of the gift received by the Lutheran pastor. This is one of the joyful times in the ministerial life. Now if you do not believe what I have said please come and gaze into the parlor of the new parsonage.

J. D. BROSY, pastor.

A'int it so?

Oh, what a glad and supreme pleasure it is to be able to get a photograph that gives an exact representation of your features! Artists have spent years of earnest toil and pains to perfect apparatus by which undefective photos could be produced. Inventive genius has at last discovered the bonanza, and a system so correct, has been developed that almost instantaneously a faultless negative can be produced. The nineteenth century has been a marvelously wonderful age in the invention of the multitudinous machines and appliances, which are blessing mankind from day to day. But the inventions alone, cannot benefit anybody. It requires a skilled workman in most cases to produce the desired effects. Among the arts, which require a high grade of artistic skill, photography is one of the most exacting. Most anybody can take the camera and make some sort of a negative, but when it comes to getting a first-class article on glass, it requires an artist to do it. Our people, as a rule, have in a reasonable degree become acquainted with the quality of work sent out by J. G. Clapp, of the city gallery. He has not been in our city many years, but in the short time he has been here he has built up an enviable reputation. However, having strong inducements brought to bear upon him, he has sold his gallery to another man who will take charge in a month or such a matter. In the meantime Mr. Clapp and his recent partner, Mr. Johnston will give the people of DeKalb county a chance to get as many fine photographs as they may wish before he goes to the city. No reductions will be made in prices; no chromos given as inducements, but each dozen will be finished in the highest grade of art, and twelve will be called a dozen at the old stand over postoffice. If you want Mr. Clapp to make you a good picture, at the old price, now is the time to have it done.

Origin of Our Flag.

As our existence as a nation had its origin in the English colonies, so our national ensign had for its basis the flag of England, the mother country from whom the colonies revolted. The yoke was shaken off, but the impress remains on our character, the flag was repudiated, but the colors were retained.

The English flag was the one in use in the Anglo-Saxon settlements in America from the time of the arrival of the Mayflower until January, 1776. It was a red flag with a blue canton, or corner, upon which was the cross of St. George, the patron saint of England, and afterwards the united crosses of St. George and St. Andrew, the patron saint of Scotland.

During the stirring times just preceding the Revolution, the style of the American flag was as chaotic as were the affairs of the country. Some dozen or more different ones were carried on different occasions, each indicating, in one way or another, the state of mind of the people. But in the latter part of 1775 it was deemed necessary to settle upon some design, and it was decided to retain the united crosses of King James on a blue ground in the corner, thereby recognizing the sovereignty of England, but to still further carry out the idea of a union flag by replacing the red field with one of thirteen red and white stripes emblematic of the union of the thirteen colonies against tyranny and oppression. This new striped flag was called the "grand union flag." It was not destined to wave long, for it soon became necessary to abandon the last symbol of loyalty, and on the 14th of June, 1777, the blended crosses of King James were erased from the blue canton, and the American Congress resolved "That the flag of the thirteen stripes alternate red and white; that the union be thirteen stars, white in a blue field, representing a new constellation." The fourteenth day of June is now known as "flag day," and is celebrated as such by the Sons of the American Revolution.—From "How to make an American Flag," in Demorest's Family Magazine for July.

'The Rocky Mountain Limited" And "The Big 5."

Two Grand Trains Daily Between the World's Fair City and the Foothills.

One Night Out, or One Day Out, Take Your Choice. Business Demands it, and the People Must Have it.

The popularity of "The Great Rock Island Route" as a Colorado line—it having long time since taken first place as the people's favorite between the Lakes and the Mountains—has compelled the management to increase its present splendid service by the addition of a train that is one night on the road from Chicago to Denver, Colorado Springs or Pueblo. This train will be known as the "ROCKY MOUNTAIN LIMITED," and will be put in service May first. Leaves Chicago daily at 10:45 a. m., arriving at above cities in the afternoon of the next day, earlier than any of its competitors Especial equipment has been built for this train, with the view of making it a limited in every sense of the word, and best of all, there will be no extra charge. The route of this exceedingly fast train is by the Rock Island Short Line, and a few of the large cities through which it passes, are Davenport, DesMoines, Council Bluffs, Omaha, Lincoln, Beatrice, Fairbury, Belleville, Phillipsburg, Smith Center, Colby and Goodland. This makes it a most desirable route, and particularly interesting to the traveler. Another point: The popularity of our dining-car service is still on the increase, and no money spared to make this service what our patrons always say, "the best."

Our "Big 5" will continued as usual, leaving Chicago at 10 p. m. and arriving at Denver, Colorado Springs and Pueblo, the second morning, being but one day out, and this fast and popular train goes through Omaha.

Our No. 11 will leave as heretofore at 6 p. m., arrive at Kansas City at 9:00 a. m., and will reach Denver, Colorado Springs and Pueblo the second morning.

Our Colorado service is made perfect by this new "Rocky Mountain Limited" and the "Big 5," and gives to the traveling public two flyers daily.

Manitou passengers should consult the map and time tables of our line, to fully appreciate the advantages in time saved by taking this route, when on their summer vacation.

4th of July Special Train.

For the grand celebration at Angola July 4th, the Lake Shore Ry. will sell tickets at half rates and run a special trian leaving Auburn at 8 15 a. m., returning leave Angola at 11.15 p. m. Preparations are being made for a good time. Go and enjoy it.

HYDROPHOBIA A FAKE.

SO SAYS SUPERINTENDENT HANKINSON, OF THE A. S. P. C. T. A.

He Knows a Good Deal About Dogs and Doesn't Believe That Many of Them Go Mad—Hydrophobia Is Imagination. Some of His Experiences With Cases.

"Can a man scare himself to death after having been bitten by a dog which isn't mad?" I asked Superintendent Hankinson, of the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, one day, as he sat in his little office on Twenty-second street.

Mr. Hankinson is a good natured looking man with reddish hair, who is afraid of nothing and nobody; certainly not of hydrophobia quacks.

"Why, certainly," he said, with decision. "That man down in Asbury Park who was bitten by a cat was scared to death. He never had hydrophobia. He died of nervous prostration brought on by worry over an imaginary danger. His friends were all pitying him and hoping he wouldn't die, and phrophesying that he would, and he was a man of nervous temperament, as educated people sometimes are, and it simply killed him. I suppose he read up in the books about hydrophobia and it turned his head. That's all there was about it. Do you remember what a great howl there was about those Newark boys who were bitten by a 'mad dog,' and who were sent over to Pasteur to be 'cured?'"

"Why, of course; who doesn't?"

"Well, it's quite easy to cure a disease that never existed. Those boys never had hydrophobia and never would have had it. The dogs didn't have it. During that excitement we went to Newark and found a lot of dogs shut up. We asked to be allowed to take them away to our stables, but the people wouldn't have it. Do you know what was done with those dogs? After the excitement was all over they were given back to their owners, every one of them. Not one was killed. Not one of them had anything worse than a fit. Why, our men are constantly handling dogs, get bitten again and again, but they never dream of having hydrophobia. It's a myth. There isn't any such thing."

A CASE OF IMAGINATION.

"Then you don't believe in the existence of such a disease?" I asked, thinking that, as Mr. Hankinson probably knows more about animals than any other man in America, he must be good authority.

"No, I don't. There may be such a disease, but I don't believe it. I never saw a case or knew of one positively."

"How about these doctors who cure it?" I asked.

"They don't cure anything. I asked a man who makes a specialty of treating hydrophobia, as he calls it, if he ever saw one single case of hydrophobia to which he could swear. He refused to answer, but he told me this story: 'A man came to him one day in terrible distress. He had been bitten by a dog; he feared madness; he could not sleep at night and was afraid he was going to die. He begged the doctor to treat him. The doctor said it was too late; the period of inoculation had passed, and it would be no good now. If he had hydrophobia there was no way to stop it.'

"The man went away, but came back the next day nearly frantic. He hadn't slept a wink and begged the doctor to do something for him. So the doctor took the man into his operating room and gave him a hypodermic injection of water—just pure Croton water. He went away, slept for the first time in two weeks and came back the next day for more water, and again the next, and was soon perfectly cured. The doctor told me that himself, and he professes to cure hydrophobia.

SHE WAS MAD.

"Why," continued Mr. Hankinson, "I've had a woman in hysterics right in that chair you're sitting in because a dog had bitten her. She wanted me to kill the dog. I wouldn't do it. Then she screamed in a terrible way. When she stopped I said to her: 'Madam, you ought to be ashamed of yourself. A woman of your intelligence! You've interrupted the business of the office and drawn a big crowd under the window to listen to your yelling, and all for a whim. Somebody told you you were going to go mad, and now you think you ought to go mad and you'll be mad if you don't go mad. You just go home and say nothing about it and you'll be all right.' And she did it.

"Another woman brought her boy in. He had been bitten by a mad dog, and she wanted it shot, she said. The boy looked perfectly well.

"'Now, look here,' said I, 'you've been talking a good deal to the boy about this, haven't you? And the neighbors have too? And you've been telling him that he's likely to have hydrophobia, haven't you?'

"'Yes, of course, we've talked about it,' said she.

"'Exactly,' said I. 'You've been taking the precise course likely to drive him mad or make him think himself so. You have been trying to scare him to death. If he were to go crazy it would be your fault. How is it, bub,' said I, turning to the little fellow. 'You don't expect to go mad, do you?'

"No, he didn't think he should, he said. He didn't feel any different. He was a brave little fellow. So I sent them home, too, and that was the last I heard of it. The dog had had a fit, that was all. It's a shame the way people will shoot valuable dogs just for a fit that might easily be cured or avoided."—New York World.

The Commissioners.

The special session that began on Monday found a considerable of odds and ends of work waiting to be looked after The first thing was hearing final reports of ditches established at the last term. Then they let the contract for the printing needed during the coming year. Burford of Indianapolis being the lowest bidder, got it. Yesterday they went to look at the Spencerville bridge, which is said to need repairs, and there are a number of others that have been injured by floods, or had their embankments washed away.

Dear Sir;—A sample of Krause's headache capsules was left in my husband's office a few days since, and as I am subject to headaches—neuralgic, nervous, and in fact every other kind—he thoughtfully brought the sample box home. The very next day I had a chance to try them and one capsule relieved me in less than half an hour my head felt as well as ever, with no bad feeling as the after result I have had these terrible headaches for twenty years, and have tried every remedy I ever heard of, but nothing I have ever taken has cured or relieved me as quickly as Krause's Headache Capsules. MRS. N. A. SKINNER.

Have I any objections to your printing a portion of my letter? No! If my testimony will induce any one who suffers with headache to buy your capsules I will be glad. MRS. N. A. SKINNER.

My wife has been suffering with female trouble of the severest kind for over three years. I have paid twenty-five dollars during the last three months, and she had no relief. She had doctored continually with the best of physicians. I bought three bottles each of Dullam's Great German Female Uterine Tonic and Dullam's Great German blood, liver, stomach and kidney cure, and can say to day that she is entirely cured.

Don't get Imposed Upon.

Is a good motto to follow in buying a medicine as well as in everything else. By the universal satisfaction it has given and by the many remarkeble cures it has accomplished, Dullam's Great German blood, liver, stomach and kidney cure has proven iteelf unequaled for building up and cleansing your system and for all diseases arising from impure blood. Do not experiment with an unheard of or untried article which you are told is as good, but be sure to get Dullam's. All druggists keep it. $1 a bottle. For sale by Casebeer & Matheny.

What is

CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."
DR. G. C. OSGOOD,
Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."
DR. J. F. KINCHELOE,
Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."
H. A. ARCHER, M. D.,
111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

Notice To Contractors.

The Board of Commissioners of DeKalb county, Indiana, will receive sealed bids up to July 18, 1892, at 2 o'clock p. m., for the erection of the following bridges:

No. 1, Fifty foot span over Cedar Creek, in Smithfield township, called the Farrington bridge; iron truss, 100 pounds strain to the square foot.

No. 2, Fifty-foot span over Cedar Creek, in Smithfield township, called the Brand bridge; iron truss as in No. 1.

No. 3, Sixty-foot span over Little Cedar Creek, in Butler township, two miles west of St. John Station, called the Lung bridge; iron truss, 100 pounds strain to the square foot.

No. 4, Ninety-eight-foot span in Grant township, over Cedar Creek, called the Plum bridge; iron truss, 100 pounds strain to the square foot

No. 5, The Probst bridge in Butler township, ½ mile east of St. John, over Cedar Creek. To be built of wood, or combination; 14-foot roadway in the clear; pile abutments. Contractors to furnish specifications.

We will also receive bids for the construction of three abutments for bridges No. 1, 2, and 3, named above. No. 4, will repair old abutment.

The height of abutment in bridges No. 1 and 2 is 12½ feet, commencing 4 feet below bottom of stream; and of No. 3, 13½ feet high, and commencing 4 feet below bottom of stream. Parties can furnish bids on iron, native stone or limestone. Bids on masonry must be by cubic yard. Bids must be accompanied by $250 check, for security to enter into contract within ten days.

The Board reserves the right to reject any and all bids.

By order of Board,

AUBURN AND VICINITY.

There being insufficient funds in the treasury to pay expected estimates, the commissioners at their September session, authorized John Braden and S. W. Sprott, the building committee to act as agents for the county to borrow $10,000 and the bonds of the county were to be issued therefor. There bonds were to be payable in five years with right of redemption any time before maturity.

There had been to the amount of $4,695.78 loaned through the building committee to the county and persons holding warrants for this cash advanced, were given the option of having them refunded in bonds provided they would accept them at no greater discount than three per cent.

On September 10th, the foundations were completed and on that day, the corner stone on the northeast of the foundation, was laid with masonic ceremonies. S. D. Bayless, of Ft. Wayne, Past. G. M. of the state officiated and the Hon. Chas. Case, later colonel of the 129th Indiana delivered an oration.

Proceedings were further increased in interest by the presentation of a silk flag to the Auburn Brass Band by Auburn ladies in a brief speech by one of their number.

The history of county officials records the deaths of several of them during their term. Henry Fusselman of the board of county commissioners died on Feb. 27th, at the age of 48 years. He had emigrated from Trumbull county, Ohio, to DeKalb county when the latter was nearly an unbroken wilderness, and till his demise, was intimately connected with the history of its rise and progress. At his house in Stafford township, the first church was organized, and he was spoken of as a man "whose character was marked by manly sincerity and excellent judgment."

Amzi Seeley was appointed to fill the temporary vacancy and at the October election he was regularly selected commissioner by a majority of eighteen votes. At the same time Moses Gonser was elected to the same office by but two majority.

At this election held Oct. 13, 2,793 votes were cast in the country. John Ralston was elected clerk; George Barney, treasurer, and David Eberly, surveyor, by majorities of 28, 2 and 9 respectively. The vote for recorder was a tie between John Butt and George R. Hoffman. The vote of Auburn precinct was 160 democratic to 94 republican.

Prior to election of Eberly as surveyor, Altenburg had resigned and Spencer Dills was appointed to fill the vacancy. Mr. Dills as will appear was destined to later take a leading part in education as a teacher in the Auburn and other schools, and as county examiner.

A. Knott was at this time superintendent of the Poor Farm and Dr. George Kessler was the physician chosen to prescribe for the inmates.

Matters were stagnant in Auburn from a building or business standpoint. There was nothing of moment transpiring in the narrow circle of country trading and the dissolution of the partnership of Messrs Stiefel & Wolf which took place in July, resulted in the former continuing in trade on his own account in the well known drugstore stand from which Mr. Pierce had retired satisfied with his experience.

During the spring, farmers from townships south, in considerable numbers passed northward along Main street with wagons freighted with grain which they were taking to Waterloo City where they found a good market and as a consequence bought much of their dry goods and groceries.

It was discouraging but without remedy and Auburn could only rest passive and bide her time.

The crops this year were excellent and the yield of wheat had been heavy. The Hales paid $1.00 and over per bushel and their store was thronged with customers.

The singular phenomenon of sharp frosts in the month of July and the early part of September, was presented although unattended by disaster except in the case of R. Johnson of Union township, who had thirty acres of corn destroyed.

The DeKalb county fair advertised its existence by a two days exhibition in October with moderate attendance and the usual entries. J. E. Rose was secretary and W. Griswold continued to act as president.

Although cast into the shade by the more elaborate later fairs, it was not without its influence upon the fortunes of Auburn as well as a precursor of the Waterloo Fair.

The winter term of the Auburn Union school closed on March 20th, and the state of the school was reputed excellent. The attendance was upwards of 200 in all grades during the term and the public in general was satisfied.

The retiring principal, Prof. James E. Rose was spoken of editorially in the New Era as: "A ripe scholar and a thorough disciplinarian," and he was said to have earned and won the good opinion of his students and that of the patrons of the school.

The New Great South American Kidney Cure.

The acknowledged superior cure and immediate relief for all derangements, painfulness and decay of the kidneys or bladder, Bright's disease, diabetes or any complaint that hurts or despoils either of these delicate organs. This new remedy has been thoroughly tested by learned physicians and found far superior to any medicine yet discovered for quickly relieving all weaknesses, aches, pains and distresses arising from disease of any part of the urinary passages. It is a great relief for the old, middle aged and children, male or female. It relieves at once retention and pain in passing water, and it is very effective in relieving prostatic troubles in the old, and for nightly incontinence of water in children, or others, caused by weakness of the bladder. It may be worth to many a hundred times its cost. This is a remedy of great value to ladies, because they are very liable to weakness and pain peculiar to their sex. Sold by Robbins & McCord, druggists, Auburn, Ind. tf

A GOOD CROP OF NEWS

Cyclone in Northern Indiana—Gen. Weaver Nominated for President by the People's Party—Five Persons Killed in a Wreck on the Wabash—Has Enough of Congress.

Went Down to Death.

A special train on the Wabash Road went into the ditch at Keller, Ind., and killed George Shorey, engineer, Frank Moore, fireman, C. F. Wilcox, trainmaster, Dunlap, superintendent of bridges and buildings, and Alfred Helm, foreman of carpenters. The wreck was caused by a washout

The catastrophe was caused by the sudden rising of a small stream known as Kentner Creek, which dries up entirely in summer but becomes a raging torrent in the rainy season. It is spanned by a culvert probably fifteen feet wide in the clear and upon this culvert is built an embankment fifteen feet high. The little rill was swollen to a mad flood by the heavy storm and the culvert becoming gorged the water backed up on the north side of the fill until at last it cut through the earth on the east side of the culvert and carried out the ponderous arch and thousands of cubic yards of soil, leaving a yawning chasm thirty feet from brink to brink. The rails and ties hung over the abyss and gave the track the semblance of being safe.

A Cyclone's Swath.

Plymouth (Ind.) special: One of the severest wind and thunder storms, accompanied by heavy rains, that was ever witnessed by the oldest inhabitants visited this section of the country the other night. Houses were lifted off their foundations and carried some distance, buildings unroofed and hundreds of trees blown down. From all over the country reports are coming in of heavy loss to stock and much damage to the crops. North Manchester, Bluffton, Huntington and other Northern Indiana points report extensive damage by the storm. Much stock was killed, but no fatalities are reported.

Three Children Burned to Death in a Colorado Tenement House.

A two-story tenement house at New Castle, Col., caught fire, and the three small children of David Kingfield were burned to death. The oldest was 9 years of age. The children screamed and cried for aid, but the men in the street were unable to render them any assistance whatever. Several attempts were made, but the men could not endure the flames. The sight of the children standing in the window in their nightgowns and appealing piteously for help unnerved all.

Rolling Mill Sold.

The Anderson and Irondale Rolling Mill, one of the largest industries located in the Indiana gas belt, situated in Anderson, has changed hands. George Laughlin, of Cleveland, and H. W. Prawle and R. W. Numet of Chicago, are now the owners. The consideration was $35,000. The mill will be doubled in its capacity to turn out sheet iron. It has been a paying venture from the start, and will be managed by George Laughlin.

To Visit the Fair.

Rio de Janiero special: A company has been formed here for the purpose of chartering a steamship with accommodations for 100 first-class passengers desirous of taking a trip around the world, including a forty days' visit to the World's Fair. The steamer will start from Rio de Janeiro August 1, and before its passengers return they will have traveled about 60,000 miles by sea and 5,000 miles by land.

Revolution in Honduras.

According to steamship advices received at New Orleans a revolution which bids fair of success broke out June 23 in Celba, Honduras, and a number of government troops were killed and wounded. The revolutionists seized the American steamship Joseph Oteri, Jr., owned in New Orleans, and embarked for Truxillo to seize that place and other coast points.

Had Enough of Congress.

The Hon. H. C. Patten, member of Congress from the Tenth Indiana district, has written a letter to H. A. Barnard, State Committeeman, declining to be a candidate for renomination owing to his private business affairs, which now demand his immediate attention.

Was Granted a Pardon.

Samuel C. Graham, an American citizen, condemned to twenty years imprisonment for the murder of a Mexican in the State of Talisco, has, upon recommendation of Congressman Springer and other prominent citizens, been pardoned by the Mexican Government.

An Ex-Senator Injured.

John J. Patterson, formerly United States Senator from South Carolina, was dangerously and possibly fatally injured at Bloomington, Ill., by tripping over a house-moving chain carelessly left on the sidewalk.

The People's Party.

The National Convention of the Poeple's party in session at Omaha, nominated James B. Weaver of Iowa, for President, and James G. Fields of Virginia, for Vice President.

A Long Fast.

Mrs. M. Curtis of Greencastle. Ind., has taken no food for forty-five days. She suffers from cancer of the stomach.

Bought Bogus Gold Bricks.

O. P. Brown, one of the wealthiest farmers of Parks County, Ind., went to the Montezuma Bank and drew $6,000, which he invested in gold bricks. The swindlers who robbed him are now being sought after.

Killed by a Toy Cannon.

Some boys who were firing bullets from a toy cannon at Chicago, accidentally killed Annie Weber, 3 years old, who was playing in an adjoining yard.

Explosion of Fireworks.

A terrific explosion of fire works occurred in the store rooms of the American Toy company, 155 Fifth avenue, Chicago. The roof was blown out and the building almost instantly took fire. A crowd gathered, which was treated to a premature Fourth of July display, and when the fire engines arrived sky rockets, Roman candles and serpents were soaring through the roof, while fire crackers and torpedoes exploding in bunches of hundreds, made a din like that of a pitched battle. The fire was quickly under control, however, and none of the adjoining buildings, suffered, although the toy company's store was gutted. The loss is about $20,000, half insured. All the persons in the building escaped with slight bruises, except Mamie Wright, who was badly crushed on the stairs in the rush to escape from the building.

DEATH AND DESTRUCTION

Dealt Out By a Pennsylvania Cyclone.

A special from Philadelphia, dated the 2nd inst., says: A death dealing storm passed over this city at 11:30 a. m. It was most severe in the northern part of the city. John Jenkins, colored, was struck by lightning and instantly killed. The injured are: John Mercer. blown off the roof of a house and had his right thigh fractured; George Solely, badly shocked by lightning; Patrick Furlong, shocked by lightning; Frank Sherring, ankle fractured by being blown from a ladder; Mrs. Wiggman, seriously injured by the roof of her dwelling crushing upon her. The roof of 2561 Geiser street was blown off and Charles Christian was badly hurt. Roofs by the dozens were blown off, trees were uprooted and considerable damage to property done.

The storm was of cyclonic proportions when it reached Gloucester, N. J., the sporting resort on the Delaware River, diagonally from Philadelphia five miles, and carried death and destruction in its path. The tornado was 600 feet in width and it resembled a huge waterspout as it crossed the river. The water and everything in its track was lifted up and destruction marked the wake of the gale.

The dead are: Patrick Highlands, 5 years of age, Philadelphia.

The injured are: Mary Ann Hamilton, 35 years, wife of Robert Hamilton, head and foot cut; Mary Hamilton, 18 years, legs crushed and hurt internally; Maggie Hamilton, aged 9 months, arms crushed.

The tornado first struck and demolished the pavilion attached to the hotel of Julius Frombagen along the river front. John Frombagen was killed. The roof circled through the air, and, descending through the building, demolished the house. The Hamilton family, consisting of the father, mother, and daughters, Mary and Maggie, were at dinner when the storm broke.

The storm was severe at Stanford, N. J., and points in general along the river, and inland suffered.

IRON WORKERS STRIKE.

Nearly 150,000 Workmen Out of Employment.

Pittsburgh special: When the clocks tolled twelve strokes at midnight Friday, nearly 150,000 workmen, who had toiled almost incessantly during the past twelve months, were out of employment. The scales in force during the past year expired at midnight, and in all mills the proprietors who have not signed the scale for the ensuing year's work ceased entirely at that time. The number of iron and steel mills that closed down is estimated at upward of 460 rolling mills in the United States, 425 of which have trains of rolls connected with their establishments. Twenty-five or fifty of these have been idle for some time past. Of the 400 in operation until Thursday night nearly 300 are situated west of the Alleghany Mountains. Quite a number of these have signed the scale, leaving about 250 mills, which are at present lying idle. These employ upward of 100,000 men. The number of glass factories which are not in operation is placed at 200 and the men are estimated at nearly 50,000.

The firm discharged all the employes at midnight and notified them to report for their pay at the office on Saturday. By this action the Carnegies have forestalled the men and by making it a lockout instead of a strike have placed the men on the defensive. The streets are crowded, but everything is quiet.

FAMOUS CANNON.

The Guns Carried in Columbus' Flag Ship in Chicago.

Chicago special: Two of the cannon, which were at one time, it is believed, mounted on board Christopher Columbus' flag ship, have been received in this city. Nothing but the body of the guns remains, the woodwork, of course, having rotted away. The guns themselves are almost worn to pieces, and are not much more than huge chunks of rust. Indeed the cannon are put on the "scrap iron" list in the custom house papers. One of the officers who was detailed for work in connection with the exposition found the relics at one of the West Indian Islands. Tradition and more substantial proof showed that the cannon had been used in a fort erected by Columbus' son, and that they were brought from Spain with Columbus' fleet. The ruins of the fort are still to be seen. The Government prizes the cannon as the best exhibit yet secured.

Mr. Davis May Resign.

Chicago Special: It is not among the impossibilities that officers of the Columbian exposition may soon be looking for a new director general. Colonel Davis, who now occupies that position, is not satisfied with and will not accept the new agreement between the sub-committees from the Board of Directors and the national commission. That agreement, which creates a new board of adminstration for the entire management of the exposition, strips Director General Davis of some of the powers conferred upon him, he thinks, and if it is approved by the two boards and put into effect there is nothing left for him to do but resign. Director General Davis did not say that he would resign, but the statements he did make leave a very clear way to that inference.

Horrible Hanging.

Thornton was hanged in the jail yard at Fort Smith, Ark. The execution was repulsive in the extreme. When the drop fell, the rope nearly severed Thornton's head from his body. Many of the spectators were overcome by the horrible sight. When he mounted the scaffold Thornton protested that he was innocent of the crime for which he was to suffer. John Thornton murdered his daughter at Krabs, Choctaw Nation, in November of last year. The motive of the murder is unknown, but it is believed that Thornton attempted to assault his daughter, who had been recently married, and then killed her to prevent her from testifying to the assault.

A Frightful Situation.

Chicago special: A frightful condition of affairs exists in St. Albert's cemetery, the Bohemian-Polish burying ground away out on Milwaukee avenue. The city of the dead is a vast swamp, and the drainage percolating through it flows into the river and then out into the lake, perhaps to be taken into the mains and distributed through the homes of Chicago citizens. There are 26,000 bodies in the cemetery, and burials are taking place there at the rate of 150 a month. The graves are scarcely a foot apart and often half full of water when the coffins are lowered into them.

Say Gresham Will Accept.

Omaha special: Sam T. Jonet, delegate, and M. C. Rankin, Treasurer of the People's Party National Committee, both of Terre Haute, have arrived here in advance of the Indiana delegation. They wear Gresham badges and assert that several delegates have letters from Judge Gresham, which they will show in good time, saying that he will accept the nomination if tendered him. The Georgia delegates are talking strongly anti-Gresham and say they will not support him, Stewart or any other man who has not hitherto identified himself with the Alliance.

Lost an Arm to a Lion.

At Duluth, Minn., Edmond Reed placed his right hand on a lion in a circus to make him rise to please the spectators. Reed had been cutting meat to feed the animals. The lion struck his arm a terrific blow with its paw and closed its jaw upon the arm above the elbow. The keeper's prong was jabbed into the beast's nose, but it did not release its hold. The fainting man was torn away, his arm being stripped of flesh and the bones smashed. He was removed to the hospital and the arm amputated at the shoulder.

A Frightful Fall.

A frightful fall occurred at Niagara Falls. Painters were busy on the tower of the new suspension bridge on the Canadian side when a piece of scantling supporting a scaffold, on which were Stephen Duffey and Charles Johnson, broke. Duffey pitched headforemost down the dizzy height, fully 100 feet, to the stone foundations of the tower and was smashed to pieces. His head was simply a mass of pulp and broke the heavy stone where he struck. Johnson fortunately caught one of the guy cables and saved himself.

The Big Slugger on a Drunk.

John L. Sullivan and his backer, Charles Johnson, had a little quarrel at Coney Island the other night because of John's unsteady habits of late, but the matter has been patched up by Sullivan promising to start at once for his training quarters. Sullivan will keep his word and starts immediately with his trainer, Phil Casey, for Oyster Bay to begin work. Casey and Sullivan will be constantly together from now until the big fistic contest in New Orleans is decided.

Canada Sat Down On.

The Senate Committee on Foreign Relations has unanimously agreed to favorably report the bill introduced by Senator Davis authorizing and directing the President to enforce retaliatory measures against Canadian commerce by imposing a toll on vessels passing through the St. Marys canal as an offset to the toll levied upon American vessels going through the Welland Canal. Mr. Davis has been instructed to press the bill for passage.

A Libel Suit.

At Indianapolis, Capt. Eli F. Ritter, a prominent member of the Prohibition Party, has brought suit against Leonard Hinkle, formerly chairman of the Marion County Prohibition Committee, demanding $10,000 for libel. Hinkle it is alleged, caused to be printed and distributed circulars that stated that Ritter was the most unprincipled of men and one of the greatest scoundrels that he had ever had any business dealings with.

A Foiled Highwayman.

At Denver, Col., a young man 18 years old, giving the name of Herbert Sullivan, walked into the National Bank of Commerce, presented a pistol to the head of the paying teller, D. A. Barton, and demanded $5,000. Mr. Barton reached for his revolver and fired at the man, who dropped his pistol and ran out of the bank. He was pursued and arrested and lodged in jail.

Cholera in Italy.

The Vienna correspondent of the London Chronicle says: Cholera has appeared in Italy. Five cases of the disease have been reported in Brindisi and two cases in Latcano. None of the cases have proved fatal yet, but the great alarm felt by the people over the appearance of the malady in the country is greatly increased by the attempts of the officials to keep the cases secret.

Train Ditched.

The express train, east bound, on the Chicago & Erie road, was wrecked ten miles east of Huntington, Ind. Ten cars of bullion, silk and fine horses went into the ditch. The wreck was caused by ties being piled on the track, for the purpose of robbery. Nobody was killed, but the monetary loss will be very heavy. The train was running at the rate of forty-five miles an hour.

Four Men Killed.

Four men were killed while at work laying the stone abuttment to a railroad bridge at Providence, R. I. The bank above them caved in completely burying Patrick Sullivan, Leroy Libbey. Pietro Grande and Pasquale Diorio. Two other workmen were partially buried but were rescued alive.

Killed by the Cars.

A special on the Panhandle Road instantly killed Samuel Ackerman at Frankton, Ind. The special carried Superintendent A. B. Leeds. General Freight Agent D. T. McCabe, Train Master J. S. May and other officials of the road. The train was making fifty miles an hour. They were inspecting the natural gas towns.

Youthful Safe Blowers.

A remarkable instance of youthful depravity has been brought to the attention of the Rochester police. Three brothers named Moss, aged 8, 9, and 11 respectively, were arrested for safe breaking and burglary. The boys admitted their guilt and told an astonishing tale of juvenile waywardness.

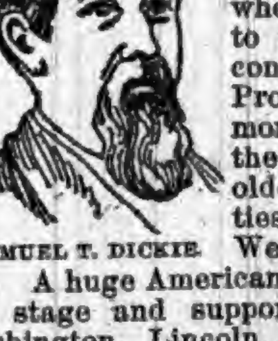
GEN. BIDWELL GETS IT.

PROHIBITIONISTS NAME HIM FOR PRESIDENT.

Excitement Over the Debate on Platform—Free Coinage Is Defeated, but Financial, Tariff, and Anti-Liquor Planks Adopted—Convention Proceedings.

First Day.

Cincinnati special:



SAMUEL T. DICKIE.

The big Music Hall was gay with flaunting banners, national flags, coats of arms of the several States, palms, and flowers, and prohibition inscriptions when the delegates to the sixth annual convention of the Prohibition party, more prompt than the delegates of the older political parties, began to file in Wednesday morning. A huge American flag surmounted the stage and supported portraits of Washington, Lincoln, Neal Dow and Frances Willard.

The first cheering was that which greeted the Massachusetts delegation, which entered in a body carrying opened, light-gray parasols, and singing a campaign tune. It was 10:30 o'clock when the proceedings began with the playing of the hymn, "America," on the immense organ, aided by a bugle band on the stage. The audience rose and joined in singing the hymn. At this time the body of the hall was filled, and the galleries were about half occupied.

Chairman Dickie, of the National Committee, then called the convention to order and introduced Dr. J. G. Evans, of Hedding College, Illinois, who formally opened the convention with prayer, after which the delegates were welcomed to the city by Rev. Dr. Lockwood, of Cincinnati.

Prof. Dickie responded to the address, and closed by naming Gov. St. John as Temporary Chairman.

Wild cheering and the waving of flags and handkerchiefs greeted the mention of the name of ex-Gov. St. John. The shouting was renewed again and again as the noted Kansan stepped forward, assumed the gavel, and addressed the convention.

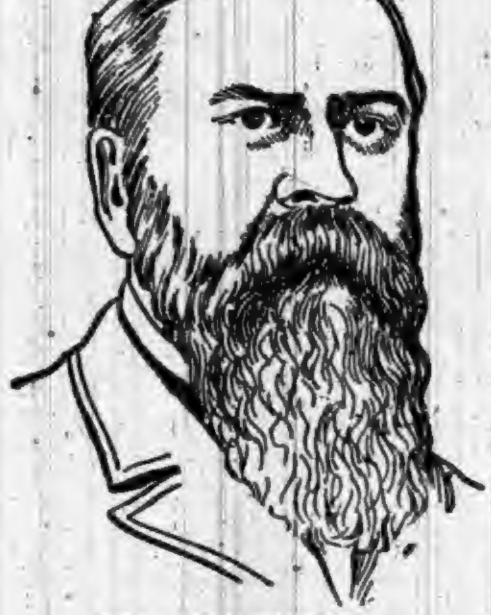
On motion of Mr. Cleghorn, of Wisconsin, the roll of States was called, and each delegation announced the members it had selected for representation on the committees, after which the convention adjourned until four o'clock in the afternoon.

The attendance, though not as large at the second session as at the earlier one, was over 6,000. The exercises were opened with prayer by the Rev. Father Mahoney, of St. Paul, Minn. It was decided on motion that all former nominees of the National Prohibition party be invited to seats on the platform. This was carried amid applause. It was shown that both Judge Black and the Rev. John Russell, the nominees for 1872, were present. H. A. Thompson, the Vice Presidential nominee in 1880 with Neal Dow, was present.



GEN. JOHN BIDWELL.

The committee on credentials reported through Colonel Cleghorn that there were 972 delegates actually present in the convention. The committee recommended Col. Eli F. Ritter, of Indiana, as Permanent Chairman of the convention, and Sam Small, of Georgia, as Permanent Secretary. The assistant secretaries of the temporary organization were recommended as the permanent assistants. The committee also recommended that State delegations cast the vote only for those who were actually present.

Sam Small, on the part of the minority of the Committee on Credentials, arose to make a minority report. He, in behalf of fifteen States, protested against the action and recommendation of the majority, and made a strong speech and used vigorous language against the majority report. There were several lively passages between the delegates growing out of this discussion. There was finally a call of the roll demanded on the majority and minority reports, which resulted as follows: For minority report, 359; against, 521. The report of the majority was then adopted without division, and a recess was then taken until 8 o'clock.

In the evening Permanent Chairman Ritter was escorted to the chair. After he had made a brief address, the convention adjourned until 9:30 Thursday morning.

Second Day.

When the Prohibition National Convention was called to order Thursday morning the Platform Committee was still at work, and it was evident that it would take some time to harmonize the conflicting interests represented therein.

Three hours' pulling and hauling by the full committee, in addition to the all-night session of the sub-committee, left matters still in bad shape. The preamble of the platform was complete, and the alcohol and woman suffrage planks, but the committee seemed at odds over the utterance upon the financial question. It was finally settled that the report of the committee would be in favor of free coinage. The tariff was the next subject taken up in the committee and another prolonged struggle began.

At the request of a number of delegates "The Queen of the Prohibition party," as she was introduced by Chairman Ritter, Miss Willard, was called upon for a speech. Miss Willard declared that she was not in favor of fusion, and closed by pledging herself and the W. C. T. U. to stand by the Prohibition party.

Dr. J. G. Evans, of Abingdon, Ill., presented a plea for contributions to enable the National Committee to prosecute its work, and subscriptions to the amount of $20,000 were taken before the session adjourned, which it then did until 2 o'clock in the afternoon

Apparently realizing the fact that too much time had already been wasted, and that nominations should be reached with as little delay as possible, the delegates were prompt in assembling for the afternoon session. For five hours the convention discussed the platform and the discussion at times became warm and spirited. The resolutions were finally agreed upon and adopted, and the convention again adjourned until evening.

Nominations for President were the first thing in order at the night session. John P. St. John nominated Gen. John Bidwell, of California, John L. Thomas presented the name of W. Jennings Demorest, New York, and L. B. Logan named Gideon T. Stewart, of Ohio.

But one ballot was necessary to decide, the result being: Gen. John Bidwell, 590; W. Jennings Demorest, 139; Gideon T. Stewart, 179.

New York gave 3 votes to Bascom.

When the result was known the band played "Hail, Columbia," and the usual shouting and general hurrah took place.

The roll-call for candidates for Vice President was ordered, and the following candidates were presented: Sam Small of Georgia, William Satterlee of Minnesota, Joshua Levering of Maryland, J. B. Cranfill of Texas, and Thos. R. Carskadon of West Virginia. Small withdrew before a vote was taken.

The totals on the first ballot for Vice President were: Levering, 380; Cranfill, 386; Satterlee, 26; Carskadon, 21. Enough changes were made before the figures were announced to give Cranfill of Texas 416 votes, 9 more than enough to win. Dr. Cranfill was called to the stage and made a stirring address, and at 2:10 a. m., Friday, the convention adjourned sine die.

SOME FAMOUS FATHERS OF THE TEMPERANCE MOVEMENT.

An Incredulous Professor.

Tom Anjerry, a student at the University of Texas, applied to Professor Snore for permission to be absent: "I would like to be excused from my geography lesson this afternoon, as I want to take my sister out riding." The old professor, who is no fool, looked at the young man over the top of his spectacles and said, slowly: "Want to take your sister out riding, do you? Is she any relation to you?"—Texas Siftings.

IF YOU CAN READ

and write and are possessed of fair intelligence, you are fully qualified to make a grand success of what we offer you. We have lately published at great expense and labor a perfect wonder in the way of an illustrated Gift Book, suitable to all classes, an ornament to any home, and at a price that brings it within the reach of all, even those of moderate means. Heretofore only those who indulged in luxuries have felt that they could afford a book of this class, as they are sold in book stores at $5.00 and upwards. The book which we offer is not in any way inferior to those above referred to, but is far superior to hundreds of books of this nature that are sold at prices exceeding ours by an enormous per cent. It is selling with a rush wherever shown. Agents have only to show the book and mention the price, and it sells on its merits without further talking. No better Christmas, New Year's or Birthday present can be selected. It will sell, not only for holiday trade, but at all seasons of the year, for the reason that all will want it in their homes, and will have it as soon as they know the low price at which our agents can furnish them. Reader, if you need profitable employment, and a business in which you can and will take pride, as well as make money rapidly, do not fail to send for circulars containing private terms to agents, and full information which will be sent FREE upon application. Old and new agents alike are making handsome salaries—yes, fortunes. Many of those who are making the best records are new at the agency business, having had no previous experience. ☞ Make a start—the field is entirely new. No such terms have been offered agents as we now offer on this wonderful book. Special qualifications not necessary, for it sells everywhere at sight. Perhaps you have at some time been unsuccessful at the agency business. If so, there is every reason why you should try this, the PRINCE of gift books, as failure is impossible if you make A START. Write us to-day, study our circulars and directions, then order an outfit and go to work with push and energy. You may make the greatest mistake of your life, if you allow this GOLDEN opportunity to pass unimproved.

HEARTS OF GOLD
—OR—
THE HEIRESS OF MAPLE LEAF FARM

BY GENEVIEVE ULMER.

CHAPTER XVI.
THE COMPACT.

A culprit apprehended by an officer of the law, a criminal accused by a stern judge, could not have exhibited more emotion than did the man whom Ralph Prescott had accepted as Paul Dalton, at the soul-thrilling words of the excited Ruth Elliott.

Strange words they were—wild words, bordering seemingly on incoherency.

Were they the result of hallucination, delirium? No! As the rapt lurker studied the face of the beautiful girl, he knew that the penetrating gaze of reason, the great throbbing instinct of love, had aided her to see beyond the superficial, and had unmasked villainy.

In plain words, she accused this man with being an impostor. In awful arraignment before the bar of her womanly conviction, she charged him with the crime of robbing her of her husband.

Then he was not Paul Dalton, not her husband, not the ex-Superintendent of Maple Leaf Farm! He was an impostor, a fraud, and, as the truth flashed upon Ralph Prescott's excited mind, he now comprehended many vague and perplexing utterances that he had overheard him use during the eventful evening just past.

Furthermore, as he gazed, he marveled how he could ever have taken this man for Paul Dalton. There was a marvelous resemblance, but of features alone, for the dissimilarity in soul, in expression, was utterly lacking.

What had aided to deceive Prescott was the shaving off of the beard. This prepared him for a change in looks. As to the voice, a slight cold might account for the huskiness that made this Paul Dalton talk so differently from the other, the real Paul Dalton.

Yes, there could be no doubt of it, the truth was out, the plotter unmasked, a fraud revealed that completely outvied all Ralph Prescott's puerile villainy.

This man, a relative of Paul Dalton, a man at least exactly resembling him, had heard of his legacy. He had imprisoned the real heir; the bearded man, his accomplice, was his jailer; he had boldly assumed Paul Dalton's identity; he was scheming to secure the Forsythe fortune and fly with it, leaving the real legatee a beggar.

The bewildering complications that were thus put in play made Ralph Prescott's brain fairly reel with surmise and uncertainty.

The false Paul Dalton cowered like a craven before the flashing glance of Ruth Elliott. A woman's shrewdness had penetrated his bold assumption of the identity of the man he resembled so extraordinarily.

He had deluded Prescott and the lawyer, but now he was unmasked, and one word publicly spoken by the woman before him would not only cost him a fortune but might send him to a penal institution.

That word, however, was never spoken. Of a sudden, the nerves of the agitated Ruth gave way, the strain of the hour becoming too intense for her already weakened nature. With a moan she sank senseless to the floor. The impostor glanced at her affrightedly for a moment or two, and then with a white, scared face, hurried from the room.

Ralph Prescott was after him in a flash. He directed a hurried injunction to the woman who was attending Ruth to look to her charge, then he was dashing from the house in pursuit of a figure flying down the deserted street, as if pursued by a pestilence.

"Stop!"

As the impostor dashed across a vacant fir-lined lot the mandate rang out clear, sharp, imperious.

He was trembling all over, his face was the color of ashes, his eyes haunted with a fearful dread, his manner cowed, crushed; little like that of the haughty, insolent tyro of the early evening, as he turned and faced Ralph Prescott.

The latter, realizing his advantage, pressed it promptly.

"What do you want?"

"You."

"Oh," peering closer, "it is Prescott. Give me time to catch my breath, man!"

He leaned against a tree and panted furiously. Ralph Prescott watched him, as might a cat a mouse. He had cornered his man. He knew what to do now, fast enough.

"You've made a mess of it," he said, bluntly, at last.

"Have I?" And the other laughed uneasily. "What do you mean?"

"I have followed you all the evening."

The impostor started.

"Newcombe!" ejaculated the impostor.

"Ah! is that his name? Thank you. Yes. Newcombe, the jailer of the real Paul Dalton at Black Rock."

The shot told. Ralph Prescott had guessed the truth. His companion shivered at his words.

"You know all—I am lost!" he muttered. "At least, the game is."

"I furthermore," pursued Prescott, coolly, "witnessed your interview with Ruth Elliott."

The impostor was silent. He was overwhelmed at the fast-occurring disasters of the night.

"Yes, I know all this," continued Prescott. "I know your plans, and I hold the whip-hand now. No need of subterfuge now. You and I had better come to an understanding."

"What kind of an understanding?" stammered the abashed impostor.

"Well, our interests are identical, in one respect."

"And what may that be?"

"Old Geoffrey Forsythe's fortune, left to the real Paul Dalton, coveted by you, and rightfully my own. I see no means of regaining it by fair means. You have suggested and put in force foul ones. I hate Paul Dalton. The first step toward revenge would be the securing of the fortune."

"Well?" muttered his auditor vaguely.

"If we can arrive at a harmonious conclusion, can make an equitable arrangement, I might be tempted to allow you to go on with your imposition. At the end of a week, unless I interfere, you will receive the legacy from Lawyer Drew."

"You forget—that woman may speak."

"Ruth Elliott? She may not know of your plans in that direction."

"She could denounce me—she suspects that I have imprisoned her husband."

"But she is ill; the delirium may return, and—see here, my friend. Agree to pay me one-half the fortune when you get it, and I will guarantee to keep Ruth Elliott silent until the week has passed away."

"A bargain!" cried the other with brightening eyes.

"Very well. But there must be no deception, no double-dealing."

"Am I not completely in your power?"

"Perhaps. Still, I shall watch you closely, and must be made a confidant of all your past history and present plots. Now, then, go to your hotel. I will join you there and report progress in an hour."

"And you?"

"I shall return to Ruth. I shall remove her to some safe place, where she will be kept a secure prisoner until your plans materialize."

"All right!"

Relievedly, hopefully, the impostor sped towards the hotel. He gained his room and lit a lamp.

"A close shave!" he muttered, as he removed his hat; "but better half the fortune than none, and if I ever get my fingers on the money I'll find some way to delude this meddler. The girl is the main cause of fear, but with her a prisoner, I can consummate my plots without fear of hindrance or detection. Ah! what is that?"

He paused, and glanced down at a white object lying on the carpet at his feet. It looked like a folded note, slipped under the door of the room.

He took it up and opened it. He started wildly as he scanned the single line it bore.

Then a groan burst from his lips. Wretchedly pale, wretchedly heartsick, he read the simple words that conveyed a terrible warning, a mystic revelation to his guilty soul.

"Leave Ridgeton, abandon your wicked plans, or I swear to unmask all your past," it ran.

And the signature the horrid scrawl bore was:

"Your deserted wife, ISABEL."

CHAPTER XVII.
PRECIOUS PREY.

Ridgeton had something new to talk about next day.

The woman who had been called by Ralph Prescott to attend upon Ruth, had told her story with dawn, and the villagers were consequently treated to a new bit of gossip.

Her story was a remarkable one. She had been summoned by Prescott to the house of the recluse, to find the pretended nurse, the real Ruth, in a dead faint, she said.

She extolled Prescott for his kindness to the sufferer, as did the attendant physician.

Later, Paul Dalton had appeared, and had left hurriedly. She returned to the sick-room to find the patient in a worse swoon than before. She left her a few minutes to go to her own home. When she returned Ruth Elliott had mysteriously disappeared.

Ralph Prescott flitted about town the next day, apparently terribly anxious as to the whereabouts of the missing girl. He craftily circulated the story that Paul Dalton had wedded Ruth only to gain her grandfather's fortune, and, securing that, would disappear; that he had undoubtedly secretly removed her to some friend's home, away from the village.

What was Ruth to him now? What Paul Dalton? What cared he for their doings and intentions? They were strangers to him henceforth and forever more!

So several days passed by. The false Paul Dalton either kept closely to his room at the hotel, or did not appear in town at all.

He visited Lawyer Drew several times, and tried to hurry up the settlement of the estate. He urged that he needed money to purchase some land to be had at a bargain.

Ralph Prescott kept pretty clear track of his movements. The impostor sat awaiting his arrival early one evening. Affairs were about to materialize, the schemers felt sanguine. The impostor was anxious to secure the money and escape, ere some new complication balked his projects. Ralph Prescott was determined to be on hand at the finish, and insist on a fair division of the ill-gotten booty of crime.

The false Paul Dalton had grown terribly nervous of late. That there was a mystery about his past history; that he might, if he would, explain many a dark passage in the life of the man he personated; that his own career had been closely linked with that of the imprisoned man, Ralph Prescott was positive, but his new colleague in craftiness refused to divulge his secrets.

The latter had been a changed man since he received that warning missive, that menacing note that was signed "Isabel."

He started at his own shadow; he rarely went out on the streets until after dark, and then his movements were uneasy and watchful. The man was haunted. He had bribed Ralph Prescott to silence; he had closed the lips of Ruth Elliott, but there was another foe that he feared, and he alone realized why he so dreaded her.

"She means what she says," he muttered concernedly, "but she has made no move yet—has made no effort to appear. Oh! I must get the money. It will buy comfort, luxury in a foreign clime—it will place me beyond the reach of the law I fear. Why, Prescott! What is the matter?"

The man he had been waiting for had burst into the room abruptly.

His face was ghastly, his manner agitated.

"We are ruined!" he gasped incoherently.

The imposter looked alarmed.

"Speak, man!" he exclaimed; "something has happened?"

"Yes, the worst—the very worst," groaned Prescott. "Not only will you have to fly, but I myself as well, for now all my connection with this wretched affair will come out."

"You mean——"

"The girl, Ruth!"

"What of her? Not dead?"

"No. She has escaped."

The impostor reeled where he stood, as from some terrible shock.

"Impossible!" he gasped.

"It is true. You know the night we made our compact, I removed her to the charge of a sordid old woman living in a secluded cabin in the forest?"

"Yes."

"She watched her, drugged her, held her a close captive. Two hours since I visited the place to see if the girl was all right."

"And found——"

"Her gone, and the old woman tied hand and foot near the open door. She said that a woman had appeared a little before, and had demanded to see her captive."

"Which she refused."

"Promptly. The woman did not wait to argue with her. With a strength that was remarkable and effective she threw her down and bound her, unlocked the door of the room in which Ruth was confined, led her from the cabin, and disappeared."

"A woman!" muttered the impostor, with drawn brows, his anxious face growing white every moment.

"Yes; dark-eyed, wild-faced, and having a scar under one eye——"

"Isabel!" groaned the impostor. "She threatened—she meant it."

"And who is Isabel?" demanded Prescott.

"Ask me no questions, but act," cried the other, excitedly. "Ruth Elliott is free. Her rescuer knows, or at least surmises, every detail of our plots, and is bound to balk them if possible. There is only one thing to do."

"What is it?"

"Secure the fortune."

"If we can."

"We must!"

"But——"

"I saw the lawyer this afternoon. He characterized my haste as unusual, but the offer of a large fee induced him to expedite matters. I signed some necessary papers, and he said if he could get certain securities from the bank this afternoon, he would close up the matter with me this evening. Come."

"Where?"

"To Lawyer Drew's house."

The impostor walked the street like a man who had just escaped prison or was fearing arrest, with his apprehensive backward glances and his cautious forward ones.

He did not impart all his suspicions to his companion. Had he told Ralph Prescott all, the latter would have shrank from going on with a plot in which a wronged woman's hand was yet to turn the die of destiny.

They found Mr. Drew immersed in documents in his library, deep in the intricacies of business relating to the case in hand.

"Not too late—she has not been here, at least!" breathed the impostor, relievedly.

"I will be ready for you in a moment, Mr. Dalton," spoke the lawyer. "I presented your papers in court, secured the necessary bondsmen, and as there is the realty still left in my hands that would cover any possible future claim against a man who never contracted any debts, I am justified in paying you over the money Geoffrey Forsythe left you, only, I find it difficult to convert all the securities into cash."

"Well, give me what you can," interrupted the impostor, impatiently.

"Oh, I have realized on nearly all the personal property," announced Drew. "Here," and he handed over some receipts, "are some papers to sign."

With feverish haste and a trembling hand the avaricious schemer signed the documents tendered.

"Here you will find over thirty thousand dollars of the legacy," continued Lawyer Drew, extending a long pocket-book. "The residue you can call for or have sent you within a month."

Little danger of his ever calling for it; once safe in foreign lands, he would be fully satisfied with the bulk of the fortune, decided the eager impostor.

He took the wallet and counted over the crisp bills it contained and stowed it in his pocket, watched with wolfish, suspicious eyes by Ralph Prescott.

He bade the lawyer a hurried good-by, and hastened down the street with the urgency of a man bound on a mission of life and death.

Value of a Passport.

Henry W. Wolff, a traveler, had been wandering about Metz, asking questions and seeing the sights, and he says:

On my return to the station I found a surprise awaiting me. The German police had found me out—not a difficult task, since I purposely went about quite openly. However, that, it appeared, made no difference. There, at the entrance to the station, stood a Prussian gendarme, all on the alert, and looking very ferocious. He was on the lookout for me, and stopped me at once.

"Have you a legitimation about you?" he asked, gruffly.

"Yes; but do I want one? Am I not entitled to travel in Germany without a passport?"

He looked angry, and eyed with disgust my "Murray," which bore all too plainly upon its cover the title "France."

"I must see it. I hear you have been about the town looking at things and asking many questions."

"It is strictly true; that is what I am traveling for."

"I must see your passport."

"What! In defiance of the Emperor's regulations?"

He drew himself up pompously.

"Do you not understand," said he, "that I must see your passport in order to be able to judge whether or not you are entitled to travel without one?"

Here was logic, but logic which, however feeble, must be heeded. I produced my passport, and after having studied it for a tedious interval, he gravely announced that I was fitted to travel without one.

THE new direct process of making steel has been experimented upon at the Homestead Works of Carnegie Brothers with most satisfactory results, and although not yet entirely perfected, has been sufficiently advanced to warrant the statement that its adoption will mark quite a change in the production of steel and in its quality, as well as in the price of the metal. If the expectations of the company are realized, and they confidently expect they will be, there is likely to be a revolution in this line of production, which will work to the advantage of the consumer. How it will affect labor is yet a question, although the workmen are rather disposed to look unfavorably upon the innovation.

THERE is no more striking instance of the manner in which fame seeks the individual worthy of her crown than in the life of Puvis de Chavannes, who is conceded to be the founder, the originator, the creator of the modern school of painting. Regarding his fame a Paris correspondent says: "He has done nothing for this result,—nothing but paint! for he is the most noble, the most simple-minded man in the world. Entirely absorbed in his art, beginning to work in the early morning, he toils until the evening shrouds his palette in mystery."

THE NATIONAL SOLONS.

SENATE AND HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Our National Lawmakers and What They Are Doing for the Good of the Country—Various Measures Proposed, Discussed, and Acted Upon.

Doings of Congress.

In the House, the 28th, Mr. Carter spoke at length against the Hatch bill. Representative Pierce of Tennessee introduced in the House a free coinage bill identical with the silver coinage bill pending in the Senate as modified by Senator Stewart's amendment. Much work looking toward adjournment was accomplished by the House. Senators Hale and Vest had a lively political argument in the Senate. Between July 15 and 20 is the day set by business men for a probable adjournment.

In the House, the 29th, the Indian appropriation bill, on which an agreement had been reached, was again sent to conference. A couple of hours were consumed in the consideration of a bill amendatory of the timber culture repeal act, but it was withdrawn without action. Mr. Hatch of Missouri, Chairman of the Committee on Agriculture, reported back to the House the agricultural appropriation bill, with the Senate amendments thereto, and asked that the Senate amendment (increasing) be non-concurred in and a conference ordered. This was agreed to. An attempt to bring up the tin-plate bill failed, and House adjourned. In the Senate there were two executive sessions held, the feature of which was the confirmation of Secretary John W. Foster's nomination. The Postoffice Appropriation bill was taken up and passed. The Legislative, Executive, and Judicial Appropriation bill was taken up, the question being on the amendment as to the Utah Commission. The amendment was agreed to—yeas, 28; nays, 24. The salaries of the five Commissioners were fixed at $2,000 each. Mr. Carey offered another amendment that any such Commissioners who may hereafter be appointed shall be residents of the Territory of Utah. Agreed to. The Pension Appropriation bill was then taken up. The only important amendment recommended by the Committee on Appropriations is one increasing from $133,048,366 to $144,956,000 the appropriation for invalids', widows', and orphans' pensions. After a long debate the committee amendments were agreed to and the bill passed. The Senate bill for the relief of settlers upon certain lands in the States of South and North Dakota was passed.

On the 30th, a warm discussion ensued when the free-coinage bill was called up. Mr. McPherson objected to consideration of the measure, though the day before it had been fixed as the order, for the reason that all the Senators had not returned. A motion to recommit the bill to the Finance Committee was pending when the Senate adjourned, as was also an amendment to Mr. Stewart's substitute, which would seem to confine the free-coinage privileges of the bill to the product of American mines after the bill becomes a law. Conference reports on the naval, the District, and the agricultural appropriation bills were agreed to; a joint resolution to continue the appropriations for the expenses of the Government for fifteen days of the new fiscal year, was passed by both houses and sent to the President. In the House, a fight ensued on the proposition making an appropriation for the entertainment of the G. A. R. encampment. The report was sent back to conference. Mr. Hatch, of Missouri, submitted the conference report on the agricultural appropriation bill. Pending action the House adjourned.

The Senate, on the 1st, by a vote of 29 to 25, passed the Stewart substitute bill. As it goes to the House the bill reads: "Be it enacted, etc., that the owner of silver bullion may deposit the same at any mint of the United States to be coined for his benefit, and it shall be the duty of the proper officers, upon the terms and conditions which are provided by law for the deposit and coinage of gold, to coin such silver bullion into the standard dollars authorized by the act of Feb. 28, 1878, entitled 'an act to authorize the coinage of the standard silver dollar and to restore its legal-tender character,' and such coins shall be a legal tender for all debts and dues, public and private." The act of July 14, 1890, entitled "an act directing the purchase of silver bullion and the issue of Treasury notes thereon, and for other purposes," is hereby repealed. Provided, That the Secretary of the Treasury shall proceed to have coined all the silver bullion in the Treasury purchased with silver or coin certificates. The House made slow progress in work preparatory to adjournment.

OUTLOOK FOR CROPS.

Report on the Condition of Wheat, Oats and Fruit.

The following, made up from the reports of its numerous correspondents, appears in the Farmers' Review of this week:

Oats.

In Illinois oats are reported in fair to good condition, with the exception of about 20 per cent. of the correspondents who report poor. Indiana gives a still better report, only about 7 per cent. of the correspondents giving the outlook as bad. In Ohio only 16 per cent. report poor, and in Michigan only 12 per cent. In Kentucky the outlook is very favorable, two counties only reporting a bad stand. In Missouri the stand is good, but not so favorable as in the States mentioned. About 60 per cent. of the correspondents report the crop in good condition; 20 per cent. in fair condition, and the others report the stand as light. The outlook in Kansas is slightly below that of Missouri, 50 per cent. reporting good; 30 per cent. fair and 20 cent. poor. Nebraska again drops below Kansas, 15 per cent. of the correspondents only reporting good; 32 per cent. fair, and the rest poor. In Iowa a little less than one-third report the crop in good condition, and the rest report fair, with one exception. In Wisconsin, Minnesota and the Dakotas the crop is in fine shape as a general thing and in many counties the crop will be above the average. Only two counties in the three States report poor.

Winter Wheat.

In Illinois winter wheat is generally in fine shape. Two-thirds of the counties report the crop an average or above, all of the others reporting fair. The same is true of Indiana and Ohio, with the exception of about 12 per cent. in the two States that report poor. Only one in ten of the correspondents in Michigan report poor, the others fair to good. In Kentucky the crop is especially fine, while in Missouri only fifteen per cent. report the outlook as bad. In 60 per cent. of the counties the crop will be an average or above. In Kansas, Nebraska, and Iowa the crop is reported at from fair to above an average. In Wisconsin 40 per cent. report the crop an average or above, the same number report fair, and the remainder poor. What little winter wheat there is in Minnesota is in poor condition, with few exceptions.

Fruit.

The prospects for fruit in Illinois are very poor. Not over 6 per cent. of the correspondents report the outlook good. About 27 per cent. report a fair outlook for most kinds, but all of the others report the prospects as very bad, and in some counties the fruit crop is almost a failure. The same conditions prevail in Indiana and Ohio. In Michigan less than one-third report the fruit crop an average or above; an equal number report it from 5 to 25 per cent. below an average, and the others report poor. In Kentucky one-fifth of the correspondents report the condition as good; 35 per cent. report fair, the others poor. In Missouri, Kansas, and Nebraska the prospects are very poor, very few of the correspondents reporting the crop an average or above. In Iowa the condition of fruit shows great variation, the outlook in 38 per cent. of the counties being good, and in a like number being very poor; in the others fair. In Wisconsin and the Dakotas the outlook is good generally, while in Minnesota it is in fair to good condition in three-fourths of the counties.

GANTER'S MAGIC —CHICKEN— CHOLERA CURE!

Thousands of dollars worth of chickens are destroyed by Cholera every year. It is more fatal to them than all other diseases combined. But the discovery of a liquid remedy that positively destroys the Microbes has been made. Half of the young chickens are killed by Microbes before they are fryers. A 50-cent bottle is enough for 100 chickens. It is guaranteed. If, after using two thirds of a bottle, you are not satisfied with it as a cure for Cholera, return it to the druggist from whom you purchased it, and he will refund your money.

THE GREAT SOUTH AMERICAN

NERVINE TONIC

—AND—

Stomach AND Liver Cure

The Most Astonishing Medical Discovery of the Last One Hundred Years.

The Great South American Nervine Tonic

Which we now offer you, is the only absolutely unfailing remedy ever discovered for the cure of Indigestion, Dyspepsia, and the vast train of symptoms and horrors which are the result of disease and debility of the human stomach. No person can afford to pass by this jewel of incalculable value who is affected by disease of the stomach, because the experience and testimony of many go to prove that this is the ONE and ONLY ONE great cure in the world for this universal destroyer. There is no case of unmalignant disease of the stomach which can resist the wonderful curative powers of the South American Nervine Tonic.

HARRIET E. HALL, of Waynetown, Ind., says: "I owe my life to the Great South American Nervine. I had been in bed for five months from the effects of an exhausted stomach, Indigestion, Nervous Prostration, and a general shattered condition of my whole system. Had given up all hopes of getting well. Had tried three doctors, with no relief. The first bottle of the Nervine Tonic improved me so much that I was able to walk about, and a few bottles cured me entirely. I believe it is the best medicine in the world. I can not recommend it too highly."

MRS. ELLA A. BRATTON, of New Ross, Indiana, says: "I cannot express how much I owe to the Nervine Tonic. My system was completely shattered, appetite gone, was coughing and spitting up blood; am sure I was in the first stages of consumption, an inheritance handed down through several generations. I began taking the Nervine Tonic, and continued its use for about six months, and am entirely cured. It is the grandest remedy for nerves, stomach and lungs I have ever seen."

No remedy compares with SOUTH AMERICAN NERVINE as a cure for the Nerves. No remedy compares with South American Nervine as a wondrous cure for the Stomach. No remedy will at all compare with South American Nervine as a cure for all forms of failing health. It never fails to cure Indigestion and Dyspepsia. It never fails to cure Chorea or St. Vitus' Dance. Its powers to build up the whole system are wonderful in the extreme. It cures the old, the young, and the middle aged. It is a great friend to the aged and infirm. Do not neglect to use this precious boon; if you do, you may neglect the only remedy which will restore you to health. South American Nervine is perfectly safe, and very pleasant to the taste. Delicate ladies, do not fail to use this great cure, because it will put the bloom of freshness and beauty upon your lips and in your cheeks, and quickly drive away your disabilities and weaknesses.

CROPS in the northwest are looking poor.

THE Hill Club, of New York City, ratified Cleveland's nomination last week, in grand style.

CLEVELAND AND STEVENSON is not euphonious to any marked extent; but oh my! it's strong.

IT WAS Cleveland's nomination that made Chauncey Depew conclude that he did not wish to become Secretary of State.

PAPERS that speak of "kicking democrats" are kindly invited to name one democrat in Auburn that is kicking on Cleveland.

FT. WAYNE democrats had a big jollification, or rather ratification last week. Mr. McNagny was there and made a splendid speech.

GEN. JAMES B. WEAVER, of Iowa, was nominated for president by the people's party at Omaha Monday, and Gen. James G. Field, of Virginia, for vice-president.

CARNEGIE, the Pennsylvanian iron baron, did not let quite enough time elapse between trying to cut down the wages of his workmen and cabling his congratulations to Mr. Harrison.

EX-CZAR READ has not yet found time to call upon Mr. Harrison to tender his congratulations, although he resides, during the session of Congress, within a stone's throw of the White House.

QUAY will have to "put up or shut up", as A. W. Billings, of Chicago, has not only offered to take up his bluffing wager of ten thousand dollars that Harrison would be elected, but to raise it ten thousand dollars.

THOSE who expected to hear the anti-Cleveland democrats going around and kicking on the ticket, have been disappointed. Every democrat we have heard on the subject is satisfied, now that the nomination is settled.

THE knowledge that Adlai Stevenson removed nearly fifty thousand republican postmasters while he held the office of First Assistant Postmaster-General is what makes every good democrat feel like taking off his coat and helping to elect him Vice President.

GOV. GRAY made one of the ablest speeches of his life at the great ratification meeting at Indianapolis last Tuesday evening. Republicans who have been feeling jolly over "Isaac Pusey Gray," under the impression that he would sulk, are liable to be sadly disappointed. He is not that kind of a democrat.

W. J. CAMPBELL, of Chicago, has been made chairman of the republican national committee, in place of Clarkson, who resigned. Campbell is a lawyer, and is the regular attorney, for the Armours and others in the great Chicago beef combine. This fact has leaked out, and Campbell is likely to prove an unpopular leader.

JOHN W. FOSTER has been appointed to succeed Blaine as secretary of state. He is an Indianian, and a man of fair ability. He has been minister to Mexico and to Spain, and to Russia. He has been in important work in the state department under Blaine, and it is said that Blaine's resignation was largely due to some ill feeling between him and Foster.

THE prohibitionists at their national convention in Cincinnati last week nominated Gen. John Bidwell, of California for president, and J. B. Cranfil, of Texas, for vice president. Gen. Bidwell is one of the early pioneers of California in the gold digging days, and is the author of several interesting articles on the subject that were published a few months ago in the Century Magazine.

THE Butler Record asks how democrats have drifted away from the protective tariff of Jefferson and others. They have not drifted away. Jefferson and those they class with him were satisfied with him were satisfied with a tariff averaging 15 to 20 cents. Democrats are are still willing to go back to that. But republicans have raised the 46 per cent tariff up to the McKinley standard of 60 per cent. That is why democrats and other reasonable people object.

YOU REFER to certain incidents of the convention, as well as of the period preceding it for several months. They made no unpleasant impressions upon me. Believing as I do that fair discussions of all public men and public measures are necessary in a free government in order to maintain its full integrity, I regard discussion not only proper but as essential. Therefore many things said and done in the heat of the convention or in the discussions which immediately preceded it should, it seems to me, be fairly attributable to interest felt in the candidates or to the diverse and adverse opinions as to the question of availability.—Grover Cleveland.

THERE is a great amount of trouble in the iron industries about Pittsburg, the chief of which is among the Carnegie mills and foundries. The trouble is caused by a reduction in wages. The men want the same wages as agreed on last year. That year expired July 1, and they found the factories locked up, because they had refused to take a heavy reduction of wages. These industries are among those most heavily "protected" by the tariff, and yet republicans go about claiming that the tariff "protects" the laborer. We say it does not, and the increasing strikes and lock outs over the country for the years during which the protective tariff has been increased, prove this. The tariff is a fraud, as far as laboring men are concerned. It protects the wealthy only. Carnegie is now worth many millions, all made in a few years; but many thousand of his men are now idle.

Card of Thanks.

We desire to extend our sincere thanks to the many friends and neighbors, who so kindly and fittingly assisted us through the sickness and burial of our infant daughter, Hazel. Very Resp'y,
MR. AND MRS. JOSEPH STAUDACHER.

Cemetery Notice.

The following resolution was adopted at a meeting of the directors of Evergreen cemetery, June 11, 1892. "That on assessments of lots not paid by the 15th day of August next, there shall be a penalty of ten per cent added, and steps taken to collect each unpaid assessment with the penalty adopted.

E. L. CASEBEER. 3t

Married.

In Ft. Wayne, Ind., July 4, 1892, Mr. Milton C. Jones to Miss Aggie C. Baxter, Rev. M. S. Marble, of the Berry St. M. E church, officiating.

The COURIER learns of this with a great deal of pleasure, being well acquainted with both parties. Mr. Jones has been some years a prominent citizen of Franklin township, and Miss Baxter one of our leading and most successful teachers, a resident of Smithfield township, and a daughter of the late Moses Baxter. We feel that we make no mistake in predicting for them a happy future. We presume they will continue to reside in this county.

Killed in a Washout.

During the terrible rain Saturday night, a dreadful accident occurred on the Wabash main line, near Wabash. At a point where a large culvert passed under a heavy embankment, the heavy rains had clogged up the culvert and finally the waters tore it out, and many feet of the embankment with it. The rails with the ties attached, it is supposed remained hanging over the chasm. A freight train on the engine of which were five men dashed into the break, and nine cars piled in after them. The men from the caboose came up to see why the train had stopped, and found all silent about the wreck. The five men had all perished. They were dug out later. One was Trainmaster Charles F. Wilcox, who was formerly at Garrett, and was a candidate for the legislature against Hon. Freeman Kelley, in 1888. Another was Harvey Dunlap, who, we believe had resided at Butler. At all events, he had been at the head of the company's bridge builders. Auditor Coffinberry knew both of men intimately, as both had served under him, either on the Wabash or the B. & O.

Corunna Commencement.

The sixth annual commencement of the Richland township schools was held in the Christian church, Corunna, June 28, 1892. The exercises from the beginning were a success. The music rendered by the M. E. orchestra and choir of Auburn was grand and spoken of in the highest terms and contributed largely to the success of the other exercises. The graduates Bessie Stonebraker, Winnie Johnson and Irma Sisson acquitted themselves nobly. The orations showed careful preparation, and were delivered in a pleasing and forcible manner.

Their teacher, Thos. P. French delivered the class address in a few appropriate words, after which Supt. Merica presented the diplomas, in a few well chosen words. The work of the graduates, teachers and officers showed that their work had been well done. Supt. Merica and M. E. Reynolds deserve praise for the manner in which each has performed his duty. The house was crowded to its fullest extent, but perfect order and the best of attention prevailed.

These commencement exercises are beneficial as incentives to younger pupils to go on and complete the common school course.

Stole the Lillies.

We are called upon to chronicle the fact that some low, mean and unprincipled thief, or thieves have been perpetrating some of the most cowardly and unmanly depredations a man could commit. Last Sunday night, somebody deliberately cut off and took with them, those pretty lillies that were sitting in the yard of A. C. Wilson, and Isaac Hague, and at the greenhouse, which added such beautiful attraction to their surroundings. The stalks were in a measure mutilated and the flowers rendered useless. The enacting of this dastardly deed did not cast a reflection on children as those doing it might suppose; but to the contrary, it is well understood that no child would stoop so low as to sneak into a yard after dark and destroy the private property of somebody else. A man or woman who will steal a lily will, if opportunity presents itself, steal anything else they can get their hands on. There is not the least doubt but that if anyone would have gone and asked Mr. Wilson or Mr. Hague for one of the flowers it would have been freely given, but they either of them consider it contemptibly mean for anyone to go in when they are not looking and help themselves to a boquet. Somebody's conscience, if they have any, may cause them some uneasiness because of the advantage taken of unsuspecting persons.

Never Give Up.

Many cases of so-called consumption have been cured by Dr. Marshall's Lung Syrup. Never give up as long as there is life there should be hope. Take this medicine, use it persistently, and you will notice a change for the better, as it is peculiarly adapted to this class of diseases. Do not fail to try this remedy in time. Sold by all druggists.

The Butler Normal, at Butler, Ind.

The normal term of the Butler school will begin Tuesday, July 12, 1892. We gladly refer you to our pupils of the past, as to the thoroughness and class of our work. Special classes will be conducted in the interest of those intending to teach. All the branches in which examinations are held for teachers' license, will receive careful attention. Special instruction will be given on the latest and best approved methods of teaching, on the organization, management and government of schools. One can not be too well posted in the art of teaching. It is the aim to educate and train teachers for their educational work. This will be a special select normal of six weeks, and will close just before the teachers' institute. Not more than from twenty to thirty will be permitted to enter, so that it will be necessary to apply early. Pupils can use any text book they have, as all classes will be taught by topic or outline. Tuition, per term, $5 in advance. Anyone desiring further information call on or address,

A Correction.

Our friend, Clerk Bishop, a strong republican, and a good all around fellow, informs us that we were wrong in the statement that two colored delegates from the Minneapolis convention, were sent to the prison at Michigan City. He talked with two men from Peru, both democrats, and one was the man who had the fight with the negroes. They both say the negroes were not delegates, but were tramps. We make this correction both because we think it right, for a newspaper to publish only the truth, and also because, we have a growing respect for the colored people. Since they have learned to read, they have learned to think; and when they stop to think, they become democrats. The national association of colored democrats is the proof of this.

SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR

SYMPTOMS OF LIVER DISEASE: Loss of appetite; bad breath; bad taste in the mouth; tongue coated; pain under the shoulder-blade; in the back or side—often mistaken for rheumatism; sour stomach with flatulency and water-brash; indigestion; bowels lax and costive by turns; headache, with dull, heavy sensation; restlessness, with sensation of having left something undone which ought to have been done; fullness after eating; bad temper; blues; tired feeling; yellow appearance of skin and eyes; dizziness, etc.

Not all, but always some of these indicate want of action of the Liver. For that can do no harm and has never been known to fail to do good

Take Simmons Liver Regulator

—AN EFFECTUAL SPECIFIC FOR—

Malaria, Bowel Complaints,
Dyspepsia, Sick Headache,
Constipation, Biliousness,
Kidney Affections, Jaundice,
Mental Depression, Colic.

A PHYSICIAN'S OPINION.

"I have been practicing medicine for twenty years and have never been able to put up a vegetable compound that would, like Simmons Liver Regulator, promptly and effectually move the Liver to action, and at the same time aid (instead of weakening) the digestive and assimilative powers of the system."

J.F. Aber has a fine start in the way of flowers, plants, etc. at his greenhouse on South Main. He says he will be obliged to put up a larger and better building this fall to accommodate his growing business.

There was a Fourth-of-July dinner at Wm. McIntyre's Monday; that included besides his own, the families of W. H. McIntyre, J. A. McIntyre, G. C. Ralston and I. N. Cool. They passed the national holiday very agreeably.

Michael Whetsel an old-timer on the COURIER list, called up to see us Friday. He wore the usual genial expression about his countenance and left enough of the needful in the office till to insure his local paper down on the farm the coming year.

LOST: A gent's gold watch, on Friday evening, June 24, probably about half a mile east and one and a half miles south of Sedan. Finder will be suitably rewarded by leaving at this office, or at the Sedan postoffice, or with the owner,

JOHN KLŒPFEL.

A letter from S. B. Mottinger notes his removal from Duncan, Mich., to Marquette, where he gets better wages, a rise from 50 cents an hour for ten hours a day, to 60 cents an hour for 12½ hours a day. This makes him good wages, and we are glad to hear it.

Dear housewife are you burning that youthful complexion of yours away, over the heat of a red-hot stove? Stop that folly at once and buy a nice neat and convenient Gasolene Stove, the use of which will preserve your beauty and health, so far as a stove has to do with health and good looks.

The joint picnic of the prohibition and people's party near St. Joe last week, was not very satisfactory in some ways, if we are to judge by a letter in the Ft. Wayne Dispatch. The picnic was all right, but they say the prohibition speaker was a fraud, and they will never hold another joint picnic.

Another hard rainstorm struck us Saturday night, and by daylight next morning, not less than 2½ inches in depth had fallen. Of course it delayed farm work greatly and injured crops. Besides injury done to wheat itself, the ground will be so soft, that some fields will be difficult to cut with machines.

Ashley Times: It might be of interest to those who are not acquainted with this locality that it is a red barn country. Large barns on high stone walls painted red are numerous. On less than 500 acres of the land bought by the Indiana Improvement company for the site of Ashley stand six large barns, and there may be counted in plain view of Ashley three times as many more. This gives some ideas of the kind of country surrounding Ashley.

Benevolent Party: My man, don't you think fishing is cruel sport?

Fisherman: Cruel? Well I should say so. I have sat here six hours and have not had a bite, been nearly eat up by the mosquitoes, and the sun has parboiled the back of my neck.

Benevolent Party: You should have a bottle of KRAUSE'S GERMAN OIL, it would not only drive the mosquitoes away, but would be soothing to your blistered neck. Davnport the Druggist.

Marion Franks and his family were in town last Thursday. As a candidate for the legislature, he is making a good impression wherever people get acquainted with him. That is the kind of man for the place, one who has a head for business.

JudgeMcClellan started, Tuesday evening, on his return to Washington. We believe this was the first vacation he has taken in his four years, or nearly, in Congress. If other members had been as faithful there would be less complaint about absentees.

Miss Maggie Tower, formerly a teacher in Auburn, is here visiting Mrs. Lewis and other friends. After she quit teaching here, she went to Europe, to learn the Kindergarten methods, but on her return her health failed, so she gave up this work. She resides in Ft. Wayne.

Furniture, carpets or baby carriages bought at Ft. Wayne, are shipped to Auburn with freight charges prepaid. This enables you to get your goods as cheaply as though you resided in that city. You will be surprised to find at what low prices they are retailing goods

KRUASE'S HEADACHE CAPSULES unlike many remedies are perfectly harmless, they contain no injurious substance and will stop any kind of a headache, will prevent headache caused by over indulgence in food or drink late at night. Price twenty-five cents; for sale by Davenport the Druggist.

People miss a grand treat, who fail to hear Mr. Healy's evening sermons. Each Sunday evening he delivers a special discourse on one of the best known characters in the bible. Last Sunday his subject was "Jeremiah," and he showed him to be one of the most eminent of the great historical personages mentioned in sacred history.

The new cemetary south of town begins to show up in fine shape. A great deal of money has been expended on it, and it will eventually rival the beautiful grounds of the one at Waterloo, heretofore the prettiest in this part of the state. Mr. Shafer the proprietor and J. F. Aber who is in immediate charge, are sparing no pains to make "Woodlawn" the most artistic and well kept ground in this part of the state.

The Rifles at Angola.

In a drenching storm, Auburn's young soldiers, the Rifles, started for Angola, Saturday noon. The drum corps, escorted them to the train, and got as wet as the rest. The Rifles had just got their new suits, very neat uniforms they are, and they walked down the wet streets as if conscious all the time, that their clothes would never look as new again, if they had to go into camp three days in such weather. But they made a nice appearance, in spite of the storm. The citizens gathered at the store doors to see them off and many a fair face watched and admired them from windows. And we presume, unconsciously some of the boys repeated Samuel Lover's rollicking Irish ballad, the first stanza of which is:

> Oh, there's not a trade that's going
> Worth knowing, or showing,
> Like that from glory growing,
> For the bowld sojer boy.
> Sure you know, friend or foe,
> Will have a hand or toe,
> For the bowld sojer boy.
> There's not a town we march through,
> But ladies looking arch through
> The window panes, will search through
> The ranks to find their joy;
> While up the street, each girl you meet,
> With looks so sly,
> Will cry, "My eye!
> Oh! isn't he a darling,
> The bowld sojer boy!"

IT would not be surprising if the printers should knock Mr. Reid's nomination galley-west.

THERE are no longer any anti-Cleveland or anti-Hill Democrats. They are all anti-Harrison.

THE Republican platform and Mr. Harrison demand a force bill. This demand is equivalent to the election of Cleveland.

IT is reported that Mr. Quay has $1,000 to bet that Harrison will be elected. By the way, who is Treasurer of Philadelphia just now?

REPUBLICANS are so frightened at the weakness of their Vice Presidential candidate that they are beginning to vilify and abuse his opponent.

WHITELAW REID seems to live as luxuriously at Ophir Farm upon the fruits of "rat" labor in his newspaper as Carnegie does in Cluny Castle upon the earnings of underpaid workmen at Braddock.

MR. HARRISON says it would hurt his feelings to be defeated, and that's about the caliber of all the arguments yet advanced in favor of his re-election.

PRESIDENT HARRISON desires it to be understood that the politician who helps him most in this campaign may be Secretary of State next year. Isn't he bargaining for goods which he cannot deliver?

IT is to be hoped that War-Lord Alger doesn't feel discouraged at the turn of affairs at Minneapolis. He can't dance, to be sure, but when it comes to paying the fiddler he will be taken in right among the leaders.

THERE has been a good deal of Republican shouting over the fact that Oregon was carried by the party, though by a reduced majority, but there is a large and impressive silence in the organs of that party concerning the Democratic victory in the chief city of the State.

THE refusal of the Democratic convention to insert the word "free" in the silver plank of the platform has made Colorado hopelessly Republican, we are told. That is sad, but the Democracy will, we trust, bear it with fortitude and resignation. One doesn't really miss very much what one never had.

REGARDING the nomination of Benjamin Harrison, the Voice, the organ of the Prohibition party, goes farther than any Democratic paper has done when it says: "It is an indorsement of debauchery at the Capitol, lechery in society, hypocrisy in the church. And the convention that indorsed these was well fitted for its work."

THE unkindest turn that has been done Harrison is the raking up of a speech he made in 1882, in which he declared that he was "an advocate of civil-service reform," and added, "My experience in Washington has led me to utter the wish with an emphasis I do not often use that I might forever be relieved of any connection with the distribution of public patronage." He is likely to have his wish.

WHAT is called reciprocity by the present administration means only the exchange of such articles of commerce as can be produced only in one of the reciprocating countries. We do not wish to let in anything from Canada that can be produced here, and the Canadians, who are following our own policy, do not wish to let in any of our products that could compete with their own. The natural result is that neither country has anything to offer the other that would be of the slightest advantage to it.

STEVENSON'S name on the ticket is almost an absolute assurance that the electoral vote of Illinois will be found in the Democratic column when the vote shall have been counted. For years during and since the war he has possessed the sincere devotion of the Illinois Democracy, and the respect and admiration of all its opponents. Possibly no man in the Prairie State has a wider personal acquaintance than he among people of all parties, and it is an aquaintance of so friendly a nature as to insure to the ticket bearing his name a large accession of votes.

THE shock which tender Republican sensibilities are sustaining by reason of the proposition to admit Arizona and New Mexico to Statehood is really severe. One would think the sensitive ones had never heard of Idaho and Wyoming. New Mexico has, to-day, a larger population than Idaho and Wyoming had together when they were admitted by a Republican Congress, and Arizona has quite as good claim on the score of population as Idaho had. It illustrates anew the difference that it makes whose ox is gored.

THE New York Press labors drearily through half a column or less of attempt to label the Democracy the "free silver party," and cites in support of its views certain votes cast in the House of Representatives. The attention of the Press is courteously but firmly called to the fact that there is later news on that head. The authoritative utterance of the Democratic party on the silver question was made at Chicago. This supersedes all votes in Congress or elsewhere as an exposition of the party creed on the silver question.

ONE pleasant memory of the Minneapolis convention remains for haters of blatant demagogism. Thomas Brackett Reed returns to the shores of Casco Bay the picture of a bursted boom, an example for all imitators who would establish political fame on impudence and conceit. The late czar posed at the convention as a willing statesman, and rushed to the fore at the first call for a speech, only to find that his vapidities fell on tired ears. The swaggering, blustering, empty-headed braggart may cut a figure in a town that has not grown perceptibly in two decades. But he shows as thin mentally as obese physically when he essays a wider field.

INDIANAPOLIS SENTINEL: Indiana Democrats would have been better pleased had their honored leader, Isaac P. Gray, been the choice of the Democratic Convention for the second place on the national ticket. But to the nomination made—that of Gen. Adlai E. Stevenson of Illinois—there can be raised not the slightest objection in any quarter. An ardent patriot, an able lawyer, an efficient Congressman, a skilled executive officer, a life-long, unswerving Democrat, his name will bring strength to the ticket and enthusiasm to the hearts of the Democratic masses. Stevenson's name on the ticket is almost an absolute assurance that the electoral vote of Illinois will be found in the Democratic column when the votes shall have been counted.

CHICAGO GLOBE: The initial attack on the personnel of the National Democratic ticket was directed towards the Vice Presidential nominee, Mr. Stevenson, by an ex-accidental Governor of Illinois, by name Hamilton. This latter individual, who was once a neighbor of Mr. Stevenson, but who is at present a lawyer of small account in Chicago, rushed into print the day after the convention to claim his personal friendship for Mr. Stevenson, and the meanwhile to attack his good name as a citizen and patriot. Hamilton declared, without a blush, that Mr. Stevenson was a copperhead, so-called during the war, and the drill-master of the Knights of the Golen Circle, so-called, during the internicine struggle. This and much more calumny of the same sort dripped from the lips of the ex-accidental State executive. They were all unblushing lies. It needed only one day for Hamilton's old neighbor to prove the contrary to Hamilton's falsehoods by oral and by written testimony. Mr. Stevenson says that he was not acquainted even with the nature of the organization called the Knights of the Golden Circle, that he was not thereto attached, that he was not anybody's drill master, but that he did aid in raising a body of United States troops, the proof of which he showed in a letter of thanks from the Governmental recruiting officer. Mr. Stevenson's word is sufficient, without the proofs, to set at rest the vilifications of his ex-accidency, Hamilton

'TIS A HOLLOW SHAM.

THE REPUBLICAN POSITION ON THE WAGES QUESTION.

Regardless of Tariff, American Farmers and Artisans Must Compete with the World—Samples of the Protection Afforded Pennsylvania Iron Workers.

"Protected" Iron and Steel Industry.

Ex-Speaker Reed said at Buffalo on Oct. 15, 1890:

"They asked me whether I consider the McKinley bill just to the poor. Well, I should say so. A bill which has for its object the aiding of the poor by raising their wages, it seems to me, is a just one."

This was the unanimous opinion of all of the great Republican politicians. And if there was any part, more than another part of the bill, on which these men were willing to bank their all, it was the metal schedule. Reed said the manufacturers "obtained just what they wanted," and, indeed, why should not they have done so, when H. W. Oliver, one of Pittsburg's biggest iron and steel men, said, after the passage of the McKinley bill, that the rates on iron and steel "were those proposed by the manufacturers themselves." The powers of a "protective" tariff to boom the iron, steel and tinned industries and to raise wages in them were here to be tested under the most favorable conditions. Now, how has it stood the test?

As an index of what has been going on in the iron mills we will notice some of the effects upon Carnegie's mills.

On June 1, 1891, the employes in the Homestead Steel Works — Carnegie, Phipps & Co.—were forced to accept a reduction of 10 per cent. in their wages. During the year 1891, according to the Iron Age, wages at Carnegie's and Edgar Thomson's Steel Works, at Braddock, Pa., were reduced as follows: Melters, from $1.06 to 65 cents per 100 tons; vessel repairers, from 37 to 26 cents; ladlemen in blooming mill, from $1.19 to 89 cents. And wages in other departments were "reduced in the same proportion."

April 10, 1892, fifty of the best paid workmen at the Edgar Thomson Steel Works were discharged, as was stated, to make room for "direct process" machines for making steel from pig iron. On May 1, 1892, there was a reduction in the wages of the 150 employes of Andrew Carnegie at his Lower Union Mills in Pittsburg. Seventy-five blacksmiths accepted the cut of about 20 per cent. without a murmur, but seventy-five hammermen struck. The strike, however, was over in a few days, as it is a hard thing to get work when a man is blacklisted because he went on strike. On June 9, 1892, the Iron Age reported that trouble had arisen at the Homestead Steel Works of Carnegie, Phipps & Co:

"It is understood that the reason for this is that the firm had made large reductions in the scale, which the men are not willing to accept."

The changes proposed by Mr. Carnegie and his associates "mean a clear reduction of about 17 per cent. to every man who works by tonnage. In addition to this, other large reductions are made, in some cases over 25 per cent." The workmen have been told that they must sign the new scale "on or before June 24th."

The Iron Age of June 16 fully confirms the worst fears of the workmen. It publishes not only the Homestead scales proposed by the Carnegie Steel Co., but several pages of scales in other large companies. It says editorially: "We need make no apology for giving an unusual amount of space to the wages scale, because the discussion of them during the next few weeks promises to be the all-absorbing topic in the iron trade. The defeat of the Amalgamated Association in the East in the last few years will keep that section of the country out of the conflict." It thinks the situation "foreshadows a sharp and possibly a prolonged struggle."

When the Amalgamated workers are on strike and are holding meetings and parades to keep up their courage, they can carry with them the stale old legends displayed at the Minneapolis convention by the Boston Home Market Club:

> American Wages for American Workmen, American Markets for the American People, Protection for American Homes.

Tin-Plate Workers' Wages.

The great American manufacturers of tin-plate are showing their hands sooner than was expected, even by the greatest skeptics of "protection." It was announced from Pittsburgh, Pa., June 17, that "At the conference between the tin-plate manufacturers and the scale committee of the Amalgamated Association this afternoon, the latter were astounded at a call for a reduction of wages of the most highly skilled classes of workmen in the tin-plate and sheet-iron industries."

This call for a reduction is in the face of the assertion of the manufacturers that the tariff put on tin-plate by the Fiftieth Congress was necessary in order that good wages might be paid American workmen.

Think of it! Wages to be reduced so soon in this great "infant" industry. The foreigners, imported by Niedringhaus and others to work in an "American" industry at "American" wages, are asked to accept lower wages. This ought to be the straw that will break "protection's" back, but perhaps the matter can be patched up by the manufacturers, who are never backward in coming forward with excuses for lower wages. This same dispatch says that "David B. Oliver, C. Zug, J. H. Laughlin and other leading manufacturers urged the acceptance of the manufacturers' scale, on account, they said, of the depressed condition of the iron trade." Just as if iron was not also heavily "protected," and therefore entitled to be in a "booming" condition!

It was only on June 2 that the "Association of Iron and Steel Manufacturers," the "Tinned Plate Manufacturers, Association," and the "National Association of Galvanized Sheet Iron Manufacturers" held meetings on the same day, in the same room, and elected the same secretary. Those who know anything about the matter know that the duty on tin-plate has been kept up and raised, to benefit, not the tin-plate makers, who have never before existed, but the sheet iron and steel men, both of whom have been making enormous profits out of the duty on tin-plate, which has kept up the price of steel sheets and of galvanized iron for roofing purposes. It was not strange, then, that they met together, and formed this three-headed trust, or monster. The iron and steel manufacturers agreed to reduce wages in their lines an average of 15 or 20 per cent. It was generally believed that the tin-plate men would not dare to exercise their united power to reduce wages, at least until after election, or certainly until the tin-plate bill had been discussed in Congress; but their greed and their "gall" has exceeded the expectations of the most sanguine.

These "McKinleyized" and "trusted" industries consider it their especial privilege to worry wage-earners and consumers. What do they care for the feelings or sentiments of the people? They announced on June 2, 1892, "that prices will not be touched on in any way." And yet the Iron Age of June 16, says that the prices of sheet iron have been advanced, and that the prices of galvanized iron are firmer, and, in a few instances, higher.

The "Difference in Wages" Farce.

Here is food for reflection for the farmer who still thinks he is voting money in his pocket when he votes for "protection." If he will ponder this fact sufficiently he will solve the whole tariff problem. It is quoted from "Recent Economic Changes," by David A. Wells.

"Indian corn can be successfully and has been extensively raised in Italy. But Indian corn grows in the valley of the Mississippi, a thousand miles from the seaboard, has been transported in recent years to Italy and sold in her markets at a lower cost than the corn of Lombardy and Venetia, where the wages of the agriculturist are not one-third of the wages paid in the United States for corresponding labor. And one not surprising sequel of this is that 77,000 Italian laborers emigrated to the United States in 1885."

In other grains and food products and in cotton it is the same. The $1 and $2 and $3 a day laborer of the United States competes with the cheap labor of Europe and Asia and often undersells it in its own markets. Thus wheat can be produced in Dakota, where wages are $2 a day, at 40 cents per bushel, but it cannot be produced in Rhenish Prussia for less than 80 cents, though wages there are only $6 per month. As to England, her wheat growers have been driven out of existence by our dear labor and India's and Russia's cheap labor.

Such facts as these must settle the question forever, with rational minds, as to whether or not wages determine cost of production. They did not do so fifty years ago, when high-wage Europe was supplying low-wage Asia with many manufactured articles. Still less do they do so now, when with modern machinery and methods, one man, or a boy, will produce as much as ten men produced fifty years ago. What folly then to say that "on all imports coming in competition with the products of American labor there should be levied duties equal to the difference between wages at home and abroad." And yet this is the serious declaration of the Republican party in its Minneapolis platform, and it poses as the party of nineteenth century civilization.

These Republicans persist in shutting their eyes to facts. If McKinley had consulted tables of labor cost in different articles in different countries and had made tariff rates only high enough to put American and foreign goods on a par in our markets as to labor cost, his rates would not have been one-tenth as high as now. But instead of consulting figures he asked the manufacturers how much duty they wished and, as Congressman Wilson has shown, practically left blanks for manufacturers to fill out; and they often made duties higher than the total cost of production in any country—all for the benefit of the poor wage-earner, of course.

Some day the voting consumers will have intelligence and spunk enough to suggest to the manufacturer that it is time for him to remove his hand from their pockets.

Colonial State Tariffs.

Before 1789 each of the States or colonies had a tariff wall around it. Statesmen had not then learned that it is possible to get rich by taxing neighboring States or countries with a sufficiently high protective tariff. Hence, believing that their own people must pay duties on imports, they made their tariffs only high enough to yield the small revenues required—generally only 3 or 4 per cent. Some of the States, however, as Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, New York, etc., did make some attempt to levy duties so that they would give temporary encouragement to new industries. But even then they seldom levied duties of more than 8 per cent.—perhaps because they thought stronger food would not be good for mere "infants." Thus Pennsylvania put a duty of 5 per cent. on window glass, New York 7½ per cent., Maryland 2½ per cent., and Virginia and South Carolina 3 per cent. Hats were dutiable from 2½ to 10 per cent. in the different colonies, clothing from 2½ to 10½ per cent., twine 2½ to 5 per cent., lead 2½ to 3 per cent. Such duties as these would be beneath the notice of our modern tariff makers who call a 30 per cent. tariff "free trade."

What a nuisance these State tariffs were then is seen from the following, quoted from Mr. J. Alexander Lindquist's "United States Tariff History," now being completed for the Reform Club:

"Though the States did not directly discriminate against each other by means of import duties upon goods grown or manufactured in the United States, the mere fact that each had an independent tariff, and that the rates imposed by the tariff of neighboring States were seldom the same, led to no end of disputes and contentions among them. Petty discriminations were therefore often resorted to. New York exhibits a good example of the state of affairs under the Confederacy. For some time a brisk trade had grown up among the Dutch farmers of New Jersey in supplying the city of New York with vegetables and poultry, and among the Yankees of Connecticut in furnishing her with firewood. In the early morning on market days the river was dotted with shallops loaded with butter, cheese, eggs and vegetables from the farms of New Jersey, and every week vessels loaded with firewood came down from Connecticut. The New York Legislature determined to divert this trade to the farmers of the State and passed a law requiring the shallops, sloops and wood boats to enter at the custom house and pay tonnage duties. New Jersey retaliated by taking at £30 per month the land at Sandy Hook which the city of New York had bought of the original owner and on which a lighthouse was maintained. Connecticut merchants and vessel owners united in a league to stop trading with New York, but the Constitution put an end to further trouble."

A Copper Trust Again.

The New York Daily Commercial Bulletin of a recent date says: "After a long period of negotiation the producers of copper in Europe and the United States have arrived at an agreement to restrict the production after July 1 next. The American producers have agreed to restrict their exports of copper to Europe, in consideration for which the Spanish producers have pledged themselves to cut down their production 5 per cent. The object of this agreement is, of course, to bring about a higher level of prices."

Whether or not the producers can successfully hold together to put prices back where they were during the existence of the great copper combine in 1888-89, it is certain that there has been left for them a duty of 1¼ cents per pound, which was about all McKinley could do to invite another copper trust to repeat the outrage perpetrated in 1889 upon the American people. It will be remembered that in 1889 the copper trust sold American copper so much cheaper in Europe that it was reimported and sold at a profit here after paying a duty of 4 cents per pound; and from April to August, 1889, the foreign price never exceeded 8 cents and the domestic price was never less than 12 cents. But for the duty no such difference could have existed and the effects of the French syndicate upon our industries would have been as slight as they were upon European industries.

The effect of high prices for raw materials of any kind is far-reaching and disastrous. How the consumers of copper were affected by the high prices of 1888 is described by James Powell, President of the Union Brass Company of Cincinnati, in the Engineering and Mining Journal of Jan. 19, 1889:

"When the syndicate began brass-workers all over the country were fully employed at good wages, and while the demand for goods may not have been kept up at all times with the same vigor, yet the price of the raw material was such as to afford a living profit to the copper producer only.

"The consumption of brass goods for steam, water and gas has fallen off from 25 to 40 per cent., with no immediate prospect of an improvement. The manipulations of the combine have been the most disastrous calamity for the general copper consuming industries of this country that has ever befallen them."

As evidence that the American end of this "agreement" is made in good faith, it is reported from Marquette, Mich., that a general strike is imminent at the great Calumet and Hecla copper mine. The company, instead of acknowledging openly that they intend to restrict production by closing the mine, announce that they will discharge all employes who are members of the Knights of Labor or of any other labor organization. They know that this will not only precipitate a long struggle that will restrict production but it will give them an opportunity to utilize cheap "scab" labor when they are ready to resume operations, and perhaps to starve some of the strikers into accepting lower wages.

Hatmakers Done with Protection.

At a mass meeting of the Cloth Hat and Cap Makers' Union, in New York, on June 15, over 700 men, representing twenty-six of the thirty shops in the city, discussed the grievances of wage reductions. It was said that during the last year several reductions in their wages at different times have made a total reduction of 70 per cent., and that during the best four months of the year the best men have been unable to earn more than $6 a week. They will make an effort to get wages back above starvation point.

Pitiable as is the lot of these men, it is no worse than that of hatmakers elsewhere in this country, since the McKinley bill came their way. A few years ago the hat factories of Bloomfield, West Orange and East Orange, N. J., were prosperous and gave steady employment to hundreds of hands, nearly all of whom voted for "protection." The almost prohibitive duty on hatters' raw materials has caused the business to dwindle until now no mill in Bloomfield is running on full time and many of the employes have sought work in other businesses. The hatters, being intelligent men, have become enthusiastic tariff reformers and are preparing to form a Cleveland Club.

What He Had Lost.

A naturalist, who is both an ardent student in his branch of science and absent-minded to a degree which keeps his family on the alert, recently celebrated his silver wedding, says the Youth's Companion. Many guests were invited for the occasion, and the house was made ready for the reception of the company. Just as the first guest arrived one of the daughters was sent to summon the father, who had not come from his study. Care had been taken that he should be reminded to dress in time, so he was all ready, and at the summons of the daughter he came to the parlor. When they reached the room the daughter noticed that her father carried in his hand a small wooden box, and as he shook hands with the nearest guest she saw him drop it. The cover rolled off, but she gave a sigh of relief when she saw that the box was apparently empty. The naturalist, however, uttered a cry of dismay, and instantly went down on his hands and knees in an attempt to gather up something.

"Have you spilled anything, father?" she asked.

"Spilled anything!" he echoed, in evident indignation at her calm tone, "I have lost fifty fleas that I have just received from Egypt!"

The effect of this intelligence on the family was nothing in comparison to the company before the evening was over; and the only thing that the naturalist said to his friends in answer to their congratulations upon his happy married life—so his daughters declared after all was over—was to ask that if they carried away any of his Egyptian fleas they would return them to him!

The Doctor's Retort.

One of the brightest physicians of Portland and one of the ablest theologians of Bath were in the physiological room at Bowdoin Medical School not long ago examining, in company with others, microscopic slides showing certain peculiar glands of the intestines. The physician at once launched out into a brilliant discussion of glands and their relation to various diseases. The theologian grew tired after a time, and finally said: "You doctors know so much about the uncertainties of this world that I should think you would not want to live." "You theologians," came the quick reply, "tell us so much about the certainties of the next that we don't want to die."—Lewiston Journal.

THE proclaimed purpose of the McKinley tariff is to enable American employers to pay higher wages to American workmen. Yet diligent search and much challenging have failed to discover a single workman who rejoices in any such benefit, while Mr. John De Witt Warner has collected for the Weekly World a truly startling list of cases in which reductions have been made in the wages of men employed in the shops and mines of protected capitalists. His list includes reductions in 71 iron and steel factories, 13 in coal companies, 18 in woolen and worsteed mills, 12 in clothing factories, 4 in cotton mills or groups of cotton mills, 2 in pottery establishments, 2 in glass works, and 30 in miscellaneous industries. The reductions have ranged from 5 to 30 per cent. and have affected thousands of workmen and their families.

THE Boston Journal said recently that those manufacturers who have not signed the remonstrance of the "National Association of Wool Manufacturers" "are too few and inconspicuous to require attention." The remonstrance is against free wool. The American Wool Reporter, itself a strong supporter of protection, takes the Boston Journal to task and says that in Massachusetts only 169 woolen manufacturers signed the remonstrance, while 205 refused to sign it. It also says that "many of these are very important manufacturers," and that "an analysis of New Hampshire, Connecticut, and Rhode Island and other States would show similar results."

rushed into a newspaper office recently, and threatened to "clean out" the establishment, because they printed his verses wrong. Said he: "I wrote, 'To dwell forever in a grot of peace,' and you idiots put it 'a pot of grease.'" The mortified editor presented him with a vial of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, a year's subscription and an apology.

The little "Pellets" positively cure sick and nervous headache, biliousness, costiveness, and all derangements of the stomach, bowels and liver. It's a large contract, but the smallest things in the world do the business—Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. They're the smallest, but the most effective. They go to work in the right way. They cleanse and renovate the liver, stomach and bowels thoroughly—but they do it mildly and gently. You feel the good they do—but you don't feel them doing it.

They're the cheapest pill you can buy, because they're guaranteed to give satisfaction, or your money is returned.

He Had His Way.

My shaving-brush is missing, and my shoe-horn can't be found,
My comb and brush I cannot see, my cane is nowhere round.
My tall silk hat is ruffled up, my pens have gone astray—
But all this woe is naught to me, for baby's had his way.

What though my shoes are minus strings, my manuscripts awry?
I know that this betokens babe's been spared a heartfelt cry.
What though the floor is ever strewn with toys, by night and day?
Is there not pleasure in the thought that baby's had his way?

It hurts to have my mustache pulled, and games at 4 a. m.
Are not just suited to my mind; but John is fond of them,
And, after all, it seems to me, no man can well gainsay
That there is lots and lots of fun when baby has his way.

So, son and heir, continue on thy happy, blest career;
Whate'er discomfort comes to me, cease not thy joyous play;
As far as I'm concerned, my boy, go on and have thy way.

—Harper's Young People.

Good Manners for Young People.

Be your natural self and take no thought of the consequences. Other people don't observe you half as much as you imagine. In a crowd, the truth is, you are likely to be forgotten, to pass unnoticed. Of course, if you are not rich enough to dress as the society of the rich requires, keep out of that society. You can find your own place, and you will enjoy it more; nay, you will enjoy it only, for in the other you can have no pleasure at all.

Many young people are distressed because they fear they may not make an exhibition of themselves in society which presents their real value. They are troubled lest they shall be misunderstood, put down lower than they belong, not rated high enough: Hence they make an effort to convince those whom they meet that they are of some consequence. But all that is a waste of energy, of thought, anxiety and ambition. It fails of its purpose, and is likely to produce the very effect which it seeks to prevent. It generates a self-consciousness which breeds embarrassment in turn, and consequent inability to make the desired revelation and create the hoped-for impression.

Learn to forget all about yourself, how you appear, what other people may be thinking about you; and then they will see you as you really are, and as you are a far more engaging and interesting individual than you can be when thoughts of the show you are making of yourself destroy your natural manner and expression. Civility never goes amiss. A young girl who looks on old married men as not worth her consideration of her gracious courtesy, is likely to find out that she has made a sad mistake. A young man who has no attentions to bestow on women who have passed the age which he thinks alone is attractive, may find that he has lost valuable allies in his career.—Canada Presbyterian.

Boys that Succeed.

"A new boy came into our office to-day," said a wholesale grocery merchant to his wife at the supper table. "He was hired by the firm at the request of the senior member, who thought the boy gave promise of good things. But I feel sure that boy will be out of the office in less than a week."

"What makes you think so?"

"Because the first thing he wanted to know was just exactly how much he was expected to do."

"Perhaps you will change your mind about him."

"Perhaps I shall," replied the merchant; "but I don't think so."

Three days later the business man said to his wife: "About that boy you remember I mentioned two or three days ago. Well, he is the best boy that ever entered the store."

"How did you find that out?"

"In the easiest way in the world. The first morning after the boy began work he performed very faithfully and systematically the exact duties assigned which he had been so careful to have explained to him. When he had finished he came to me and said: 'Mr. H., I have finished all that work. Now what can I do?' I was a little surprised, but I gave him a little job of work, and forgot all about him until he came into my room with the question, 'What next?' That settled it for me. He was the first boy that ever entered our office who was willing and volunteered to do more than was assigned him. I predict a successful career for that boy as a business man."

Business men know capacity when they see it, and they make a note of it. Willingness to do more than the assigned task is one of the chief stepping-stones to commercial success.

Smart Boys.

Some of the answers given by the pupils of an Indiana public school in an examination in physiology are very absurd. One boy, for instance, wrote: "It will not do to munkey with the tung juce." And such mistakes as "kile" for "chyle," "agean" for "aqueous," "jasper juce" for "gastric juice," and "esofaqut" for "œsophagus" were common. A delightful though unconscious comment on the ignorance displayed in the above examples was made by one boy, who solemnly remarked in his paper that "you can't no to much." It is pretty evident that these boys won't "no to much" about physiology, at least, unless the instruction given them is more intelligent than it now appears to be.

Wouldn't Pass Any.

Deacon Bloodroot—"The number of saloons in New York is simply appalling. Why, if you should walk up Broadway from Union Square to 23d street how many dram-shops do you think you would pass?"

Dick Rounder—"None."—Life.

Exceedingly Awkward.

A new universal language is on the principle of numbering. Every word is numbered. For example, "I write to know," would be 10, 72, 35,676.

Scrambling for Life.

The ascent of Adam's Peak in Ceylon is not only difficult but extremely dangerous. Lawrence Oliphant, who was a "trustworthy pilgrim" not likely to manufacture "hair-breadth 'scapes," gives the following account of his own ascent which, it is easy to believe, one would not care to repeat:

"The path at one point was cut in the precipitous hillside; at least 300 feet below roared a torrent of boiling water. My foot slipped on a root, and I pitched sheer over the cliff. I heard the cry of my companions as I disappeared, and had had quite time to realize that all was over when I was brought up suddenly by the spreading branches of a bush which was growing upon a projecting rock. There was no standing ground anywhere except this rock.

"Looking up I saw my companions and the natives peering over the edge above, and to their intense relief shouted that I was all right, but dared not move for fear the bush would give way. They, however, strongly urged my scrambling on the rock, and this, with a dizzy brain, I succeeded in doing.

"The natives then undid their long waistcloths, and tying them to each other and to a piece of cord taken from the packages, made a rope just long enough to reach me. Fastening this under my armpits, and holding to it with the energy of despair, I was safely hauled to the top.

"This adventure was not a very good preparation for what was in store for us when, not far from the top, we reached the one really dangerous point in the whole ascent. Here again we had a precipice with a torrent at the bottom on the one side, and on the other an overhanging cliff. This was not metaphorically overhanging, for its upper edge literally projected some distance beyond the ledge on which we stood; it was not above forty feet high, and was scaled by an iron ladder.

"The agonizing moment came when we had mounted this ladder to the protecting edge, having nothing between our backs and some hundreds of feet below, and then had to turn over the edge, and take hold of a chain which lay over an expanse of bare, sloping rock, to the links of which it was necessary to cling firmly while one hauled one's self on one's knees for twenty or thirty yards over a surface by no means smooth. Yet we did it, and lived to tell the tale."

Stood on a Steeple Cross.

After describing in interesting detail how Clarence E. Ward, of Cincinnati, with the aid of a rope, climbed the 230-foot steeple of St. Peter's Church, Cleveland, the Leader of that city says: By repeating the process of passing one girdle above the other he reached the large ball at the top of the spire and at the base of the cross. Fifteen minutes were spent in getting his ropes and girdles over the ball. Having accomplished this feat he climbed over the ball, and was safely lodged at the foot of the cross. His first movement was to securely fasten the pulley through which the long rope passed to the base of the cross. Then he placed both arms around the cross and shook it vigorously. From the street the tall pole could be seen to shake to and fro, and, to the spectators, looked as if it would not bear Ward's weight. With the agility of a cat, however, he mounted the cross, and the next moment was astride of the arm which pointed to the north. Then it was that he produced the national flag, and a cheer broke from the crowd as he fastened it to the upright part of the cross above the arms.

His next act was to make fast a short rope which reached to the foot of the cross. Half a minute later he slid down and again stood on the ball. Waving his hat to the people, he began the descent. This was easy. Ward simply sat in his chair and allowed the rope to pass slowly through his hands. Three times on the way down he stopped his descent, and pushing himself away from the spire with his feet, spun around in midair. The crowd thought he was doing it for the sake of bravado, but his object was to twist the rope so that it would not pass through his hands so quickly.

A Betting Captain.

The captain of one rather old and slow steamer, finding that he would have to be a long time in China before he received a full cargo of tea and would probably have to return in ballast, began, to every one's astonishment, to say that, owing to the repairs that had been done to his engine, he hoped to make a racing passage. Then, still more to the astonishment of the captains of the fast steamers and the world at large, he commenced to back himself to make the fastest passage home. In such considerable sums of money did he wager that people began to think there was something in it, and the merchants sent their tea almost entirely to his ship, arguing that, as the captain stood to lose £500, the repairs to his steamer's engines had probably put him in a position to bet almost on a certainty. Of course the steamer, whose greatest speed was eight knots an hour, arrived in England weeks after the others and the captain lost his £500, but instead of having to lie in China waiting his chance of a cargo coming in from the interior—a probable delay of weeks—he had cleared in a few days after his bets became known to the public with a full ship, thus recouping to his owners, who of course paid his betting losses, a considerable number of thousands of pounds profit.—Blackwood's Magazine.

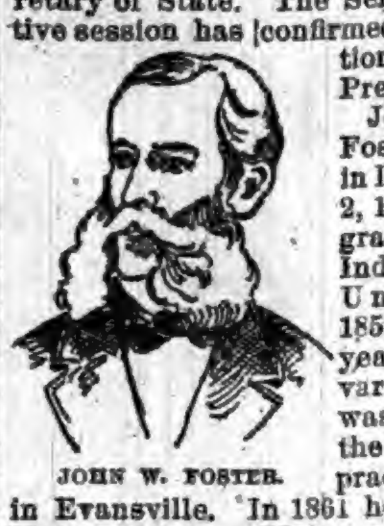
The Origin of the Name California.

The name California (hot furnace) was given by Cortez to Lower California and a part of Arizona about the year 1535. The title was probably an adaptation from a name applied in a Spanish romance to an imaginary island in the Indies, which was supposed to contain gold mines of fabulous wealth. This explanation is the one most commonly tendered, but it is more than probable that the name was applied by Cortez to the southern parts of Arizona on account of the intense heat peculiar to that country, and that the title was at a later day extended to include most of the North American Pacific coast.—Globe-Democrat.

TO TAKE BLAINE'S PLACE.

John W. Foster of Indiana Named for Secretary of State.

John W. Foster of Indiana is to be Secretary of State. The Senate in executive session has confirmed the nomination made by the President.



JOHN W. FOSTER.

John Watson Foster was born in Indiana, March 2, 1836. He was graduated at the Indiana State University in 1855, and after a year in the Harvard law school was admitted to the bar and began practice of law in Evansville. In 1861 he entered the Union army as Major of the Twenty-fifth Indiana Infantry. He was successively promoted to Lieutenant Colonel and Colonel. During his entire military service he was connected with the Western armies of Grant and Sherman.

After the war he became editor of the Evansville Daily Journal and in 1869 was appointed postmaster of that city. Four years later he was sent to Mexico by President Grant as United States Minister, and in 1880 was reappointed by President Hayes. The same year he was transferred to Russia, which mission he held about a year. He then resigned and returned home to attend to private business. He settled down in Washington, giving his attention chiefly to practicing in international cases and acting as counsel for foreign legations before courts or commissions.

Mr. Foster was appointed Minister to Spain by President Arthur and served two years, when he resigned and returned to the United States. While in Spain he had negotiated an important commercial treaty which was strongly opposed in the Senate and finally rejected by that body. It was withdrawn by President Cleveland for reconsideration. Foster returned to Spain to negotiate for a modified treaty, but his mission was a failure. He has for some time been acting as diplomatic attorney for the Department of State.

UP GOES THE PRICE OF COAL.

Sales Agents Meet and Decide to Advance Their Rates.

New York special: Coal prices were advanced sharply on Thursday. A substantial increase had generally been looked for, but the advance decided upon in the cases of some sizes of coal was greater than had been prophesied. The Eastern sales agents of the anthracite companies met at the Central Building, on Liberty street, and decided to raise rates as follows: On chestnut and stove sizes, 35 cents a ton; egg, 30 cents; grate, 15 cents. These advances are from the figures of the June schedule. The new prices take effect immediately. Quotations for July, 1890, 1891, and 1892, are shown in this table, which gives pretty good evidence of the workings of the coal combination:

Kind.	1890.	1891.	1892.	Increase.
Grate........	$3.65	$3.65	$3.90	25 cents
Egg..........	3.75	3.85	4.20	35 cents
Stove.........	4.00	4.05	4.50	45 cents
Chestnut....	3.65	3.75	4.40	65 cents

The production for July was fixed at 3,500,000 tons. The actual production in July, 1891, was 3,761,339 tons; in July, 1890, 3,310,078 tons, and in July, 1889, 3,627,522 tons. The Western sales agents also held a meeting and decided upon an advance in price of 25 cents a ton on all sizes.

The World's Columbian Commission is now without even a postage stamp. Every dollar of the appropriation of $59,500 has been exhausted and Secretary Dickinson hasn't enough money left to pay the stationery expenses of his office, unless he goes into his own pocket. Director General Davis has not drawn his salary for several months. Colonel Dickinson has gone without pay for the same period in order that the clerks in his office could draw their salaries in full. They have been paid to June 1, and, even in case a deficiency bill is passed, will get no more money until early in August. But few members of the national board who attended the April session have received the money they advanced for railroad fare and hotel expenses. Wednesday night the last postage stamp in Secretary Dickinson's office was put on a letter to Secretary Foster, informing him of the condition of the National Commission's finances.

FELL TO THEIR DEATH.

A Party of Aeronauts Precipitated to the Ground.

A frightful accident occurred at the Crystal Palace, London. A piece being given at the palace lately is called "The Tragic Episode," but Wednesday the audience witnessed a real and terrible tragedy. Captain Dale, the well-known aeronaut, was to give a balloon exhibition in the presence of thousands of Sunday school holiday seekers. The captain invited any who desired to accompany him on his voyage in the air. Several volunteered and the balloon started on its upward flight, the great multitude, largely composed of children, watching it with wondering gaze. Suddenly the balloon burst, and a cry of terror arose from the audience as the balloon collapsed with a noise as of the discharge of a huge cannon. The aeronaut fell to the ground dead, and three of the passengers were seriously injured.

Soldiers to Open the Fair.

Fifteen thousand soldiers in blue uniforms are coming to Chicago next October to take part in the ceremonies of dedicating the World's Fair buildings, says a Chicago dispatch. They will be here four days at least, under command of Gen. Nelson A. Miles. The South Park Commissioners have refused to allow the soldiers to camp in Washington Park, and Gen. Miles has been worrying for several weeks to know where he would send them. Yesterday it was decided that the troops should spread their blankets in three of the big buildings at Jackson Park. The infantry will go in camp in the Electricity and Mines and Mining Building. Sheds will be built for the horses. The dedicatory ceremonies, unless the date is changed, will extend from Oct. 11 to Oct. 13.

Heart-Rending Narrative.

I heave a sigh whenever I think of the sad fate of my young friend, Archimedes Watson. He was the son of an old English admiral, who was very fond of him. And sometimes when the admiral was at home he would set for a while and look and look at Archimedes; and then, in the depths of his affection, he would rise up and clasp him to his breast, and, with streaming eyes uplifted, express a wish that his timbers and toplights might be shivered, his tarry eyes blasted, and his hull scuttled, if he didn't love that boy better than his life. Then the admiral would hitch his trowsers, roll his quid in his mouth, and make an observation to the leeward with the spy-glass which he always carried in his pocket.

One day, just before he started on a voyage, the admiral called Archimedes to him, and promised to leave him all his property, provided he (Archimedes) would swear a solemn oath to visit the admiral's grave after the admiral's death, once every year, and to say his prayers over his tomb.

Archimedes took this vow, in the presence of an alderman, and then the admiral sorrowfully departed and proceeded to plough the raging main, and to course upon the billows of the raging ocean. This was all very fine as far as it went. But one day the admiral sailed into the South seas, and went ashore upon a cannibal island. He looked so plump and juicy that the epicurean natives laid for him, roped him in with the consecrated lasso, and took him to the temple, where the priest determined to cook him whole, with the crust on and plenty of gravy. So they stretched him on a grid-iron, and stuck him with a fork every now and then to see if he was getting tender, and dredged him all over with pepper and salt and flour. At last he died. His last words were: "Turn me over; I think I am done enough on this side!" Then his freed spirit winged its way to the sunny empyrean, and the fine old English admiral was no more.

The priest ate half of him that day at dinner, and had the rest cut down cold for tea.

But how about Archimedes Watson? When he heard the news he tore his hair, smashed his Sunday hat, and wept quart after quart of actual tears, while corking care ploughed deep furrows in his real alabaster brow. How could he pray over the admiral's tomb now? If he undertook to engage in religious exercises before that heathen clergyman, wouldn't he snatch him right off his knees before he got anywhere near "Amen," and macerate him into and macerate him into hash, and pulverize him into scrapple without a solitary compunction of conscience?

Archimedes Watson was willing to bet he would. But he was bound to keep his promise. Archimedes Watson was; so he came to me and said, "Good bye, Quill! Farewell, my boy, farewell." And then he tore himself away, went to the South seas by overland route, and advertised for that priest all over the Pacific Ocean. I never heard of him again, but I doubt not that his heroic soul kept faith with the admiral, and that his underdone remains at this moment linger undigested in the stomach of that voracious worshiper of false gods.—Washington Capital.

A Wonderful Cat.

Charles Nesbitt, the colored barber-philosopher, has a wonderful black cat of the Thomas vintage.

He is also a chicken fancier, and between one of his hens and the cat a strong affection exists. This particular pet concluded that she would like to set, so she was provided with a nest and twelve fine eggs.

Tom accompanied her and selecting an adjoining nest calmly watched her maneuvers. Finally he seemed to grasp the situation and levied on the hen's wealth, selecting six of the eggs and putting them in his own nest.

The hen not only made no objection but gave several clucks of approval, and now they set side by side as all who wish can see, wondering with pardonable pride, "what will the harvest be?"

Should the eggs under the cat hatch, won't the chickens be astonished at the appearance of their mother and try to get back into their shells?—Atlanta Constitution.

The Longest-Haired Woman.

It is said that Mercedes Lopez, a Mexican woman who lives on the Rio Grande, is perhaps the longest haired woman in the world. She is some five feet in height, and when she stands erect her hair trails on the ground four feet and eight inches. Her hair is so thick that she can draw it around her so as to completely hide herself. Her present suit of hair is only five years old. It grows so heavy as to cause her headaches and she is compelled to cut it frequently, and she sells large tresses of it to hair dealers every month. She is an ignorant woman, the wife of a sheep-herder, and is of Castilian blood.

Let There Be Peace

In the gastric region. If troubled with nausea from sea sickness, biliousness or other cause, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will immediately put a stop to the stomachic disturbance. A prominent and most unpleasant feature of liver complaint is nausea in the morning. The symptoms disappear and the cause is removed by the Bitters. Many persons have very delicate stomachs which trifling indiscretions in eating or drinking, or even some sight that is repulsive, disorder. Such persons cannot act more wisely than to invigorate their digestive region with the Bitters, a tonic specially adapted to reinforce it. For malaria, rheumatism, kidney troubles, and nervousness the Bitters will be found marvelously beneficial, and when sleep is untranquil and appetite variable it soon improves both. It is, in fact, a most comprehensive and delightful remedy.

Wonderful Insect Vitality.

It is a standing puzzle to the entomologists how frail little insects of the mosquito and butterfly order can brave the cold of the Arctic winter and yet retain their vitality. The larvæ of the milkweed butterfly have been exposed to an artificial blast 68 degrees below zero. Taken out of range of this artificial blizzard and gradually "thawed out," this same worm was able to creep in less than half an hour afterwards. Butterflies have been found flitting joyously about in the highest lattitude man has ever penetrated, and the mosquitoes of Alaska and Greenland are known to be the healthiest specimens of that race of little pests.

A Feminine Thrust.

Clarissa—And you have jilted him!

Ethel—Yes.

Clarissa—I should think your conscience would trouble you.

Ethel—Oh, I'm not the first. It is woman's prerogative to do as she likes, and you know the adage says: The favor of the fair is fickle.

Clarissa—Yes; but you notice that that says the fair.—New York Press.

Are You in Poor Health? Write To-Day.

No Curiosity.

"What is the matter with you?" asked the millionaire.

"I am a poor man who has lost every thing except his good name. Oh! Mr. Gould, you don't know what it is for a man to have nothing in this world but his good name."

"No, and I've no curiosity on the subject," replied Jay.—Texas Siftings.

Webster's Dictionaries.

G. & C. Merriam Co. having won their suit against the Texas Siftings Co. of New York, for offering a 40 years old reprint of the edition of Webster's Unabridged as premium for subscribers for their paper, are devoting their attention to several other suits of a like nature now in the courts, the Topeka Capital Co. of Topeka, Kansas, being one of the latest. They claim they are compelled to do this in justice alike to the public and to themselves, and have therefore given directions to their attorney to prosecute in every case where a publisher makes use of misleading announcements.

Another Tradition Smashed.

A snake has been found in Ireland at last. A Belfast newspaper says that a snake seven and a half feet long and nearly seven inches in circumference has been killed at Nora's Glen. It was taken to a contractor's yard in the town, where the reptile was inspected by a large number of people. The solitary snake of Ireland will be preserved in a glass case for the inspection of future generations.

The fire bell rang out its alarm Monday morning, which proved that a building in Uniontown, was in flames. It was owned by W. H. Leas, and unoccupied. It was supposed to be the work of an incendiary.

Mrs. Winslow returned, Wednesday evening, from a visit to Sandusky, Ohio. Her sister, Mrs. Finch, who also visited relatives at the same place, stopped here, until Saturday afternoon, when she left on the 4:10 train for her home.

On Saturday evening, a very pleasant reception was given by the members of the C. L. S. C., in honor of Mrs. N. Weaver, who leaves for her new home, near Chicago, this week, at the residence of Mrs. Lily Brysland, on Washington street. A number of invited guests were present, and although the rain was pouring on the outside, the hours flew fast within, and all was bright and cheery. The refreshments were delicate and inviting, and fully enjoyed. A lovely corsage boquet fell to each one, also, the gilded acorns, on the outer one of which were the letters, C. L. S. C.; the second carried the name of the lady for whom the reception was given, while the name of the one at whose home we were being entertained, and the three were tied together by a narrow, gold-colored ribbon.

Master Lloyd S. Clear, of Churubusco, spent several days here, last week, visiting his many young friends. He returned by way of Ft. Wayne.

J. B. Ricketts has sawed and corded up over one hundred cords of wood. It would be very nice if others would copy after the example he has set.

Jack Johnson's latest purchase is an Oregon pony. James Driscoll has taken the contract to break it. The first lesson was riding, and had D's, girl seen the rate of speed it adopted, she surely would have donned a mourning habit.

The recent heavy rains have made the ground so soft that farmers apprehend some trouble in running their machines either in the hay or wheat fields, more especially the latter, because of the unusually tangled condition of the wheat.

CUSTER.

The inclemency of the weather has rendered the completion of the Wabash Extension very slow.

We understand Mr. Hovater's customers will now be waited upon by a lady clerk from Huntington.

E. I. Crossley sold his horse, buggy and harness, last week, to W. D. Smith. A new outfit will soon take its place.

Mrs. Imhoff, of Butler, Ind., and Miss Helwig, of Urbana, Ohio, were visiting friends in this vicinity, last week.

We consider it in bad taste, and at best, a very poor quality of manners for those young ladies who loiter on the corners and hint for some young man to walk home with them. They seemingly do not stop to think that young men only comply with their wishes for manners' sake, and not because of any particular regard for them. Such actions lower you in the estimation of any level-headed and honorable young man, and exhibit a deplorable condition of mind and heart and a lack of maidenly refinement.

John T. George.

John T. George, long one of the leading and best known farmers of southern DeKalb county, died at the home of John A. McClellan, a grandson resident of Jackson township, on the morning of June 29th, 1892, primarily of old age.

He was the oldest of a family of seven sons and a daughter, and had outlived them all, except one brother now living in Missouri.

Born Dec. 19th, 1811, at Clarksville, Penn., his earlier years were passed on the farm of his father. To better their fortune, the family moved to what is now known as Ashland county, Ohio, where on Feb. 24, 1834, John George married Nancy McClellan and began for himself upon a tract of forty acres of land given him by his father. This land he improved and cultivated and aided by early formed habits of industry and frugality, he acquired means to buy adjacent property and to become the owner of a good farm.

The same spirit that influenced the father to move from Clarksville, incited his sons to seek homes yet farther to the west, and first William and Mathew George, his brothers came as pioneers to this county in 1841. James, another brother came next, and then John having disposed of his Ohio farm followed their example in 1844 and purchasing a quarter section of wild land in the western portion of Jackson township, there settled, and during the years that followed, cleared and improved his farm added by purchase to its area and brought his fields to a high state of cultivation.

He sought no office, belonged to no organization, and owed no man anything.

John George was a quiet, earnest, hard working, christian man. Although connected with no religious society, his life was in strict conformity to Divine teachings.

He was strictly temperate in habit, charitable where it was charity to give, conscientious in dealing with others, prompt in meeting all obligations and forbearing with such as became his debtors. His word was as good as a bond, he was a lover of peace and well disposed toward all. Widely as he had come in time to be known, no words but those of approval were spoken of him, his character was beyond reproach and in his decease, community has suffered the loss of a living example of a good and an honest man.

In March, 1876, when his wife died, he rented his farm and made his home with John Neff, a son-in-law, and in 1881, changed his abode to the home of Mr. McClellan, where he had since lived.

Having passed the limit of fourscore years, he contemplated death with serenity, held full consciousness till the last and died as one who wraps the drapery of his couch about him and reposes with pleasant dreams.

He leaves three children, Mrs. Martha A. Ditmars, Mrs. Eliza E. Patterson and Mrs. Emma J. Neff. The funeral services were held on July 1, at the Baptist church in Auburn, the sermon being preached by the pastor, Rev. Eagy. Remarks were made by Elder Ward, and in the presence of a numerous concourse of friends and neighbors, his remains were laid to rest in Evergreen cemetery.

AG. E. BENJAMIN & CO., 115 N. 8th St., ST. LOUIS, MO.

Paulus N. Calkin.

The death of Mr. Calkin, Tuesday morning, July 5, was not a surprise. He had been sick for nearly a year, and recently was so low, that the end was looked for at any hour. The disease was supposed to be some form of liver complaint, but at his request, a post mortem examination was held, which took place Wednesday forenoon.

The funeral was from the house to-day, July 7, at 11 a. m, the services conducted by Rev. Mr. Moot, of the Christian church.

Mr. Calkin was born in Essex county, N. Y., Nov. 27, 1830, and at the age of 3, moved with his parents to Sandusky county, Ohio. In 1840, they came to DeKalb county, locating in Richland township. March 27, 1851, he was married to Matilda Brown, who survives him. To them were born, eight children, all grown, and all living. One brother, Erastus, and two sisters, Mrs. Geo. McMillan and Mrs. Henry Harms, are also living in this county.

Mr. Calkin had long been a prominent man in that section and his death will add one to the long list of old settlers who have passed away. He was a man well respected by all for his many good qualities.

Obituary.

Edna Hazel, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Staudacher was born Nov. 2, 1891, and died July 1, 1892, aged 7 months and 29 days.

Its short life was, in most part passed in pain and suffering; more especially the last four months of life were filled with agonies which cannot be described, and which blighted out of existence one more pure, innocent and sinless life. Though very young in age, she possessed an intelligence so peculiar and extraordinary, that the sacrifice seems more painful, though we realize a better existence for her has begun.

The services were held at the residence on South VanBuren street, Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock p. m., Rev. I. M. Thomas officiating. The bereaved parents have the sympathy of the community.

Oh, our darling babe, you have gone,
From this cold world of strife,
To join heaven's angelic throngs,
In purer and sweeter life
You staid so short a time with us,
In innocence and love,
That you were not yet used to earth,
Ere you went home above.

The hot, scalding tears burn our cheeks,
While our grief we restrain,
With the thought that you now are free,
From all sickness and pain.
We would not call you back again,
But will a lesson learn:—
That God's ways are not like our ways,
Though for our babe we yearn.

But farewell, our Hazel, farewell;
Sleep in thy narrow bed.
While solemnly the years roll by,
As silent as the dead.
Live in that bright realm of the blest,
And heaven's glory see;—
For we know you've only gone to sleep,
To wake among the free.

An Important New Publication

The issue of "King's United States of To-Day; a Handbook of all the States and Territories," marks the completion of a great enterprise. It is a marvelous summary of every fact covering the beginning, the growth and especially the present development and resources of each state and territory. Prof. Greenwood, a prominent educator, says it is "the most complete, compact, solidified, instructive and useful mass of information of all the states and territories that has ever been published." It is commended in similar terms by such men as Pres. Dwight of Yale, Pres. Adams of Cornell, Pres. Patton of Princeton, Wm. M. Evarts, Oliver Wendell Holmes, Cardinal Gibbons, and many others. It contains complete maps of every state and territory, and about 3,000 fine engravings, showing the chief objects of interest, including grand scenery, chief cities, public buildings, educational institutions manufactories, etc., etc. These with the array of statistics and vivid, concise narrative, present a glowing picture with pen and pencil of the greatness and glory of our Republic, while the mass of information given is just what is needed for quick reference in every office, store, factory, shop and home in the land. It is sold by subscription, and as the price is only $3.00 it must meet with an immense sale. Agency may be secured by addressing W. H. Kerman & Co., Napoleon, Ohio.

The Chicago Fire.

It is quite remarkable how of late years, the public fancy has turned towards pictures; within the last decade, newspaper after newspaper has been compelled to illustrate their publications daily. There is a wide-spread desire to see. A book without illustrations is like roast turkey without the "fixings"—rather uninviting and not altogether palatable. For years back the great artists have turned their attention to the illustrating of history, and they have done more to give people an idea of how great battles were fought than any description of them could have ever done. The last great effort to pictorially represent any historical event is the Cyclorama of the burning of Chicago. This is said to be by far the most difficult subject ever attempted, and it was thought by many to be impossible to faithfully portray. If one may judge by the glowing accounts given of this great scene by the Chicago press, it must be the most remarkable production in the relms of art. The effects produced are startlingly realistic, and faithfully shows the situation in Chicago when the great fire was at its height. This unique and remarkable exhibition is attracting a great deal of attention in the World's Fair City. It is housed in elegant quarters on Michigan Ave., between Madison and Monroe, and will remain in Chicago until after the World's Fair.

PERIQUE TOBACCO.

The Reason for Its Peculiar Flavor and the Method of Curing.

In the case of perique tobacco the stripping of the midrib from the leaf causes the leaf to fall into two lateral halves, which are placed on top of each other in such a manner that the blade of one half of the leaf alternates with the apex of the other. These are then twisted into what are called "torquets." These torquets are folded upon themselves, side by side, and are placed in strong boxes, which are about twelve inches square, and subjected to pressure.

After twenty-four hours these torquets are taken out and repacked in the same manner as before every twenty-four hours for a period of a week, the idea being evidently to subject the torquets to a uniform pressure throughout. After this period has elapsed these torquets are repacked every three days for about two weeks. During all this time the tobacco is subjected to a constant, steady pressure with a press of the most primitive kind.

I should not forget to state that after the tobacco has been placed in the press one week a black juice flows out of the box, which has a pleasant odor, not unlike freshly cooked prunes. Square pieces of cottonade, 18 by 18 inches, are laid out, and on these the torquets are opened, or, to use the term of the English speaking Arcadians, the torquets are unraveled, great care being necessary to separate each leaf.

The largest leaves are laid upon the cottonade first, so that when rolled the largest leaves will serve as a covering of the carrotte presently to be described. The smaller leaves are placed longitudinally upon the larger ones until three and one-half to four pounds are placed upon the piece of cottonade, the ends of which are turned inwardly. The cottonade and contents are now rolled into carrottes, the ends of the cottonade are pulled out and a string tied to each end to prevent the carrotte from opening, and the whole wrapped in a clothesline, usually made of cotton.

The wrapping is performed in the primitive manner that characterizes the operation throughout. Use is made of a windlass and a rope; the end of the rope is made fast to the carrotte, passed around a post (driven into the ground), a twist is now made around the carrotte, and with each turn of the carrotte the pressure is increased. This is continued until the whole of the carrotte is enveloped; the end is made fast by passing it through several turns of the rope. This finishes the carrotte, but, before it is placed upon the market, it is allowed to age, which is usually from six months to a year. During this time the tobacco is allowed to undergo a slow fermentation, which gives the aroma and taste that distinguish this tobacco from all others.

The amount of perique grown and manufactured has averaged, during the five years preceding 1890, 19,000 carrottes of four pounds per annum. Wholesale tobacconists have expressed the doubt that any modern method would produce tobacco with as fine flavor as that produced by the old and primitive manner just described.—Pharmaceutical Era.

How a King Keeps Cool.

Although one may not keep cool, it is some satisfaction to read how others manage it. There is the king of Siam, for instance. He is said to have in one of his country palaces a wonderful pavilion. It was built by a Chinese engineer as a refuge for the king during the extreme heat of summer. The walls, ceiling and floors are formed of pieces of plate glass an inch thick. They are so perfectly fitted together with a transparent cement that the joints are invisible and no fluid can penetrate. The pavilion is twenty-eight feet long and seventeen wide, and stands in the middle of a huge basin made of beautifully colored marbles.

When the king enters the pavilion the single door is closed and cemented. Then the sluice gates are opened and the basin is filled with water. Higher and higher it rises, until the pavilion is covered and only the ventilators at the top connect it with the open air. When the heat of the sun is so great that the water almost boils on the surface of the freshest fountains this pavilion is deliciously cool. And this is the way the king of Siam cools himself off in hot weather. It sounds very delightful.—Exchange.

An Automatic Wrapper.

One of the most ingenious and at the same time practically useful among the automatic machines which have been introduced is a device which forms, fills, weighs and seals packages in those establishments where large quantities of goods, such as fine cut tobacco, soda, starch, etc., are constantly put up. The operation by which this result is accomplished, though decidedly novel, is not at all complex in any particular, the machine consisting merely of a series of forming blocks, receptacles, folders, gummers and feeders, all working in mutual harmony, so that the packages are smoothly and continuously produced.

The forming blocks successively size the paper, which instantly afterward is wrapped around them, folded and gummed at the end; the paper sacks are then plunged into receptacles filled with the commodity with which they are intended, finally folded on top and sealed.—New York Sun.

It Felt So.

An Irish servant girl came to her mistress one morning begging permission to go to the dentist to have an aching "toot" filled, saying that it had been going "thumpity-thump, thumpity-thump!" all night.

When the girl returned, her mistress asked:

"Well, Katie, did you have the tooth filled?"

"Oi did, mum."

"What did you have it filled with?"

"Oi don't know just phwat it was, mum, but from the way it fales Oi should t'ink it was t'under and loightning he'd put into it, mum."—Youth's Companion.

It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."
DR. G. C. OSGOOD,
Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."
DR. J. F. KINCHELOE,
Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."
H. A. ARCHER, M. D.,
111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

The Board of Commissioners of DeKalb county, Indiana, will receive sealed bids up to July 18, 1892, at 2 o'clock p, m., for the erection of the following bridges:

No. 1. Fifty foot span over Cedar Creek, in Smithfield township, called the Farrington bridge; iron truss, 100 pounds strain to the square foot.

No. 2, Fifty-foot span over Cedar Creek, in Smithfield township, called the Brand bridge; iron truss as in No. 1.

No. 3, Sixty-foot span over Little Cedar Creek, in Butler township, two miles west of St. John Station, called the Lung bridge; iron truss, 100 pounds strain to the square foot.

No. 4, Ninety-eight-foot span in Grant township, over Cedar Creek, called the Plum bridge; iron truss, 100 pounds strain to the square foot.

No. 5, The Probst bridge in Butler township, ½ mile east of St. John, over Cedar Creek. To be built of wood, or combination; 14-foot roadway in the clear; pile abutments. Contractors to furnish specifications.

We will also receive bids for the construction of three abutments for bridges No. 1, 2, and 3, named above. No 4, will repair old abutment.

The height of abutment in bridges No. 1 and 2 is 12½ feet, commencing 4 feet below bottom of stream; and of No. 3, 13½ feet high, and commencing 4 feet below bottom of stream. Parties can furnish bids on iron, native stone or limestone. Bids on masonry must be by cubic yard. Bids must be accompanied by $250 check, for security to enter into contract within ten days.

The Board reserves the right to reject any and all bids.

By order of Board,

CORRESPONDENCE

WATERLOO.

Judge McBride, of Elkhart, was town, Tuesday.

H. D. Boozer went to Ft. Wayne, Thursday.

Jennie North and Jennie Strow were in Ft. Wayne, Thursday.

Rev. S. P. Klotz and John Shuman, will visit Niagara Falls, this week.

Prof. Charles Kriebel will preach in the U. B., church, next Sunday, at 10:30 a. m.

Miss Dillah Wilcox, of Maple Grove, Mich., is visiting the family of Isaac Speer.

Mrs. Smith, from Detroit, a daughter of S. W. Dickinson, is visiting her parents, here.

Dr. Y. G. Carpenter and wife recently spent a few days with friends at Defiance, Ohio.

Dr. Vesta M. Swarts, of Auburn, has been making professional calls here, for a week or so.

The entertainment Monday evening, at the Presbyterian church, by the De-Pauw Concert Co., was fine.

William Bowman now runs the sprinkling wagon, and will use water to keep the dust down. Will is a hustler.

Wednesday evening, the ladies of the M. E. church gave a supper from five to eight, at the residence of Robert Patterson.

Mr. and Mrs. Haskins, of Chicago, came to visit relatives, just in time to be here when Mrs. Beck, Mrs H's., mother, died.

Brown Clark and wife, of St. Joe, Mo., have been visiting friends here, and are now at Angola, where Mrs. C's., people reside.

George Kennedy returned to his home in Mt. Vernon, last week, after visiting a few days with friends in this place, and vicinity.

Rev. Mr. Albertson with two of his children, went to the central part of the state, Wednesday, to visit the mother of Mrs. Albertson.

G. D. Dennison was married, Thurs day, by Rev. Mr. Albertson, to Mrs. G W. Frick. They went to Chautauqua, for their wedding trip.

Rev. Mr. Albertson preached an able sermon last Sunday morning. It is a pleasure to hear him recite quotations from the poets. He is one of the few, who can do it well.

Mrs. Adam Hay, now of Barry county, Mich., formerly of this county, is sick with no hopes of recovery. Her daughter, Mrs. Elza Speer, of Kansas, was called to see her.

Sheriff Plum is making extensive repairs on the Sinclair property he purchased on South Wayne street, greatly changing and improving it. L. D. Miser is doing the work, and it will be a nice residence when completed.

Wednesday, Thompson's Australian Railroad Circus, Museum and Menagerie will exhibit here. All kinds of shows and concerts seem to draw well in this town, and the thought arises, 'In what way is the immense amounts of money thus carried away each year, made up to us? Are the people gainers or losers, by the constant drainage?

John Frick, aged about 57 years, died Monday. The funeral was preached Tuesday, at the U. B., church, by Rev. S. P. Klotz. Mr. Frick has long been a resident of this place, and was the father of a large family, eleven children in all. He had been sick for some time. An autopsy by Drs. Chamberlain, Broughton and Carpenter, was held Tuesday morning. We are told the disease was cancer of the stomach.

BUTLER.

Orla Campbell returned, last Saturday from his extended western trip.

A. J. Mason and son are putting up a large lumber shed on their lumber yard.

A small fight occurred on East North street last Sunday, between two prominent east end citizens. No very serious results, however.

The good weather of the past week has done wonders toward gathering the hay and wheat crop. The hay is plenty and of good quality. The wheat is to the opposite.

The current talk is that the Lake Shore has purchased the Eel River and that it will soon assume control and connect its Fayette branch, and thus open up a very desirable eastern line from the southwest and west through Canada. This will perhaps make Butler one of the important division points between Buffalo and Chicago.

Jonathan Hazlett, an old and well-known citizen, and an employe of the Lake Shore road, for twenty years, met with a serious accident, last week. For years he had charge of the steam pumps and elevators, and had, upon this occasion, been across to visit Mr. Wall, who runs the Wabash pumps. On his return a freight train was going westward, and he hastily passed in front of it, and failing to notice the east-bound limited express, he was compelled to stop between the two trains moving rapidly in opposite directions, and losing his balance in some way was struck by the corner of a coach, which crushed his shoulder and otherwise seriously injuring him. Hopes are entertained for his recovery, but it is likely he will be laid of for some time.

BUTLER.
LAST WEEK.

Elias Strauss has not improved, and continues seriously ill.

W. H. Bard has nearly recovered and is up and about his home again.

Our electric lights still hang fire. We are promised lights this week.

Dallas Hollinger has opened a music store on Oak-st and is prepared to furnish music, and musical instruments to all.

Anderson Haverstock lost a valuable cow last week by lightning. Insured with J. A. Campbell, who paid him $50 for her.

J. A. Campbell, wife and daughter Sundayed in Steuben county, near Silver Lake, and attended the Fourth at Angola. They report a pleasant time.

James Myers living four miles north of town, an old and well respected citizen is dangerously ill, with but meager hopes of recovery. Later, he died last Thursday.

Joseph Robinett, living about twelve miles northeast of here lost two head of cattle by lightning last Thursday, also insured with J. A. Campbell. His loss will be settled and paid before this appears in print.

Almost a fatal accident occurred at Big Run, three miles east of Butler, one day last week. Four boys sought shelter under the bridge during a heavy rainstorm, when a large tree fell crashing upon the bridge, breaking the timbers of a forty or fifty foot span. All escaped without serious injury.

J. A. Campbell and John Lowe took in the big convention, last week.

The continuous rains rendered many squares vacant, and produced miniature lakes upon which hundreds of boys were sporting on rude rafts made from sections of inundated sidewalk. The unpaved streets were next to impassable and hundreds of houses were surrounded by water, in the suburbs.

Barnum's settled on an aqueous section of ground, and was compelled to floor the space, before opening their mammoth exhibition. Their show was sparingly attended. They tell of a perilous ride on an open street car through one of the severest rain and wind storms that they had ever experienced. They also visited the World's Fair grounds and saw many attractions.

SPENCERVILLE.

Mrs. Bowman has had a slate roof put on her house.

Scudder Hull, of Hicksville, was in town, Wednesday, of last week.

Mr. and Mrs. John Scott visited friends in Auburn, over Sunday.

O. W. Rummell has had his residence repainted, which adds to its attractiveness.

Rev. E. W. Erick and wife, of Altion, visited their sons, Beeks and Granville, several days during the past week.

Benj. Zimmerman, of Auburn, was in town Sunday evening. Benj. has an attraction that draws him this way.

George Kinzie, of St. Joe, and Miss Jenkins were married by Rev. J. S. Nelson, at the Lutheran church, Sunday morning.

CONCORD.

Jennie Hull had Baby Ralph to church last Sunday.

Henry and Dellie Baker were in Auburn, Saturday.

D. W. Draggoo and daughter were in Auburn, Saturday.

Mrs. G. W. Reed is suffering seriously from heart disease.

The social Saturday evening, netted about twenty dollars.

Ida Keller and Baby Grant are visiting friends in Garrett, this week.

Fairview young people will give an entertainment next Saturday evening.

Harry Buchanan and Frank E. Draggoo were home from Auburn, Sunday.

Some of the boys want to be more careful about handling other people's whips.

Four couples of Concord's "fairest and best", drove over to Hicksville, Sunday, as the guests of Lula Culler.

Early Sunday morning, "Charlie" came home from St. Joe, and when his sister Dellie looked towad the barn gate, there sat "Charlie" sound asleep—too near dead to order breakfast.

Last week, while Melvin Wescott and J. B. White were hunting quail, quite a sad accident occurred. It seems they had concluded to go to another woods, and Wescott had started towards White, when a flock of quails arose before him. White fired into them, several shot lodging in Wescott's chest; one penetrating the eye. He is now under the treatment of Dr. Dills, at Ft. Wayne.

The young fellows who have imagined that because of the magnanimity of their indispensable masculinity, the farmers would be compelled (?) to pay $1.50 or $2 per day and board, may be somewhat surprised, or at least chagrined, to learn that matrons and maids have doffed the genial garb of cosmopolitan reserve and drawing room sweetness, to don the ever economical and very becoming attire so common to rural exigencies in the summer season, and have gone bravely to the harvest rescue, just as the good women did in war times. Fair-faced matrons mount the noisy machines, and through their careful guidance, the golden grain is properly cared for. The croakers and store-box whittlers stand awe struck and abashed before the steady, unflinching pluck, energy and flawless fidelity of the modern country girl. Unlike loafers, she does not lose the dignity of her culture and refinement by engaging in the coarser toils of life, but emerges from the sultry harvest field begrimed with dust not unmixed with honest perspiration, to the parlor, where, after changing her appearance, she is fitted to entertain with gentility and gracefulness, in a style that excludes the presence of fault-finding loafers and complaining shady-nook bummers.

SUMMIT.

Farmers were busy making hay last week.

Miss Anna Betts went to Waterloo, Friday.

Editor Willis, of Waterloo, was on our streets, Thursday.

Edward Meek has a sister from near Angola visiting him.

Miss Effie Parrish is visiting relative in Elkhart at this writing.

Mrs Noble Cherry, of Butler, visited her daughter, Mrs. Joseph Penick, Thursday.

Daniel Kimble and wife, from east of Hudson, passed through this place, Thursday.

Mrs. G. D. Coonrod and daughter visited Mrs. Doc. Boyer, of near Hamilton Wednesday.

Emanuel Neidig, from south of Hudson, was the guest of Ed. Huffman and wife last Sunday.

Henry Snowberger and wife were the guests of Warren Boyer and wife, of near Hamilton, Sunday.

Miss Lottie Grambling, of Chicago, is at home now. She expects to remain at home this summer.

Samuel Reamsyre and Wesley Zimmerman, and Henry Lawson, with their families visited the family of Henry Myers, Sunday.

MARRIED: Milton Jones, of Hamilton, to Miss Aggie Baxter, of this place; also Mr. Sharp, of Hamilton, to Miss Nettie Grambling, of this place.

Watkins' Grove.

This is called also "Cold Springs," and is a cosy little place. July 4, a number of Auburn people spent their Fourth at this place boating and fishing. Several of the Zimmerman Mfg. Co., boys and the young people of D. S. Moody were among the number. This small pleasure ground with its delightful shade, without any pretensions, took care of 40 horses and the people who came on the above day.

Pennsylvania Militia Now Encamped at Homestead—A Lake Horror at Peoria, Ill.—Death of Cyrus W. Field—Poisoned Her Husband—Michigan Mines Closing Down.

A TRANSFORMATION.

The Military Overshadow Everything Else at Homestead.

A special from Homestead, dated the 12th inst., says: To-day is the anniversary of the battle of the Boyne, and William of Orange of this occasion is Major General Snowden. He has assumed command of affairs, and as he told the committee of the Amalgamated Association and the citizen's delegation this evening, he did not want the co-operation of anybody. A review of the events of this momentous day would show a change so radical that few who have been here since the bloody repulse of the Pinkertons can realize its full meaning. With the first tap of the Pioneer Drum Corps came the death knell of the authority of the advisory committee. Regiment after regiment marched along the dusty roads and impressed the people by their solid ranks, and suberb discipline. All day long they continued to arrive, infantry, cavalry, and artillery, until the town became fairly flooded with blue uniforms.

The Carnegie company is once more in secure possession of its works. The borough power had subrogated. The workmen's tribunal has become null and void. Persons and property are secure and none has any fear while the troops are here. The quiet and orderly reception of the militia shows that the people either welcome their coming or else are too discreet to talk derogatively of them. A few only were foolish enough to make uncomplimentary remarks. As one regiment was marching to camp a man in the crowd made a sneering reference to its members. "They are all boys," he said. "I know they are boys," said a fellow-townsman, "but one of 'em plugged a bullet into me during the coke strike, and I respect their ability to do their duty."

The sentiment of the man who was plugged was the sentiment of the multitude and that sentiment will prevail while Gen. Snowden and Sheriff McCleary are dictators of Homestead. The delegation representing the Amalgamated Association and the citizens of Homestead did not expect the set back it received from Gen. Snowden when it called on him this afternoon to tender good wishes and ask that the workmen be allowed to pass in review before the State troops.

MURDER WILL OUT.

An Ohio Couple Arrested for a Crime Committed Four Years Ago.

A murder mystery near Mount Gilead, Ohio, seems in a fair way of solution. Nearly four years ago the residence of David Sellers, a wealthy farmer, was burned to the ground. In the ruins were found the remains of Sellers and his wife. The only other persons in the family were a daughter and a young hired man.

The coroner found evidence that the two old people had been murdered before the house was fired, but the crime could not be fixed upon any one. A month later Chloe Sellers married the young man and they took up their residence on the farm. Quarrels between the young people followed and enough was learned to lead to their arrest for murder.

At a preliminary hearing before the Mayor of Mount Gilead they were bound over to the Common Pleas Court and are now in the county jail.

The arrest has caused a great sensation in that quiet country community.

A Lake Horror.

A Peora special, dated the 13th inst., says: The "Frankie Folsom," an excursion boat from Pekin, went down here in a storm to-night with all on board. At the time she had on board at least forty people and but thirty of those were rescued alive. All the rest are drowned and at this time, 1 p. m., but two of those who were drowned have been brought ashore. There is nothing positive to be learned as to the exact number of dead, but it must amount to almost, if not quite, a score of people. The boat was tipped completely over, and is now floating bottom side up in the middle of the lake. Mrs. Beebe, of Pekin, and a man by the name of Miller, who got aboard in Peoria, were the two who were found drowned. Who the others are it is impossible at this time to find out.

Death of Cyrus W. Field.

Cyrus W. Field died at Dobbs Ferry, N. Y. The statement that Mr. Field was insane before his death is pronounced incorrect on the authority of the family physician and Dr. Field. There were moments when he was delirious, as is often the case in severe sickness, but these were followed by rational intervals. The end was peaceful.

Big Strike at Detroit.

The men in the Eureka Iron and Steel works at Detroit, the largest in the west, have struck. All are members of the Pittsburgh division of the Amalgamated Association. Boyd's branch of the Pinkerton agency at Detroit are employing men to send to the works. The strikers are armed and trouble will likely follow.

Poisoned Her Husband.

At Waco, Neb., the wife of Mr. Stickler poisoned him and his brother. No cause has been assigned for the act. Arsenic was administered to them in their coffee. Both are in a precarious condition.

Champion Mine Closed Down.

Ishpeming (Mich.) special. The Champion Mine has closed down throwing several hundred men out. The Lake Superior mine here may close down soon, throwing out 1,000 men. The situation is the worst in many years in the ore regions of the Lake Superior district.

English Elections.

Returns from the elections in England indicate a Liberal victory. This will insure Gladstone's return to power.

Guilty of Embezzlement.

Ex-County Treasurer Charles H. Paul, who has been on trial in the District Court at Hastings, Neb., on a charge of embezzling $54,000 as Treasurer of Adams County, was found guilty after the jury had been out two days. He was recommended to the mercy of the court.

Straight Ticket in Arkansas.

For the first time in ten years, Arkansas Republicans have put out a straight ticket and refused to fuse with the third party. It was a big surprise to all, especially the Democrats. The ticket is headed by W. G. Whipple for Governor and James Oates for Secretary of State.

REST ON THEIR ARMS.

Late Homestead, Pa., dispatches say the situation is very like that of several thousand terriers watching for several thousand rats to appear. There is slim prospect from present indications of the "rats," or Pinkerton men, who are referred to as rodents, giving the terriers an opportunity to use their fangs again. The next enemy to combat will be the regular State militia, and the 4,000 Carnegie strikers and their 4,000 friends, who made up the resisting and victorious force, say they are ready for them, and that they will give battle to any and all opponents. The strikers now have everything their own way. A body of determined men surrounds the mill and challenge the approach of every man who ventures too close to an imaginary "death line," a hundred yards away from the mill fences. Three thousand men are distributed all over the town and so carefully are these lookouts deployed that not a soul can enter or leave the town without giving an account of himself. The prolonged and desperate battle between the Pinkerton men on the two barges and the locked-out employes ended, after a contest of fourteen hours, in the unconditional surrender of the Pinkerton forces. At five o'clock in the afternoon on the day of the assault, while bombs and lighted waste were being thrown on the barge, a Pinkerton man appeared on the deck and waved a white handkerchief. This was the signal for surrender, and Jack Clifford, a heater's helper, rushed on board and tried to keep the workmen off. He was powerless to do so, and the cheering workmen, with guns in hand, rushed on board. Then the landing of the vanquished commenced. It lasted over an hour. They came ashore singly and in parties, and as they reached the top of the bank they were pounced upon by the crowd, beaten, by clubs and rifle butts, kicked, knocked down and trampled upon. It was a horrible sight for the noncombatants. An angry mob lined the street on both sides. As the men passed by, each in charge of two deputies, the mill men and their friends kicked them and threw some of them down. The Pinkertons begged for mercy. Some of them had pistol shot wounds in their heads and three were seen who had their eyes shot out. Several were shot in the shoulders, arms, and legs, and could scarcely limp along. They were finally locked in the Opera House, and the wounded attended to.

TROOPS ORDERED OUT.

The National Guard, Eight Thousand Strong, Ordered to Homestead.

Governor Pattison has ordered out the entire national guard of Pennsylvania. The news was received at Homestead at about 11:20 o'clock Sunday night and it created intense excitement among the comparatively small number who heard it. The strikers were appalled. They hardly seemed to realize what was said to them. Each man who heard it asked in a dazed way: "Is that so?" They went to headquarters and were gathered there in a large crowd at midnight. It was announced that officers of the national guard have been in town under the guise of reporters, planning an attack, and the strikers become furious. All correspondents and other strangers were ordered out of town. Reporters were not allowed to telegraph to their papers. The lives of the correspondents were believed to be in actual danger. One reporter telegraphed his paper the following: "For God's sake handle this thing delicately as regards headlines, for I have already received warning to quit town. The tone of to-morrow's paper means everything to me. I will stay here just as long as I possibly can and wire you situation by bulletins."

RED-HANDED PREACHER.

A Georgia Minister and Two Deacons of His Church Arrested for Murder.

Atlanta, Ga., special: Officers from this city have just unravelled the mystery connected with the murder of Dr. A. N. Sloane, which occurred in McDonough, this State, several months ago. They have arrested Ben Bilvins, a negro preacher and pastor of a Methodist church in McDonough, and Henry Harrison and Jim Shafter, two of the deacons of the church, for the murder. Bilvins, according to the confession of one of the men, did the shooting, the other two being in his company. It is thought by the detectives that the murder was a conspiracy on the part of the members of the church. The prisoners will be kept in jail in this city, as they would be in danger of being lynched if returned to McDonough.

GUARDED BY MILITIA.

Florida Troops Called Out to Defend a Jail Against a Negro Mob.

Shortly before midnight Tuesday night a mob of seven hundreds negroes marched to to the Duval County, Florida, jail in squads. They were all heavily armed, and immediately took up positions about the various entrances to the prison. The negroes claimed they had received positive information that the whites intended lynching a negro confined in the jail who is charged with having murdered a man Monday. The jail officials quickly notified the Governor and troops were ordered to march to the jail, where they are now stationed. When the negroes saw the soldiers they scattered, taking up positions in groups in the vicinity of the prison.

CARNEGIE REFUSES TO TALK.

He Is Greatly Agitated Over the Events at Homestead.

A London dispatch says: A correspondent found Andrew Carnegie, who has been making a tour of Scotland, at Braemar, in Aberdeenshire. He appeared to be in excellent health, but was evidently laboring under great agitation, so much so that Mrs. Carnegie, who was present, was endeavoring to soothe him and to draw his thoughts away from the tragic affair at Homestead. Mr. Carnegie positively declined to make any statement. He has within the last day or two sent and received numerous dispatches by cable, and there is no doubt that Mr. Carnegie has been kept fully informed of events on the Monongahela.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Over 20,000 Delegates at New York to Participate in the Convention.

Thousands of delegates to the convention of the societies of Christian Endeavor have arrived in New York. Over 20,000 have already been assigned to various hotels and boarding houses. In all nearly 30,000 delegates will participate in the proceedings of the convention.

Col. King Must Hang.

The Supreme Court of Tennessee met at Jackson, Tenn., to render a decision in the celebrated H. Clay King murder case. The insanity of the defendant was held as not being proven, and the theory of self-defense was not sustained. The prisoner was then remanded to the Sheriff of Shelby County "to be kept in confinement until Aug. 12, when, between 8 a. m. and 2 p. m., he should be hanged by the neck until dead."

Escaped Through a Sewer.

Nine long-term prisoners escaped from the State prison at Boston, Mass., through the sewer in the middle of the yard, which is the receptacle for all the filth from the prison. They had to wallow through filth for nearly 1,000 feet before reaching the mouth of the sewer, which flows into the Charles River. One of the men, Felix Goulding, was recaptured.

Portland Has a Big Fire.

Sunday evening at 6 o'clock $100,000 in property stood upon the block bounded by Washington, Stark, Sixth and Seventh streets, Portland, Ore. Monday morning at 6 o'clock only smoldering ashes remained to tell the tale. About $46,000 of this amount will fall upon the insurance companies; $57,000 will come out of the owners' pockets. It has been ten years since Portland residents witnessed a fire so remarkable for the rapid spread of the flames and the intensity of the conflagration.

RAVACHOL EXECUTED.

The Paris Murderer and Anarchist Loses His Head Under the Guillotine.

Ravachol, the anarchist and murderer, was guillotined in Paris early Monday morning. When the prison van reached the scaffold Ravachol was asked if he desired to say anything. He replied that he would address the crowd, but instead of speaking he began to sing an indecent song and danced to the refrain as well as he could with his ankles strapped. The officers in charge soon tired of this burlesque and gave the signal to M. Deibler. The executioner's assistants at once seized Ravachol, whereupon the latter's demeanor suddenly changed. He dropped his assumption of indifference and struggled furiously, but was speedily overpowered and borne to the fatal block. Even while being tied down on the plank he continued his futile struggles, uttering meanwhile the foulest epithets and curses. The indecent and blasphemous tirade was cut short by the swift descent of the knife, and the head of the notorious robber, incendiary, and murderer rolled into the basket. The crowd witnessed the horrible sight with the same indifference that had characterized its conduct throughout, and it was evident that no sympathy was felt for the man who had pretended to commit crimes in the interest of the people.

THIEF PROTECTED BY LAW.

A Bookmaker's Clerk Steals $13,000 and Cannot Be Punished.

Washington special: The firm of Lynn, Hill & Heath, bookmakers, in settling their accounts last Tuesday found that there was a balance of $11,000 in bank, but upon inquiry at the bank it was ascertained that this sum had been withdrawn by Frank Barnard, the general manager of the firm. An investigation showed that the receipts from July 4 were missing, which makes the sum about $13,000. Barnard has been in the employ of the firm about seven years and the members being compelled to be absent from the city on various occasions, the money in the banks was deposited in his name. Barnard secured the services of an attorney, who informed him that as the money was made in an illegitimate business and was practically under his control, there was no law to punish him. The firm will probably take no action at law upon the matter.

WAS A BLOODY BATTLE.

Eighteen Men Killed and as Many More Wounded.

The struggle between the union miners in Cœur d'Alene and the mine owners, which was patched up about two months ago, broke out again Monday in the town of Gem, and resulted in a savage fight between union and non-union men at the Frisco and Gem mines, in which eighteen men were killed and as many more wounded, seventy non-union men taken prisoners and the Frisco mill blown up. The fight lasted several hours. The Governor has ordered out the militia. A firm in Missoula, Mont., has received an order to ship forty coffins to Wallace immediately.

A LAWYER'S MURDEROUS WORK.

Two Men Shot at Atoka, I. T., by a Drunken Attorney.

At Atoka, I. T., R. M. Moore, a lawyer, entered the United States Commissioner's Court at 9 o'clock Wednesday night and commenced shooting at Marshal Fox. Before Moore could be disarmed he had fired several times. Marshal Depew was shot once in the leg and twice in the abdomen. He will probably die. W. H. McBride was hit by two bullets and seriously wounded. Moore was arrested and locked up. It is believed that he was drunk at the time.

Fusion Carries in Kansas.

In the State Democratic Convention for the nomination of Electors, Congressmen-at-large and a full State ticket in the State House at Topeka, Kan., the vote on the resolution to indorse the fusion ticket resulted 222 for and 176 against, and the motion was declared carried amid cheering. At the election in 1890 the Republicans cast 115,025 votes, the People's party 106,972, the Democrats, 71,367, and the Prohibition party 1,230.

Burned Wires and Batteries.

At New Orleans the other night, fire occurred in the Western Union Telegraph Office, burning out the switchboard and battery-room and doing other damage, and causing an entire suspension of business for over three hours. The flames were quickly subdued, but not before the entire cable and telegraph system was burned out and rendered useless

A SCENE OF CARNAGE.

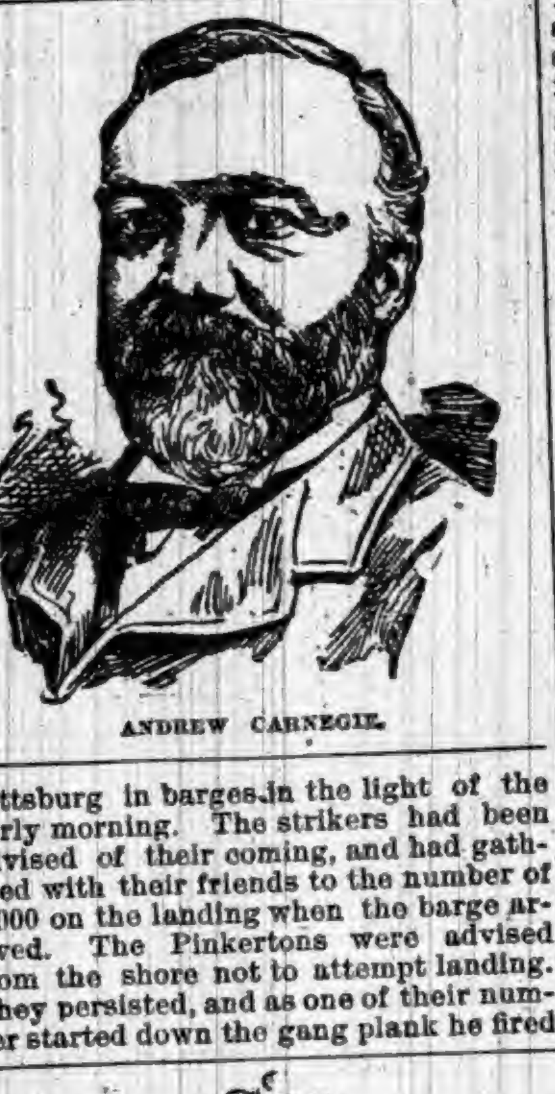
DEADLY RIOT AT HOMESTEAD, PENNSYLVANIA.

Boats Having Pinkerton Men on Board Bombarded with Cannon—Oil Poured on the Stream and Barges Set on Fire—Gov. Pattison Appealed To for Aid.

Pinkerton Men Repulsed.

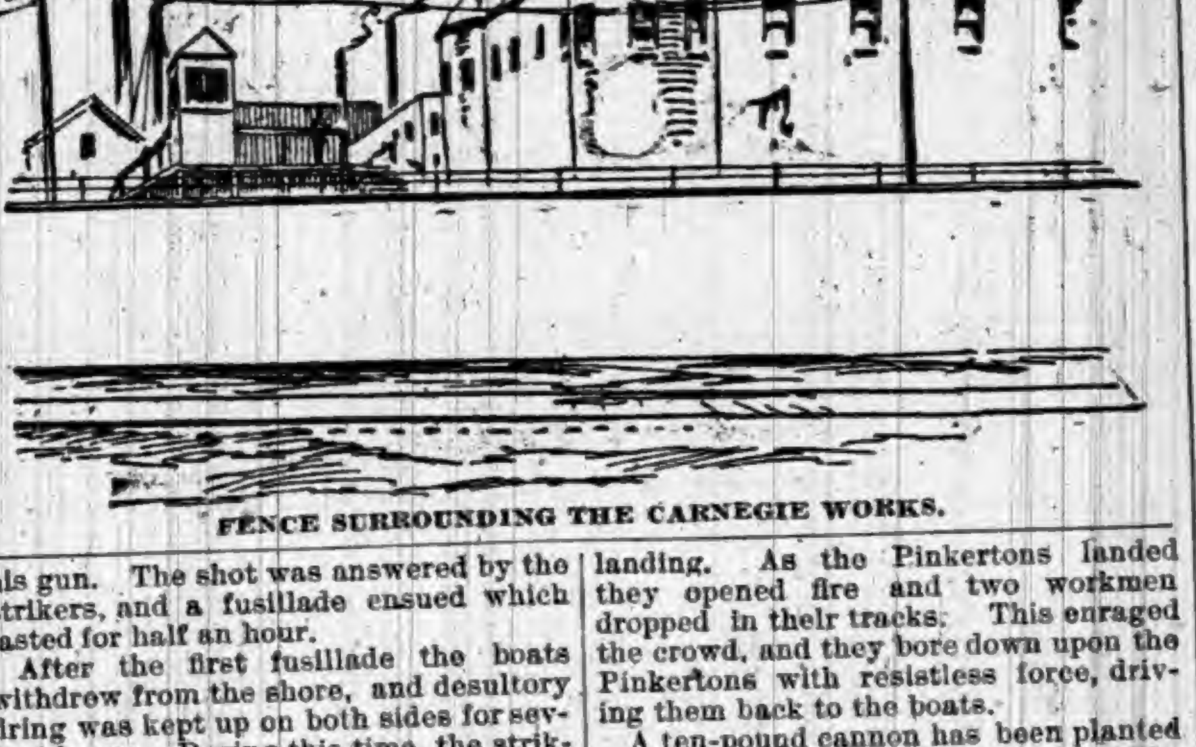
Homestead (Pa.) special:

Carnegie's managers attempted to land Pinkerton men at the Homestead works on Wednesday morning. The attempt was resisted by the locked-out men, and a battle with guns ensued, in which thirty-eight men are reported to have been killed and many more injured.



ANDREW CARNEGIE.

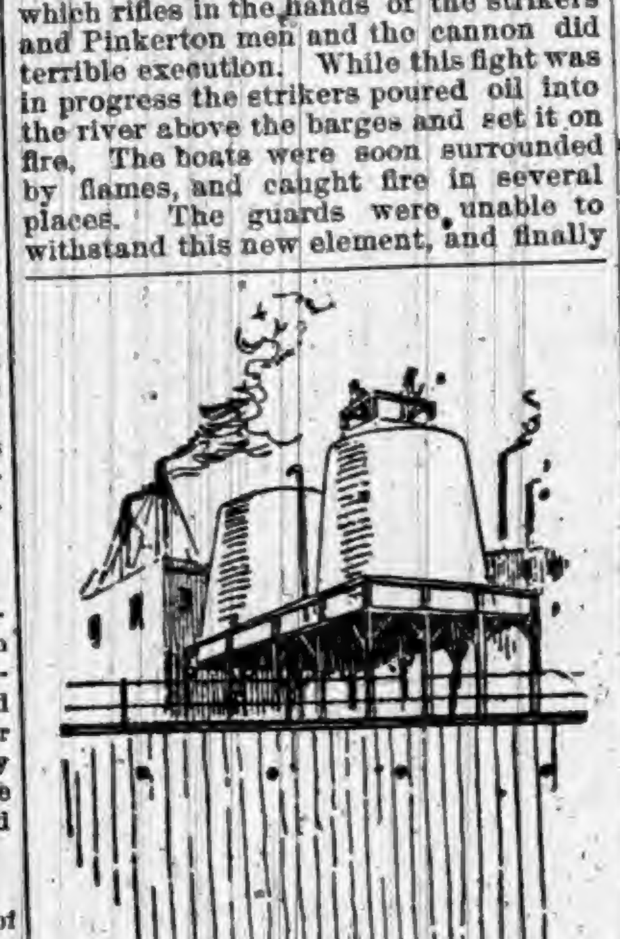
Three hundred Pinkerton men armed with Winchesters were brought from Pittsburg in barges in the light of the early morning. The strikers had been advised of their coming, and had gathered with their friends to the number of 5,000 on the landing when the barge arrived. The Pinkertons were advised from the shore not to attempt landing. They persisted, and as one of their number started down the gang plank he fired his gun. The shot was answered by the strikers, and a fusillade ensued which lasted for half an hour.



FENCE SURROUNDING THE CARNEGIE WORKS.

After the first fusillade the boats withdrew from the shore, and desultory firing was kept up on both sides for several hours. During this time the strikers secured a cannon, and, planting it on the opposite side of the river, placed the guards between two fires.

About 10 o'clock the men on the barges made another attempt to land, and a desperate battle followed, in which rifles in the hands of the strikers and Pinkerton men and the cannon did terrible execution. While this fight was in progress the strikers poured oil into the river above the barges and set it on fire. The boats were soon surrounded by flames, and caught fire in several places. The guards were unable to withstand this new element, and finally at 11 o'clock they were forced to withdraw and return to Pittsburg.



WATCHMEN ON THE WATER TANKS.

Hosts Gather for Defense.

"They come. The Pinkertons are coming!" shouted a horseman riding at lightning speed as he dashed into Homestead at 1 o'clock in the morning and alarmed the leaders of the strikers at their headquarters. The secret signals, long ago planned and arranged, were set working and from both sides of the Monongahela River answering responses came. The story of the fall of Warsaw might be written again. "To arms to protect our homes!" cried 3,000 strikers and nearly as many men, women and children. Slowly came the steamer Little Bill towing two model barges loaded with 350 Pinkerton coal and iron police, Winchester rifles and an abundance of ammunition.

The scene on shore was thrilling. The thousands of people were assembled on the bank of the river on the Homestead side. As the boat moved up the crowd followed. It arrived opposite the big Carnegie mills, passed up and then backed down toward the landing. Fearless stalwarts, used to hardship, knew that the vessels were approaching shore.

The dock was fenced in to the river's edge; the invaders must be stopped. One leader cried, "Follow me," and, rushing to a part of the fence back from the river, attacked it. In a twinkling a breach was made in "Fort Frick" and 2,500 people crowded through the property down to the river and stood waiting for the approaching boats. Before they penetrated the mist several volleys were fired, not at the vessels, but as a warning. Presently the dark hulls showed through the white veil of fog and swung into the landing. There was breathless silence. Like ants thousands of the sons of Vulcan swarmed the bank to the water's edge. Capt. Heinde, of the Pinkertons, raised a plank from the deck of the barge nearest the shore. One of his men also grasped the big board, and one end was shoved ashore. Then there was a shout as of Spartans at the Tiber. One man stepped on the plank and went ashore. He was grabbed by the crowd and was seen no more. Captain Heinde followed. He had taken one step on the plank when he fell with a shot in the leg. The men behind him turned their Winchesters on the crowd and like a whirring of bees were the volleys which passed.

Twenty-three Shot.

Five Pinkerton men fell, one fatally shot through the head. The strikers lost six killed and twelve wounded, but the boats were repulsed and withdrew into mid-stream.

It was all over so quickly that not until the boats returned to the shelter of the fog did the strikers realize the damage done their fellows. Never more scintillating fire shot from the eyes of demons. Utterly reckless and frenzied the howitzers were ordered ready, and barrels of oil were loaded on a barge, to be fired and sent against the boats.

Slowly the craft returned. The firing was renewed and returned from the boats, and again numbers of the strikers fell. Then came the grand coup of the strikers. The gun on the little yacht Edna was turned against the craft and one on shore belched its fire upon its human freight.

Blazing Oil Sent Down Stream.

Finally oil was liberated from the barrels above by the men and was fired. The fiery track was not broad enough, and with a little shifting the blazing stream passed harmlessly by. This failure to cause retreat added to the anger of the strikers, and, towing their scow into proper position, they broke in the heads of the barrels, fired the oil, and sent the craft down on the boats. The men now have complete possession of the works, and unless Gov. Pattison orders out troops they will continue in possession.

First Victory for Strikers.

The first battle occurred about 4:30, when a force of about 300 Pinkerton men attempted to land at the steel works. The strikers had been apprised of their departure from Pittsburg, and for two hours before the boats arrived between 5,000 and 6,000 persons awaited their coming on the river banks. The mills have a landing for boats within the inclosure of the fence, and at first it appeared that there would be no way to prevent the Pinkertons entering the mills. Shortly before the boats reached Homestead a horseman riding at full gallop spread the alarm that the Pinkertons were coming. As the boats steamed toward the landing it was impossible to longer restrain the crowd. With a whoop and a yell of derision an onslaught was made on the fence and 100 feet of the inclosure was torn away and 1,000 men were at the landing. As the Pinkertons landed they opened fire and two workmen dropped in their tracks. This enraged the crowd, and they bore down upon the Pinkertons with resistless force, driving them back to the boats.

A ten-pound cannon has been planted in the main entrance to the mill. The situation is now quiet, though the battle is likely to be renewed at any moment.

Gov. Pattison has been appealed to for aid, and the State militia will probably be sent to the scene at once.

The Situation.

Capital and labor are arrayed against each other at Homestead, and the outcome of the conflict will be awaited with interest by all who realize the importance of the social problems of the day. Because of the magnitude of the works where the issue is made and of the tens of thousands who will be at once affected, the press of the country is devoting special attention to the affair and its features are made clear enough to all.

The Carnegie Steel Company offers to its employes a certain scale of wages. The scale offered is refused by the managers of the Amalgamated Association, the great trade union organization to which the workers belong, and operations of the company are virtually suspended. A fence surrounds the company's property and inside this is placed a guard of those whom the company relies upon. In addition to this other barricades have been erected to resist the rioters. Meanwhile thousands of men, the workers who have rejected the scale of wages offered, have occupied the country about the mills and prevent all access to the property.

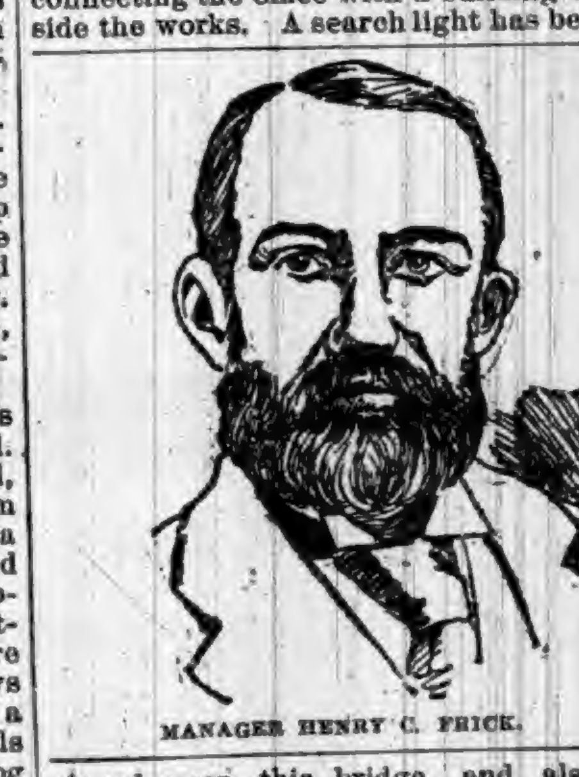
About six weeks ago, in anticipation of the coming conflict between the Carnegie interests and the workmen, a stout board fence twelve feet high was built upon a foundation of slag three feet high, completely surrounding the steel works. This fence is three miles long. On the top are strung three strands of barbed wire, so connected that a current of electricity may be sent through them from the electric plant by the simple turning of a switch in the office. Portholes four inches in diameter have been bored along this fence at the height of a man's eye. Trenches have been dug over all parts of the works to various points along the fence where hydrants are stationed. Connections have been made so that either cold or boiling hot water can be sent through these pipes to the hydrants.

An additional fence has been built about the office, and a bridge forty feet high has been strung across the tracks, connecting the office with a building inside the works. A search light has been placed upon this bridge, and also a sentry box.



MANAGER HENRY C. FRICK.

SHERIFF M'CLEARY

The entire division of the National Guard of Pennsylvania, about 8,000 men, has been ordered to Homestead to support Sheriff McCleary in suppressing the riots at that place. This action of the Governor was taken on receipt of a dispatch from Sheriff McCleary saying that he was utterly unable to raise a posse of sufficient size to cope with the strikers. On receipt of this request from the sheriff, Governor Pattison, as Commander-in-chief of the National Guard, at once issued the following order:

George R. Snowden, Major General, Commanding National Guard of Pennsylvania:

Put the division under arms and move at once, with ammunition, to the support of the Sheriff of Allegheny County, at Homestead. Maintain the peace. Protect all persons in their rights under the constitution and laws of the State. Communicate with me.

ROBERT E. PATTISON, Governor.

William H. McCleary, Sheriff of Allegheny County, Pittsburg:

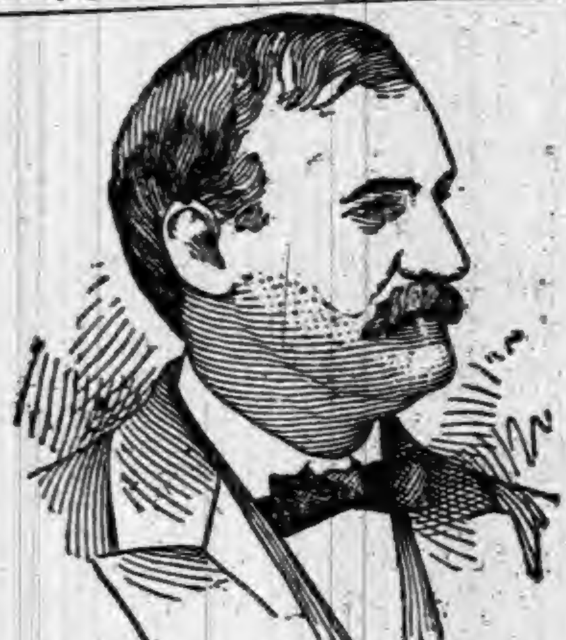
Have ordered Maj. Gen. George R. Snowden with a division of National Guard of Pennsylvania to your support at once. Put yourself in communication with him. Communicate to me further particulars.

ROBERT E. PATTISON, Governor.

Gen. Snowden, with the Adjutant General and Quartermaster General, at once proceeded to formulate the orders for the mobilization of the guard.

The News at Homestead.

The news that the Governor had ordered out the State troops created great excitement at Homestead. It was not received until 11 o'clock at night, and most of the strikers had gone home. Those who remained on the streets hastily gathered together and discussed the meaning of the new move. "Will the soldiers protect the 'black sheep' if Carnegie tries to start up with non-union men?" was the chief question. Many of the men who lingered on the streets refused to believe that the troops had been called out and said that it was like all of the wild rumors that had been circulated every night. The hot-headed strikers were at first disposed to be a little defiant, and there were occasional declarations that even the militia would be opposed, but when it was learned that the division ordered out numbered 8,000 men, the declarations promptly gave way to, "Oh, well, we have beat the Pinkertons, anyway; they did not dare to come," and thus consolation is found in the reflection that the most hated enemy of organized labor—the Pinkerton guards—had been obliged to confess defeat and give up the battle.



GOV. PATTISON.

THE LOSS AT ST. JOHN'S.

One-Half the Entire Town in Ashes and 10,000 People in Tents.

A stable at the head of Long's hill in St. John's, N. F., caught fire. The wind was blowing a strong gale from the west and rain had not fallen for three weeks. The adjoining houses rapidly caught and in a few minutes Long's hill was a sea of flames. Flying embers ignited houses hundreds of yards to the leeward, and so rapid was the work of destruction that there was no time to haul down a sufficient number of houses to break the march of the fire. The Market House, the Commercial Bank, the Athenæum Building, St. Andrew's Church, the Temple Club House, the Chamber of Commerce Building, the Telegram Building, the Anglican Cathedral (cost $500,000), the Methodist College, the Masonic Temple and St. Patrick's Hall all fell before the flames. The waterside mercantile premises were attacked, and the shipping began to get out from the piers to the middle of the harbor. The Anglo-American telegraph office became untenable, and communication with the outside world was cut off. The sea of fire which swept Water street rendered all attempts at saving property futile. A few hundred people who had the temerity to remain indoors were compelled to flee to the rear and make their escape from piers aboard vessels that were waiting, swinging to their lines ready to drop out of danger. The buildings on Water street were built of stone and brick, but those buildings fell almost as quickly as the wooden structures in other streets. Having expended its fury to the eastward, where there was nothing more to destroy, the fire began to edge northward up the slope on which the town was built. Cochrane street, leading from the Government house to the harbor, the town's handsomest thoroughfare, fell a victim, only a few dwellings at the top escaping. The Methodist church on this street escaped, but not so St. Patrick's hall.

Successful efforts were made to prevent the fire from creeping across to the Mercy convent, but the Congregational Church in this neighborhood could not be saved. Two-thirds of the business part of the town and one-half of the entire town—three-fourths of the value of the town—has been destroyed. Nearly 10,000 persons are sheltered in the Parliament house and under sheds and tents in Bannerman's park and other open places. The town is enveloped in a dense smoke from the surrounding woods, which seem to be all on fire. The Kilbridge Catholic Church, three miles out toward Bay Bulls, was totally destroyed.

CHARLES DICKENS
FREE!
The Most Valuable and Remarkable Premium Ever Offered Free with any Periodical.
A MARVEL IN BOOK-MAKING.
A Set of the Works of Charles Dickens, IN 12 LARGE VOLUMES, FREE.

There has just been published A Set of the Works of Charles Dickens, in Large and Handsome Volumes, printed from entirely new plates with new type. By a special arrangement with the publishers we are enabled to offer to our patrons this splendid set of Dickens' Works, postpaid, free. Charles Dickens was the greatest novelist who ever lived. No author before or since his time has won the fame that he achieved, and his works are even more popular to-day than during his lifetime. They abound in wit, humor, pathos, masterly delineation of character, vivid descriptions of places and incidents, thrilling and skilfully wrought plots. Each book is intensely interesting. No home should be without a set of these great and remarkable works. Not to have read them is to be far behind the age in which we live. The twelve volumes in this set contain the following world-famous works, each one of which is published complete, unchanged and absolutely unabridged:

DAVID COPPERFIELD,
MARTIN CHUZZLEWIT,
NICHOLAS NICKLEBY,
DOMBEY AND SON,
BLEAK HOUSE,
LITTLE DORRIT,
OUR MUTUAL FRIEND,
PICKWICK PAPERS,
BARNABY RUDGE AND CHRISTMAS STORIES,
OLIVER TWIST AND GREAT EXPECTATIONS,
THE OLD CURIOSITY SHOP AND THE UNCOMMERCIAL TRAVELER,
A TALE OF TWO CITIES, HARD TIMES, AND THE MYSTERY OF EDWIN DROOD.

THE PLAN.

and write, and are possessed of fair intelligence, you are fully qualified to make a grand success of what we offer you. We have lately published at great expense and labor a perfect wonder in the way of an illustrated Gift Book, suitable to all classes, an ornament to any home, and at a price that brings it within the reach of all, even those of moderate means. Heretofore only those who indulged in luxuries have felt that they could afford a book of this class, as they are sold in book stores at $5.00 and upwards. The book which we offer is not in any way inferior to those above referred to, but is far superior to hundreds of books of this nature that are sold at prices exceeding ours by an enormous per cent. It is selling with a rush wherever shown. Agents have only to show the book and mention the price, and it sells on its merits without further talking. No better Christmas, New Year's or Birthday present can be selected. It will sell, not only at holiday trade, but at all seasons of the year, for the reason that all will want it in their homes, and will have it as soon as they know the low price at which our agents can furnish them. Reader, if you need profitable employment, and a business in which you can and will take pride, as well as make money rapidly, do not fail to send for circulars containing private terms to agents and full information which will be sent FREE upon application. Old and new agents alike are making handsome salaries—yes, fortunes. Many of those who are making the best records are new at the agency business, having had no previous experience. ☞ Make a start—the field is entirely new. No such terms have been offered agents as we now offer on this wonderful book. Special qualifications not necessary, for it sells everywhere at sight. Perhaps you have at some time been unsuccessful at the agency business. If so, there is every reason why you should try this, the PRINCE of gift books, as failure is impossible if you make A START. Write us to-day, study our circulars and directions, then order an outfit and go to work with push and energy. You may make the greatest mistake of your life, if you allow this GOLDEN opportunity to pass unimproved.

CHAPTER XVII—Continued.

"Shall we go to the hotel?" queried Prescott.

"What for?" demanded his companion, sharply.

"To divide the money, of course."

"Eh?" frowned the other. "Oh, yes; certainly. We divide, as agreed. No, I am not going to venture near the hotel. I am afraid——"

"You don't know her!" gasped the impostor, with a timid glance all about him, as if fearful that some wraith would suddenly block his path. "Anyway, we will shake the dust of the village from our feet, sure and fast. I want to meet my friend, Paul Dalton's jailer, at a cabin in the woods. Come on. Soon as we reach a retired spot I'll divide the money."

Ralph Prescott's heart beat high with hope and avarice. He had failed in most of his plans, but the very material fact of money, at least, was tangibly in sight at least.

Just beyond the village, near a little grove, the imposter halted.

"It's moonlight," he said, "and we can see to count the money. You demand half, eh?"

"We agreed on half."

"All right."

The impostor peered sharply about them. He made a feint as if to take the wallet from his pocket.

"Here you are," he said, between his teeth, his breath quickening.

Ralph Prescott put forth his hands, as if to receive the money he had so coveted.

The next minute they went to his head, he uttered a wild cry and staggered back.

For, with the swiftness of lightning, the man he had made an accomplice had drawn some blunt instrument from his pocket. A heavy blow on the temple repeated stretched Prescott senseless at his feet.

"Lie there!" he hissed malevolently. "Half! ha! ha! I have plotted too deeply for the fortune to give it away. No, mine, all mine! Such sneaks as you deserve a traitor's reward!"

He knelt and drew Prescott's watch from his pocket—even his purse he took. Betrayed, robbed, deserted, Ralph Prescott would awake to find that crime had brought him its own true recompense.

Then the shallow-hearted villain darted through the thicket, carrying with him the results of evil scheming, making off with the booty, to obtain which he had ruthlessly trampled on human lives and human hearts.

CHAPTER XVIII.

AT LAST.

Lawyer Drew filed away his papers, closed up his desk and lit his pipe, ready for a comfortable smoke, after his two visitors, Ralph Prescott and the impostor, had left him.

He felt very complacent, for the assured heir of the Forsythe legacy had paid him an extra large fee to expedite matters.

A ring at the door-bell, followed by the hurried parley of some new visitor with the servant, interrupted the lawyer's pleasant reveries, however, a moment later, and almost immediately tramping footsteps down the hall preceded a rude intrusion into the room.

There stood a man, pale, unkempt, wild-eyed—so closely the prototype of the man who had just left that room with a royal fortune surrendered to his charge that the lawyer stared in amazement.

"Why, Mr. Dalton!" he ejaculated, rising abruptly and staring wonderingly at his visitor. "You have returned? something has happened?"

"Returned? No!" exclaimed the intruder, excitedly. "I have not been here before to-night."

"What! Did I not just pay you——"

"Too late!" gasped the new comer. "He has been here. I feared it. Mr. Drew, do you not know me?"

"Why! yes, I——" stammered the lawyer.

"I am Paul Dalton; not the Paul Dalton who has taken my place and represented my identity for the past week, but the Paul Dalton you knew of old—the superintendent of Maple Leaf Farm."

"Then the other?"

"Was an impostor."

Lawyer Drew's jaws fell. The awful truth suddenly dawned upon his astounded mind, and it paralyzed his faculties completely.

"Yes," went on Paul Dalton, rapidly, "you have been made the victim of a deep plot, a scheme to wrongfully secure the Forsythe fortune, while I have been a drugged, bound prisoner. To-night I overpowered and bound my jailer and hurried here, but too late to prevent the consummation of an iniquitous project between Ralph Prescott and the man who resembles me."

"Remarkably. He must be a brother, a close relative?"

"It matters not. I cannot expose him here now. Quick! how much of a start has he got of me! He must be overtaken, he must disgorge his ill-gotten booty, he must tell me what he has done with my wife—my darling, precious Ruth!"

"I can answer that question!"

A clear, confident voice uttered the words. Just about to advance toward the door, Paul Dalton recoiled as a dark-eyed, sad-faced woman crossed its threshold. The lawyer, too, regarded her in open-mouthed wonder.

"Isabel!" exclaimed the startled and bewildered Paul Dalton, "Isabel!"

"Yes, Paul, the wronged, persecuted wife of your enemy, the woman who, at last realizing all the noble sacrifice of your life, has determined, be the cost what it may, that you shall wreck your happiness no further, to enrich and shield a consummate scoundrel, my husband though he be!"

"What does this mean?" gasped the overwhelmed lawyer.

"I will tell you," rang out the woman's voice.

"Isabel, I forbid you!" interrupted Paul Dalton, sternly.

"No, I shall disobey you," returned the woman, firmly. "Too long you have suffered in silence. It means this, sir," to the interested and curious lawyer, "there are two Paul Daltons—this one, and my husband, the man who has just swindled you out of a fortune. The one good, the other bad, remarkably alike in looks, but in soul—ah! this man's noble sacrifices and life of sadness shall shine bright in the judgment day before the black-hearted cruelty and sin of that other Paul Dalton—my husband."

"They are brothers?"

"No, cousins—the children of sisters who, fondly hoping to win the favor of rich old Paul Dalton, the banker, each named a child after him. They grew up. My husband was the favorite. He was the accepted heir of his uncle, but he broke his mother's heart with his evil ways. On her death-bed she made this noble-hearted man here promise to shield his cousin from harm. Hoping he would reform, this Paul Dalton did all he could to help him retain his uncle's favor. But, why continue the story? Its end tells all. My Paul Dalton was convicted of forgery when this Paul Dalton was out West. He served his term, but, returning home, reversed the real position of affairs—charged this Paul Dalton with being the convict and he the man out West. He wedded me to a life of misery, and for my sake after old Paul Dalton had died, and my husband had squandered his fortune, this noble man mutely accepted the stain of a convict reputation, gave up all his ambitions and disappeared. That is the story. My husband was the forger—this man's soul is white as snow."

"When Paul Dalton left Ridgeton ten days ago," continued the woman, "to find my husband, and demand that he explain, at least to Ruth Elliott, the truth which he was sworn not to divulge, my husband learned of the fortune left to him. He made a prisoner of this Paul Dalton, and—the rest you know. I hurried on his track, determined that no further injury should come to this man. I warned him; he refused to heed me. Now he shall suffer the consequences of his crime. Paul Dalton, I rescued your wife to-day—there she is!"

Ruth Dalton appeared at the library door. There was a mutual cry of joy, and husband and wife were reunited in one another's arms.

"Wait here!" ordered Isabel. "I know where my husband has gone. I will find him—I will right the great wrong of the past—if I follow him half the world over!"

CHAPTER XIX.

IN THE WHITE MOONLIGHT.

Ralph Prescott lay where he had been left robbed and insensible in the white moonlight, while his assailant sped away from the spot with the fleetness of a deer, and the guilty bearing of a criminal escaping from the hands of justice.

The false Paul Dalton's breath came quick, and his manner showed that he was not yet altogether sanguine of leaving the country without some trouble.

He feared Prescott, revived and hot on his trail with all the vengeful persistency of a baffled accomplice; he dreaded the anger of his deserted wife, whose written warning and subsequent silence were more impressive than spoken words.

But he had arranged for all that. The bearded man, Newcombe, whom he had employed to act as jailer to Paul Dalton, was an old-time confederate in crime, and he had arranged to meet him at a dilapidated cabin a mile distant, that night.

"I'll see Newcombe and we'll fly the country together," he murmured, as he hurried over the moonlit landscape. "He is too old a friend to desert, but as to that fellow Prescott, he handled edged tools and got cut—he got all he deserved."

The impostor threaded a forest maze, and at last came to a dismantled hut.

He paused in the bushes to whistle several times.

There was no response to this evidently agreed-on signal, and he entered the doorless structure and proceeded to light a lantern, which, with a lot of other traps, lay on the floor in one corner of the gloomy place.

From among these he selected a suit of clothes, a false beard, a pair of blue spectacles, and other articles likely to be of use in making up a disguise.

When he had donned them they gave him an appearance scarcely according with the fugitive of a few minutes previous.

"I fancy no one will recognize me in this disguise even if pursuit is made," he chuckled confidently. "The money? Yes, that is all safe. Ah! it was worth the battle, and victory perches on my banner, and I have won the day. A royal fortune! With Newcombe to cooperate with me, we can double it at some foreign gambling place."

He gloated over the well-filled pocketbook for some time, then, securing it in an inner pocket, he paced the floor of the hut restlessly.

An hour went by, and he glanced at his watch—Ralph Prescott's—his timepiece now, he told himself, with a hilarious laugh, as he pictured the discomfiture of the plotter when he regained his senses.

"Strange that Newcombe does not come!" he murmured, impatiently, at last, extinguishing the lantern, and going to the door of the hut.

Another hour went by, and he started from the spot.

"I can't, I won't risk trouble by remaining here or going in search of Newcombe," he muttered, determinedly. "He had his cue to be here. He is not here, so I leave the country alone. With an abundance of money I can find an equally shrewd partner in Europe."

Utterly selfish and heartless to the last, the impostor hurried through the woods.

He had his plans formed to cross the country to a railroad, take an east-bound train, reach New York, and thence by steamer, Europe.

Just where a narrow ravine lined the path he was traversing, he paused suddenly.

"Stop!"

Clear as a clarion note the mandate rang forth.

"Isabel!" gasped the startled plotter.

"Yes—I have found you."

"What—what do you want?" stammered the abashed impostor.

A white, shapely hand was extended from the folds of the long, dark cloak that enveloped the woman's form.

"I want the fortune you have stolen from the man you have so cruelly wronged, Paul Dalton!" was the imperious reply.

CHAPTER XX.

CONCLUSION.

The hand of the impostor clutched the breast pocket containing the precious wallet at the peremptory words of his deserted wife.

Then, with a wild glance about him, he made a movement of precipitate flight.

The woman never moved. She simply repeated the ominous mandate.

"Stop! I warn you, Paul Dalton. You know I never tell a lie. Take one more step, and—I am prepared to prevent a new wrong. I will kill you before you shall reap the reward of your awful wickedness!"

The hand under the cloak moved significantly. The man shuddered; his hair crisped; his blood chilled. He knew she was a broken-hearted, desperate woman.

His eyes were lurid with baffled hate as he gazed at her.

"Then take it!" he hissed, as he drew forth the wallet.

She reached out her hand, but uttered a startled cry as she realized in a flash that the acquiescent words of the scoundrel were employed solely to throw her off her guard.

For he gave her a violent push back toward the edge of the yawning ravine.

The woman did not, however, lose her presence of mind.

With one hand she clutched the wallet and tore it from her husband's grasp. With the other she stayed a fatal descent into the cavernous darkness of the yawning void, three feet away.

Her would-be executioner was less fortunate. His violent movement caused him to lose his balance; his wild struggle to gain the coveted pocketbook cost him dear.

He stumbled and fell. A cry of horror rent the woman's lips as his struggling form disappeared over the edge of the cliff and was swallowed up in the black darkness of the ravine.

She listened with bated breath for some sound or cry, but none came. Then, thrilled, appalled, she sped from the spot.

Reaching the first cottage, she summoned help. An old farmer and his hired man accompanied her to the ravine. There, lying across a moss-covered rock, they found the broken body of her husband.

He was still alive, and they bore him to the village. Placed under a doctor's care, he was nursed by his wronged but faithful wife until morning.

At earliest dawn, a bedraggled, limping form stole into Ridgeton and to Maple Leaf Farm.

It was the baffled schemer, Ralph Prescott. Before noon, taking with him the entire contents of Farmer John's strong box, he sneaked out of the village.

That village never heard of him again for two years, then it was to learn that he had died in a fight in a far Western gambling saloon.

The man Newcombe, whom the real Paul Dalton had overpowered at the cabin, was brought to town by the sheriff and imprisoned. As Paul Dalton did not wish to make his own affairs public, however, he was released later, and disappeared.

But on the morrow all Ridgeton knew the story of one man's noble sacrifice and another man's vile plottings.

They knew, too, that to the last Isabel had clung to the battered wreck of humanity, who died deploring, if not repentant.

It was a week later, after the burial of her husband, that Isabel returned to Ridgeton.

"I have come back to stay with you, as you wish," said Isabel, sadly. "I know you want me, and, with my life wasted and broken, I will feel happiness to be near you. My father has forgiven me."

"You have blessed our lives by lifting the dark veil of my past," returned Paul, affectionately. "You recovered the fortune we would have lost. You shall have it with us here, as friend, adviser, sister."

"Not here," answered Isabel, softly, "but at your proper home—Maple Leaf Farm. Ruth, I have told your father all the story of your husband's nobleness, of the evil deeds of his favorite, Ralph Prescott, and he is broken-hearted over the injustice he has done. He is here to ask forgiveness and take you and your husband back to Maple Leaf Farm."

Rugged old Farmer John was a contrite, tearful man in that room a minute later.

A happy man as, with his daughter and her husband, he returned to the old home that had been so cheerless without them.

He knew the true from the false now, the poor metal from the dross, and knew, too, that his future would be bright and peaceful, assured of the love and devotion of Hearts of Gold.

Once more the golden grain is waving over the broad, fertile acres; once more Ruth's happy face beams from the homestead door, and once more, blessed by the love of Paul, the sisterly devotion of Isabel, and the tender care of old Farmer John, she is the Heiress of Maple Leaf Farm.

[THE END.]

Midnight Music.

Whoever has listened to a Boston fire-alarm on a summer night, say through the open windows of a house on Beacon Hill—first, the bells in the immediate neighborhood; then, farther and farther away, fainter and fainter strokes from the South End and North End, and at last some almost inaudible, echo-like peals from across the river in Charlestown, or even from East Boston—whoever has heard this will be ready to appreciate a story told in the New York Tribune:

When the Rev. Brooke Herford first came to Boston, several years ago, he was the guest of Rev. Edward Everett Hale over night. In the morning he came down stairs with a look of pleased surprise on his face.

"What a delightful custom you have here," he said, "of chiming the bells at midnight!"

His host and hostess looked at him in silence, wondering if he had taken leave of his senses.

"Yes," continued the guest, "I got up and leaned out of the window to listen. It was a pretty air they played, although I did not recognize it."

"This," said Dr. Hale, telling the story afterward, "was the first time I ever heard of a fire-alarm being taken for a symphony."

A LENS for seeing under water gives a distinct vision of objects twenty or thirty feet off, the loss of extended sight under water being because an entirely different focus is required. The spectacles which provide this can be made by putting two watch glasses of three-quarters of an inch diameter and an inch radius back to back, or with the concavity outward.

MANY inanimate things appear to be endowed with reason. For instance, a collar button knows when a fellow has a sore thumb, and improves the occasion to refuse to do duty.

Couldn't Scratch.

A Colorado paper tells of a picturesque yarn about a chicken fancier who was very much troubled by the propensity of hens to scratch. After many experiments he at last succeeded in crossing a breed of long-legged bramas with short-legged bantams in such a way that chickens had one long leg and one short one. When they attempted to scratch they lost their balance and fell over, which, after a few trials, was sufficient to show that scratching was impossible, and they gave it up.

GANTER'S MAGIC —CHICKEN— CHOLERA CURE!

Thousands of dollars worth of chickens are destroyed by Cholera every year. It is more fatal to them than all other diseases combined. But the discovery of a liquid remedy that positively destroys the Microbes has been made. Half of the young chickens are killed by Microbes before they are fryers. A 50-cent bottle is enough for 100 chickens. It is guaranteed. If, after using two thirds of a bottle, you are not satisfied with it as a cure for Cholera, return it to the druggist from whom you purchased it, and he will refund your money.

THE GREAT SOUTH AMERICAN

NERVINE TONIC

—AND—

Stomach AND Liver Cure

The Most Astonishing Medical Discovery of the Last One Hundred Years.

The Great South American Nervine Tonic

Which we now offer you, is the only absolutely unfailing remedy ever discovered for the cure of Indigestion, Dyspepsia, and the vast train of symptoms and horrors which are the result of disease and debility of the human stomach. No person can afford to pass by this jewel of incalculable value who is affected by disease of the stomach, because the experience and testimony of many go to prove that this is the ONE and ONLY ONE great cure in the world for this universal destroyer. There is no case of unmalignant disease of the stomach which can resist the wonderful curative powers of the South American Nervine Tonic.

HARRIET E. HALL, of Waynetown, Ind., says: "I owe my life to the Great South American Nervine. I had been in bed for five months from the effects of an exhausted stomach, Indigestion, Nervous Prostration, and a general shattered condition of my whole system. Had given up all hopes of getting well. Had tried three doctors, with no relief. The first bottle of the Nervine Tonic improved me so much that I was able to walk about, and a few bottles cured me entirely. I believe it is the best medicine in the world. I can not recommend it too highly."

MRS. ELLA A. BRATTON, of New Ross, Indiana, says: "I cannot express how much I owe to the Nervine Tonic. My system was completely shattered, appetite gone, was coughing and spitting up blood; am sure I was in the first stages of consumption, an inheritance handed down through several generations. I began taking the Nervine Tonic, and continued its use for about six months, and am entirely cured. It is the grandest remedy for nerves, stomach and lungs I have ever seen."

No remedy compares with SOUTH AMERICAN NERVINE as a cure for the Nerves. No remedy compares with South American Nervine as a wondrous cure for the Stomach. No remedy will at all compare with South American Nervine as a cure for all forms of failing health. It never fails to cure Indigestion and Dyspepsia. It never fails to cure Chorea or St. Vitus' Dance. Its powers to build up the whole system are wonderful in the extreme. It cures the old, the young, and the middle aged. It is a great friend to the aged and infirm. Do not neglect to use this precious boon; if you do, you may neglect the only remedy which will restore you to health. South American Nervine is perfectly safe, and very pleasant to the taste. Delicate ladies, do not fail to use this great cure, because it will put the bloom of freshness and beauty upon your lips and in your cheeks, and quickly drive away your disabilities and weaknesses.

Skull Crushed.

A nine-year old son of Henry Mason on the Mike Whetsel place west of town met with a painful, and very dangerous accident last Thursday. They were getting hay into the barn with a horse hay carrier and the lad was walking along behind the horse driving it back and forth for the work. An unusually heavy load was going up, and the horse pulling hard when the clip of the whippletree came off and that end flew back, striking the boy over the right eye. The skull at that point was crushed in and the orbit bone of the eye broken. Drs. Casebeer & Matheny were called, and dressed the wounds, removing a great many pieces of the bone, some quite large. At latest accounts the boy was resting well, and bids fair to recover.

The common people have always had to pay the top notch.

WILL GIVE $100 A POUND.

For American Tin. An Indiana Man Makes the Offer.

The Ft. Wayne Journal of July 1, has the following from a man who evidently knows what he is talking about:

"This morning's Gazette states that there is a "cargo of American pig-tin in New York for sale." I will give one hundred dollars a pound for Americin tin. I have just come from California and there is no tin ore there or any where else on the American continent that has yet been discovered. I have been connected with the mining industries of this country for the last thirty years and know something about the the metals and minerals of the United States. I was at Elwood, Indiana, last week where they are making a small quantity of tin for political effect. The tin ore used there and everywhere else in this country is imported from England; many thousands of dollars have been expended in prospecting for tin ore in this country but without success. There has been no tin ore discovered as yet. The iron and steel used at Elwood and elsewhere in this country that is plated with tin is manufactured here, but the tin ore imported. As regards my integrity and financial standing, I refer you to any bank at St. Louis or Chicago. I consider it wicked to deceive the people about tin being present on the soil of the United States." Yours truly,

W. E. HAINES

Don't Like Reid.

As the Sun predicted, many union printers and other members of organized labor are offering open protest to the action of typographical union No. 6 in assisting to secure and indorsing the nomination of Whitelaw Reid. The whole affair savors of a bargain, and no good can come to the printers' union as a result of it. If it is possible for a man to repeatedly and continually oppose workingmen for years, and then, on becoming an apirant for office, suddenly settle his labor troubles and gain the support of organized labor, the latter is bound become a very cheap influence in civil affairs. And then, if the alleged repentant sinner is to be placed on the same level with the man who always has been the consistent and honorable friend of organized labor, the latter is apt to find that its friends will grow gradually but surely less each years. No union man is so foolish as to believe that Whitelaw Reid is sincere in his acceptance of union principles. The facts and circumstances will not admit of such a belief. He put his newspaper in the union for one purpose and one purpose only—he hoped thereby to gain the support of the men he had abused, mistreated and held up to public condemnation for years. And some of these men—heaven forgive them—were weak enough to fall into the trap. Not so, however, the workingmen of the country. They will remember Mr. Reid for his eight years of bitter opposition to them and their principles.—Indianapolis Sun.

The New Great South American Kidney Cure.

The acknowledged superior cure and immediate relief for all derangements, painfulness and decay of the kidneys or bladder, Bright's disease, diabetes or any complaint that hurts or despoils either of these delicate organs. This new remedy has been thoroughly tested by learned physicians and found far superior to any medicine yet discovered for quickly relieving all weaknesses, aches, pains and distresses arising from disease of any part of the urinary passages. It is a great relief for the old, middle aged and children, male or female. It relieves at once retention and pain in passing water, and it is very effective in relieving prostatic troubles in the old, and for nightly incontinence of water in children, or others, caused by weakness of the bladder. It may be worth to many a hundred times its cost. This is a remedy of great value to ladies, because they are very liable to weakness and pain peculiar to their sex. Sold by Robbins & McCord, druggists, Auburn, Ind. tf

Wright Armstrong says the Auburn Rifles took all the honors that were to be had at Angola, but there was no regular prize given. All we have talked with say that our company, though the newest, was the best there.

Miss Bertha Shaffer, a compositor in the COURIER office, has been sick about two weeks at her home on south main street We hope it is nothing serious, but she will probably find it necessary to rest a short time till her health is restored.

J. W. Clark of Smithfield and A. W. Camp of Fairfield were here Monday. They say harvest was fairly begun. Mr. Clark thinks, for the county over, we will have two-thirds what we had last year of wheat, though the quality may not be as good.

Harris Provines finished his course at the business college at Ft. Wayne last Friday. He is a young man of more than ordinary intelligence and ability and we suppose is looking forward to filling some position of responsibility in business circles. We hope to see him succeed in this.

• Dear housewife are you burning that youthful complexion of yours away, over the heat of a red-hot stove? Stop that folly at once and buy a nice neat and convenient Gasolene Stove, the use of which will preserve your beauty and health, so far as a stove has to do with health and good looks. J. Beuret.

The two arc lights in Kiblinger's store are very fine ones, and his plant is running about 110 incandescent lights. Alta Moody has done the wiring chiefly, so far, and will take charge of that work fully. It is expected that when the season of long evenings comes on, and the full force of the factory is at work, it will requires 200 to 300 incandescent lights.

We had a call from M. C. Jones Thursday last, and were very glad to meet him once more, as we had not seen him for three or four years. Now for the first time we shook his hand since he ceased to be a bachelor. Of course, when they settled down to keeping house, they wanted the COURIER. They will soon be at home on the old homestead north of Waterloo.

E. Spangle returned last Thursday from Omaha, where he was a delegate to the national convention of the people's party. He was well pleased with the treatment the people of Omaha gave the convention. He says he saw a great deal of good crops through the prairie states.

Gugerli found he was entitled to 8 inches of ground on the north side of his new building, and so that much was cut off of Mrs. Little's frame building. But it gives her a new brick wall for her south boundary. Even 8 inches along a lot in the center of town, is not to be despised.

Kiblinger's lights were put at work last Thursday evening, and each evening thereafter, his extensive factory rooms, over both blocks, were ablaze with lights. They are the Edison system and it requires incandescent and arc lights to do his various factory rooms and the big hardware store.

KRUASE'S HEADACHE CAPSULES unlike many remedies are perfectly harmless, they contain no injurious substance and will stop any kind of a headache, will prevent headache caused by over indulgence in food or drink late at night. Price twenty-five cents; for sale by Davenport the Druggist.

Coroner Miser was here Saturday. He has been appointed administrator of the estate of Walter Spindler, who died so suddenly from poison, as many suppose. Mr. Miser has found some facts about the scissors grinder who was killed near the Junction recently. A photo found on the dead man, had the name "Vieling' photographer, Beaver Dam, Wis." and Mr. Miser sent the photo to him, and has an answer that the unfortunate man has a wife living there. Of the four persons in the photo, one dressed as a bride was the man's daughter. He looks for further facts from the folks there.

The "Unspeakable" of Garrett says Mr. Moody sent word to the editor of this paper that he, Moody, would come up and "kick the editor down stairs if the COURIER did not speak truthfully of what Moody stated in his speech." Of course this is a lie out of whole cloth, for the disreputable sheet can't tell the truth, no matter which of its editors is at the helm. Mr. Moody sent us no such word. It is not likely a man would send such a word till he knew at least that there would be something said—truthful or not. And even if we had said anything untruthful, we take it that Mr. Moody is sufficiently a gentleman to speak of it himself as he sees us nearly every day. The COURIER gave a full account of the main testimony at the trial. The Clipper did not dare to give it—not even Hank's own evidence, although it had the full evidence taken down. As to what the COURIER did give, there will be nothing taken back, and we have no idea that anyone but the "unspeakables" desires us to take anything back.

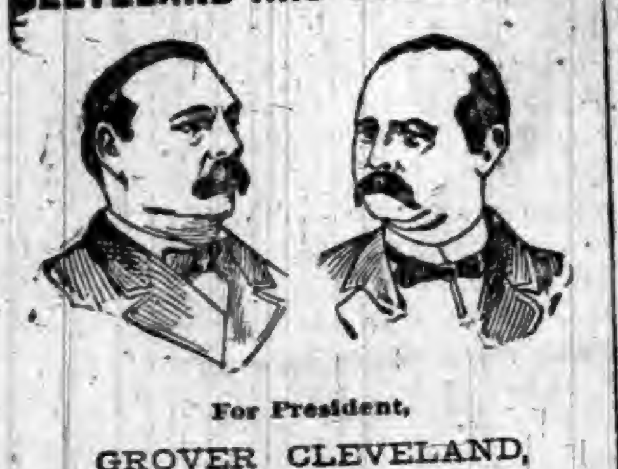
CLEVELAND AND STEVENSON.



For President,
GROVER CLEVELAND,
OF NEW YORK.
For Vice President,
ADLAI E. STEVENSON,
OF ILLINOIS.

BENJAMIN can have the electoral vote of Behring's Sea.

GRANDFATHER'S hat is slowly but surely filling with soup.

BENJAMIN HARRISON—At home, in Indianapolis, after March 4, 1892.

AS HAS been truly said "Hat and Rat" are the Republican entries for the great race of 1892.

THE Democratic platform: Reform the tariff, reform the civil service, and reform the finances.

ALAS! I thought, says "Little Ben,"
That I had tumbled into clover;
And now, to quite destroy my peace,
The people spring upon me Grover.

THE Republican party thinks that Carnegie might have selected a more opportune time than this to scale the wages of his employes.

THERE is a rumor current that the Typographical Union will declare all editorials urging the election of Whitelaw Reid double-price matter.

CHAIRMAN CLARKSON retired from the management of the National Committee at President Harrison's hint with a cheerfulness which can scarcely be adequately expressed without profanity.

ST. PAUL GLOBE: It is true the Blaniacs have swallowed the Harrison ticket with fairly good grace, but then there is that uncomfortable aphorism, to the effect that the proof of the pudding is not so much in the eating as in the digesting.

THE tariff plank has placed the party upon invincible grounds. A tariff for revenue only means something tangible. It is easily understood and eliminates those fine-drawn theories which incidental protection has heretofore interwoven.

CAUGHT concocting a deliberate and malicious falsehood, his ex-accidency John M. Hamilton has shut up like the proverbial clam. But John M. will be heard from again—if any newspaper be sufficiently stupid to print his reckless slanders.

IT is now in order for the exchange editors of Republican papers to read wearily through all the British exchanges in search of words of commendation for the Democratic ticket. When found make a note of and credit it invariably to the London Times.

MR. CLEVELAND said truthfully in 1887: "The simple and plain duty which we owe the people is to reduce taxation to the necessary expenses of an economical operation of the Government." It was true then. It is true now. The Reed Congress gave us increased taxation and increased expenditure. We ought to have reduced taxation and reduced expenditure. The only question is the means to be employed to attain that end.

THERE is no danger that the people will mistake the purposes of the Democracy in this campaign. Moreover, the American people like plain speaking; they like positive opinions; they like aggressive confidence on the part of men who hold honest beliefs. The choice to be made by the people between the weak and shuffling evasion of the Minneapolis platform and the outspoken frankness of that put forth at Chicago will be an easy one.

THE Republican Convention solemnly declared for the party that it "believes in the achievement of the manifest destiny of the republic in its broadest sense." He would be a fool who would decline to believe in a manifest destiny, because if manifest he has the evidence of his senses as to the fact of the destiny, but just what a manifest destiny is in its broadest sense Mr. Foraker may be able to explain upon the stump. The ordinary mind will incline to regard the declaration as mere jumble of words.

DETROIT FREE PRESS: The most noticeable plank in the Republican platform is the demand for a force bill, not merely because the demand will be sternly antagonized by the Democracy but because of the division in the Republican ranks on that point. The rest of the document is very largely mere "buncombe" or platitudinous utterance concerning matters not in issue. The tariff utterance was foreshadowed by McKinley's speech, and the Democracy cannot be too grateful for the sharpness with which the line is drawn on this the predominant issue of the campaign—the issue on which the Republican party was turned down in the elections of 1890.

THE Republican managers will make a mistake if they underrate the strength of the Democratic candidate. Mr. Cleveland has a wonderful hold on public confidence. He may not be popular with the "boys," but he is altogether solid with the business men and the men who place patriotism above politics.

THE platform makes tariff reform, as it should be, the great predominant issue, and says in unmistakable words that "Tariff for Revenue" shall be the battle-cry. This is Democracy; this is what the Democratic party has been contending for; this is what caused the political tidal wave which swept over the nation in the last Congressional elections, and this is justice between man and man.

"MR. CLEVELAND is so respectable," says Mr. Whitelaw Reid, "that I can hardly class him as a Democrat, but his excellence will make him very strong in certain sections of the country, and Republicans recognize in him an antagonist who will force them to exert their full power to elect their ticket." Says Mr. Whitelaw Reid's paper: "The Democracy has set up a candidate for the Presidency who can be beaten more easily than any other rival." Evidently there is a need that Mr. Reid should either spend more time in the Tribune office or talk less out of it.

INSTEAD of being an "American system," this tariff is the same system of protection which reduced the highly endowed Spaniards from the first rank among industrial nations to the lowest. It is the system which Belgium, Holland and Switzerland have abandoned, along with England, because it is a ruthless pilferer of the earnings of labor and a clog to national development. For the oldest and most complete example of protectionist jealousy and exclusiveness it is necessary to go to China. All the rest, including the McKinley tariff, are more or less faithful imitations of the Chinese original.

WHAT a cheerful speech Brother Fassett made to the Republican committee that at the command of the President was about to make a sacrifice of his friend Clarkson! They were to enter upon no holiday excursion. They were confronted by the appalling spectacle of Wisconsin and Illinois in the list of doubtful States, with Iowa by no means certain. The spectacle is not pleasing to the party, and it is rendered none the more cheerful by the fact that the men of experience have been sent to the rear in order that the President's suspicions of Blaine men may be allayed. The outlook for Republicanism is indeed gloomy.

ANOTHER bill has been reported to the House granting an American register to a foreign-built steamship. The vessel is called the China, her name suggesting that Chinese wall which has been maintained for the purpose of upbuilding an American merchant marine. The vessel is owned by a nominally British company whose stockholders are residents of the United States. There would be an outcry against this action were it not for the fact that shipbuilders in the home market secure a contract for building a new vessel for every one of foreign construction allowed to carry the American flag. The little matter of $140,000 a year granted by the billion-dollar Congress in subsidies to each of these vessels is to be paid out of the people's strong box and is, therefore, not disturbing the patriotic shipbuilders.

HARPER'S WEEKLY: The most remarkable sentence in the speech of President Harrison to the congratulating crowd after his nomination was this: "I have felt great regret that I was unable to find a suitable place for every deserving friend; but I have insisted that I did not disparage those I could not appoint to place." This is a most naive remark from a President, but it shows clearly Mr. Harrison's view of public office. It is a reward for his friends. He laments that there were not spoils enough. The qualification for public service is friendship for him. "I am sorry," he says to his party associates, "that I could not reward all of you." Patriotism, disinterested support of principles, the duty of an honest exercise of the franchise, these are considerations that do not occur to him. He is sorry only that he could not pay with a public salary those who voted for him. A simpler and more child-like profession of faith in spoils as the mainspring of the duty of a citizen, we do not recall, and the President clinches it with the deprecation that he does not disparage those to whom he has nothing to give.

IT IS A STRONG TICKET.

CLEVELAND AND STEVENSON WILL WIN.

The Democratic Is a National Party, and as It Exists To-day Is a Vigorous and Vitalizing Force—There Is Absolutely No Opposition to the Ticket.

Why Cleveland Is Strong.

Grover Cleveland is strong with the people because, as President, he was honest, fearless, conservative, and industrious. His administration was without scandal. His appointments were excellent. The country during his term thrived. There was no stagnation in business. The public revenues were not wasted in gratuities to the undeserving. He failed of re-election because of the use of enormous amounts of Republican campaign money in doubtful States. He received 100,000 more votes from the people than Harrison did. In 1890, two years after his defeat, the people, voting by districts instead of by States, indorsed him and his policy, and reduced the Republican membership in the House of Representatives to 90, and two Democratic United States Senators were gained from States which had not had Democratic representation in the Senate for a quarter of a century. The Hon. Frank P. Bond, in his address to the Democratic ratification meeting Monday night in Memphis did well to call the attention of the Southern people to the courage of Cleveland in calling to high office many of the most prominent of Southern men. He knew nothing of sectional lines, and the South felt while he sat in the presidential chair that it had in him a friend indeed. The colleges of the country have become strong allies of the Democratic party since Mr. Cleveland took the leadership in the cause of tariff reform, and nearly all the graduates these days are disciples of Grover Cleveland. He has never, in his voluminous writings, given the Democrats any cause to apologize, and yet he has always been explicit and clear. He comes into the field again as the exemplar of the highest aspirations of the Democracy, and his name is a sufficient platform of itself. The doctrine of personal liberty enunciated in the Democratic declaration of principles is in line with the strictest Jeffersonism, and this plank will be of important effect in Illinois and Wisconsin, thereby increasing the chance of Democratic success in those States next November. Massachusetts having twice elected William E. Russell Governor may well be considered a doubtful State, for Mr. Russell has stood before the people of his State, each time, as an advocate of tariff reform. It can not be maintained that the Democratic National Convention could have nominated a stronger ticket than Cleveland and Stevenson. If they can not win, nobody can. Democratic speakers will have no excuses to offer during the campaign. It will all be clear sailing. The men who pay taxes, either direct or indirect, will take kindly to Cleveland's nomination, no matter in what quarter of the country they may be found. The folly of the Republican protection-reciprocity scheme has been thoroughly exposed, the manufacturers themselves finding that it has not brought them relief from congested markets. The situation at the present time is altogether assuring to Democratic hopes, and the outlook will grow brigher every hour.—Memphis Appeal-Avalanche.

Democracy United.

The Democratic is a national party. It exists in every State in the Union as a vigorous and vitalizing force. It is the party of the people everywhere in the Union, but some particular annunciation of party doctrine is received in certain quarters more heartily than in others. The South arrays itself with the utmost heartiness against the Republican proposition, vigorously combated by Democrats, that through the means of a force bill there shall be Federal control of elections. Iowa, cursed by prohibition, which Republicans, notwithstanding the popular verdict, insist upon maintaining because a gerrymander has given them control of the General Assembly, are delighted with the Democratic proclamation of opposition to all sumptuary laws as an interference with the individual rights of the citizen. Both Illinois and Wisconsin are well pleased with the declaration of the Democratic convention that freedom of education as an essential of civil and religious liberty as well as a necessity for the development of intelligence must not be interfered with under any pretext whatever, and the interference with parental rights and rights of conscience in the education of children is a fundamental Democratic doctrine. Wisconsin is pleased that its course in repealing the Bennett law is thus approved. Illinois is pleased that it has the moral support of this national declaration in the fight it is still making against obstructive, illiberal, and bigoted Republicism for perfect freedom of conscience. The national Republican platform is silent on this point. So far as it has spoken concerning sumptuary laws it glances support of prohibition in those vague terms which its managers choose to employ.

Everywhere in the Union, but more particularly in the agricultural States, which have felt the grievousness of the burden, Cleveland's declaration that unnecessary taxation is unjust taxation is heartily accepted. The people have grown weary of abuse of the Federal power in the levy of taxes. They demand so decided a reform that unjust burdens shall be lifted from them, and they want all schemes of taxation for a government economically administered to fall evenly in their operation, so that no class shall be special objects of governmental regard.

The Democracy everywhere in the Union has determined to sink all differences of opinion and stand heartily by the Democratic cause and the Democratic candidates. Republicanism means prohibition; it means the force bill, it means interference with the liberty of conscience, it means class legislation in the tariff and elsewhere, it means, as demonstrated in the McKinley law, protection-run-mad, not the simple, well-meaning if possibly mistaken protection advocated by Henry Clay, but the crushing, cunning millionaire's protection, devised by William McKinley and upheld by Benjamin Harrison, under which trusts flourish and wealth is concentrated in the hands of relatively few residents of the Republic, its Carnegies and its Goulds.

Democracy opposed to these abominations will support the Presidential candidates named by a National Democratic Convention. Illinois, Iowa, Wisconsin, and Indiana Democracy will make earnest struggle for the success of Cleveland and Stevenson.—Chicago Times.

Tammany and Cleveland.

Republican papers are making a good deal of bluster about what Tammany is going to do for the Cleveland ticket during the campaign. According to a New York dispatch, here is what Tammany has already done:

Tammany Hall's great Cleveland and Stevenson banner was flung to the breeze yesterday morning from the Wigwam in East Fourteenth street.

The banner is an enormous affair, measuring eighty by forty feet. It is painted red, with the following inscription in white:

For President:
GROVER CLEVELAND.
For Vice President:
ADLAI E. STEVENSON.

The banner is the largest in the city. An enormous crowd witnessed the work of running up the banner, and when the names of Cleveland and Stevenson could be seen the crowd gave a great cheer.

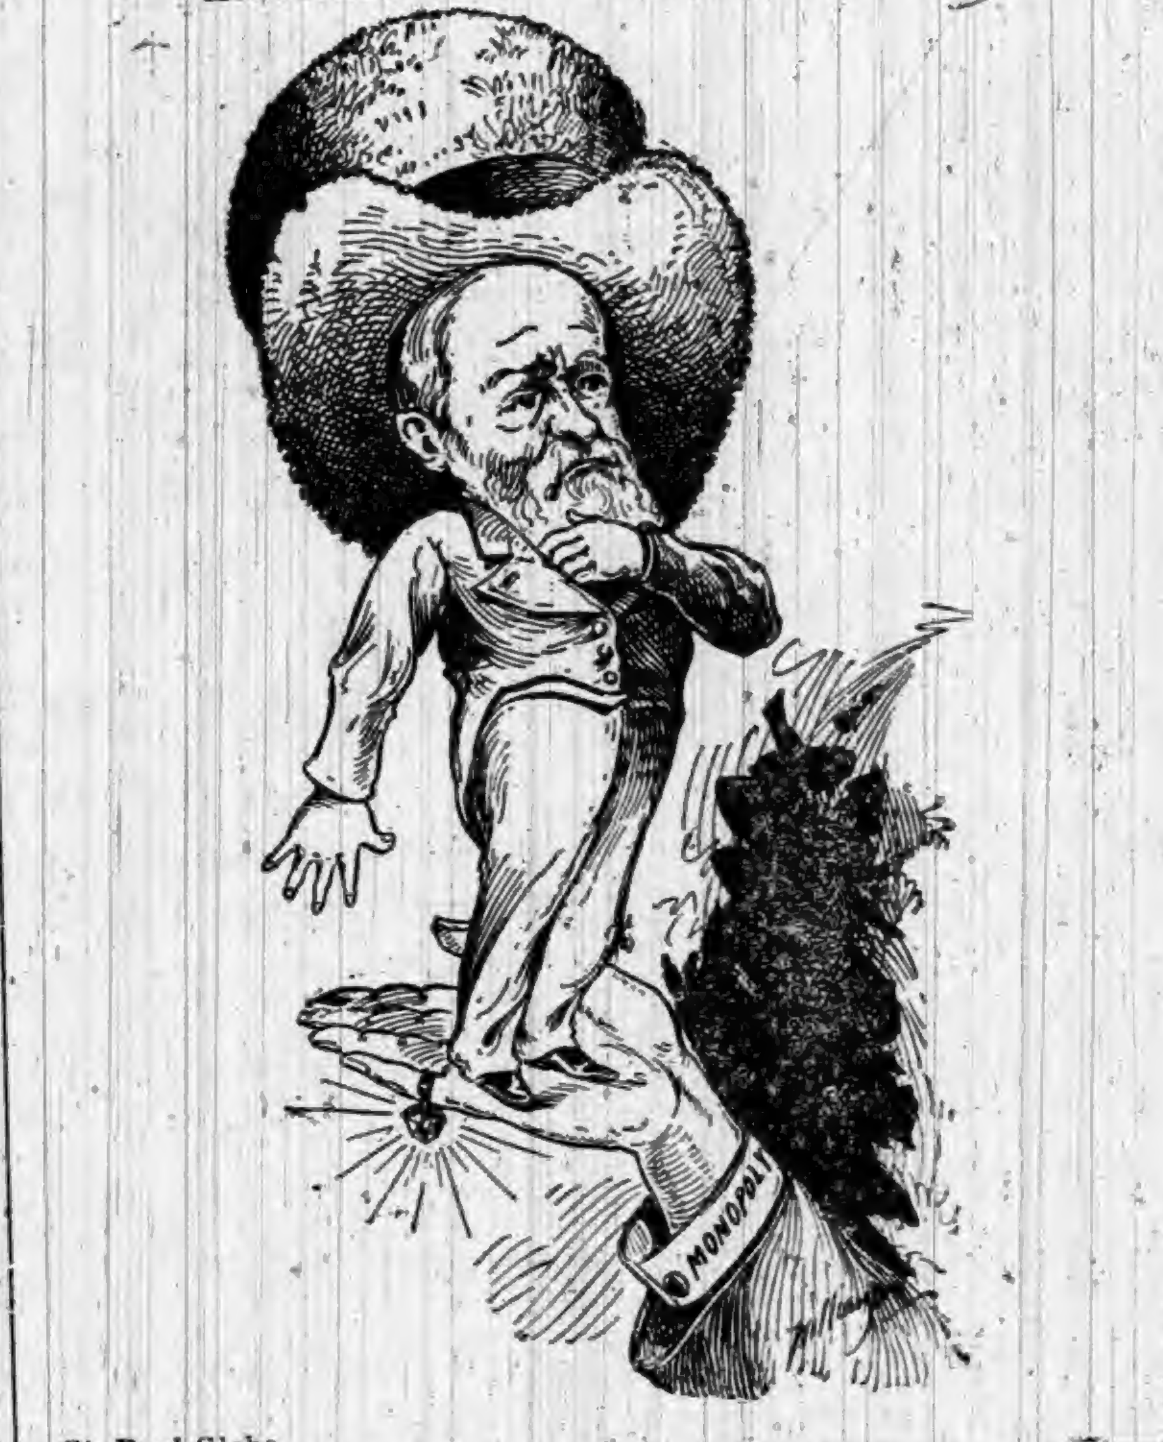
MONOPOLY'S CANDIDATE—TICKLES THE TRUSTS.



—St. Paul Globe.

Adlai E. Stevenson.

STEVENSON, of Illinois, will uphold the west as well as Cleveland, of New York, will the east.—Pittsburg Post.

BY the choice of Hon. Adlai E. Stevenson, of Illinois, as candidate for vice president, the National Democratic Convention rounded out its brilliant work wisely and well.—Boston Globe.

THE nomination of Gen. Adlai E. Stevenson, of Illinois, who was First Assistant Postmaster General under President Cleveland's administration, completes the work of the convention at Chicago. Gen. Stevenson will bring strength to the ticket, and will be of especial service in his own State, where a severe struggle will take place this fall over State and national politics.—New York Journal.

HON. ADLAI E. STEVENSON, of Illinois, was chosen on the first ballot for Vice President as the result of a neck-and neck contest with ex-Gov. Gray, of Indiana. There is not a stouter, sturdier, more uncompromising Democrat in the country than Adlai E. Stevenson. His nomination will particularly tickle the stalwarts and go far to assure the vote of his State for the Democracy.—Philadelphia Record.

THE delegated representatives of National Democracy chose well and wisely when they selected Adlai E. Stevenson as the party's Vice Presidential candidate. He is one of the cleanest, ablest, noblest Romans of them all. There is not a fleck or a flaw on his record or character, not a blemish that even the prying eyes of unscrupulous adversaries can discover. In his own State of Illinois men of all shades of political opinion point to him with pride as a pure, honorable, high-minded man and representative American citizen.—St. Paul Globe.

IN nominating for the Vice Presidency Hon. Adlai E. Stevenson of Illinois, the Chicago convention completed its work admirably. "Cleveland and Stevenson" make a very strong ticket. Excepting Mr. Cleveland himself no one is more popular in Illinois and in the West than Mr. Stevenson. Like Mr. Cleveland, he is a man and not a money-bags. He has come up from the people. He stands for American manhood and manhood rights, not for money and money privileges. He was put on the ticket because he is qualified for Vice President, and not to "reach into Wall street" or to "pay the freight."—St. Louis Republic.

Gone mad—the person with bad blood who's not taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. You are bereft of judgment and good sense if you allow your blood to get out of order, your liver sluggish—life dull, everything blue, for you may soon find out that you're in the grave—or next to it—because you did not procure the G. M. D. soon enough, and some dread disease, may be influenza or consumption, may be typhoid or malarial fever, has taken you. Consumption is Lung Scrofula. For Scrofula in its myriad forms, and for all Liver, Blood and Lung diseases, the "Discovery" is an unequaled remedy. Everybody, now and then, feels "run-down" "played-out,"—with no power to generate vitality, in fact, just too sick to be well. That's where the right kind of medicine comes in, and the "Discovery" does for a dollar what the doctor wouldn't do for less than five or ten.

We claim that nothing like it has been discovered for a blood-purifier. It's guaranteed by the makers. Your money is returned if it dosen't benefit or cure you.

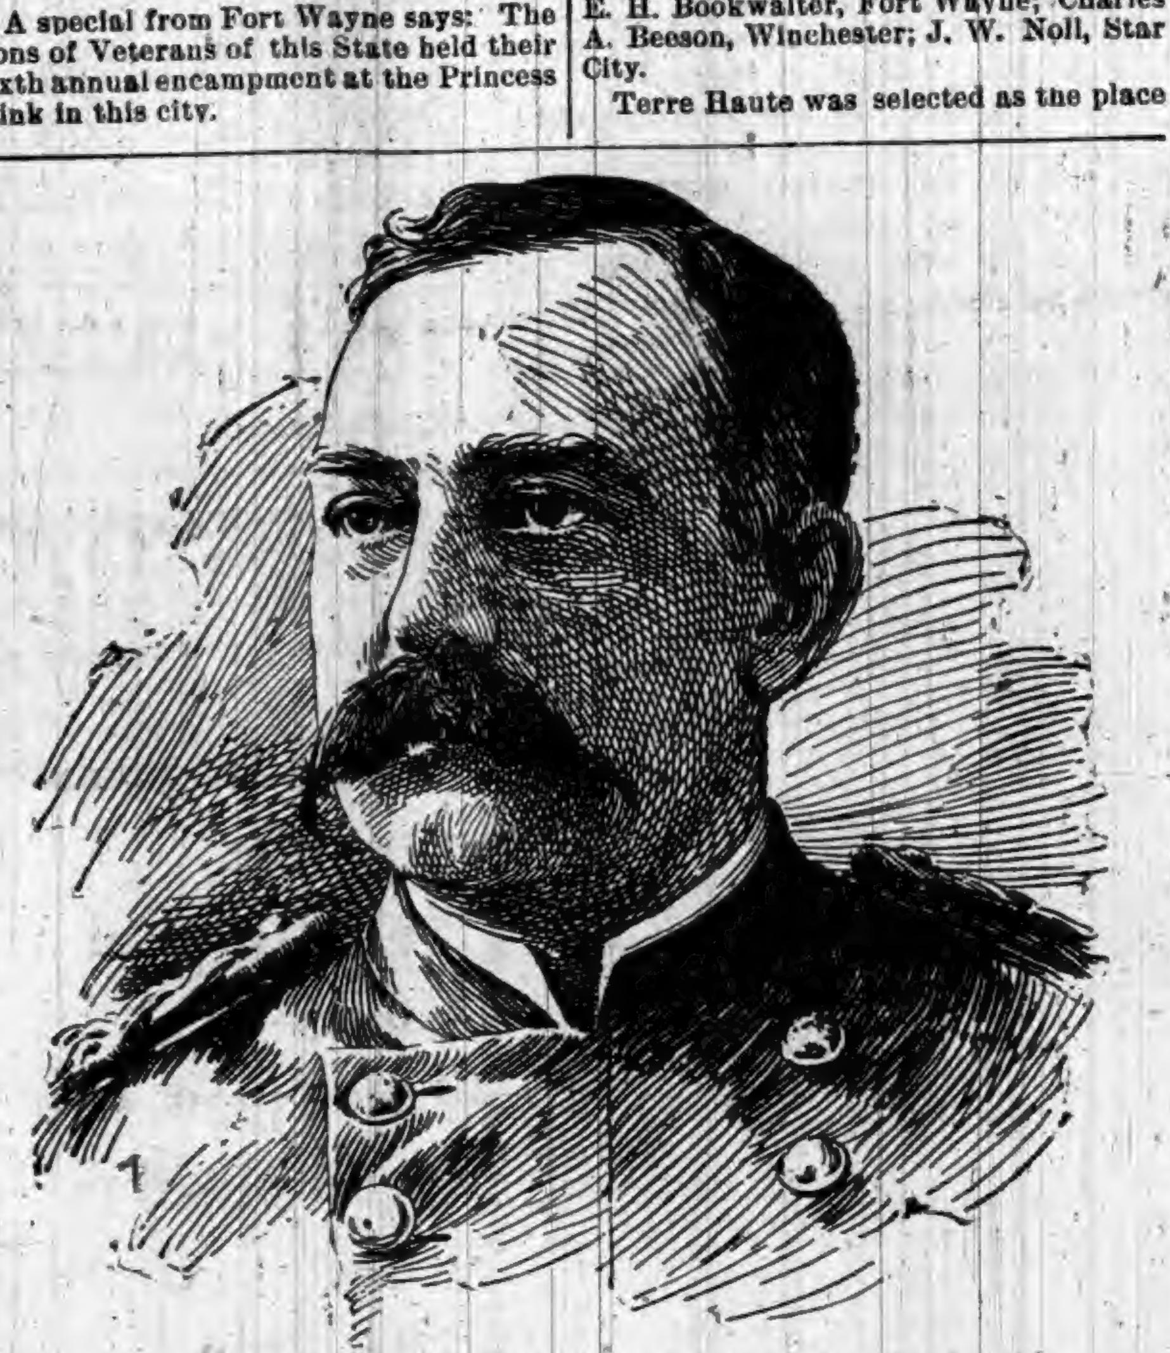
THE SONS OF VETERANS.

MEETING OF THE SIXTH ANNUAL ENCAMPMENT.

Reports of Officers Show the Order to Be in a Prosperous Condition—List of Officers Elected for the Ensuing Year—The Boys Right Royally Entertained by Fort Wayne Citizens.

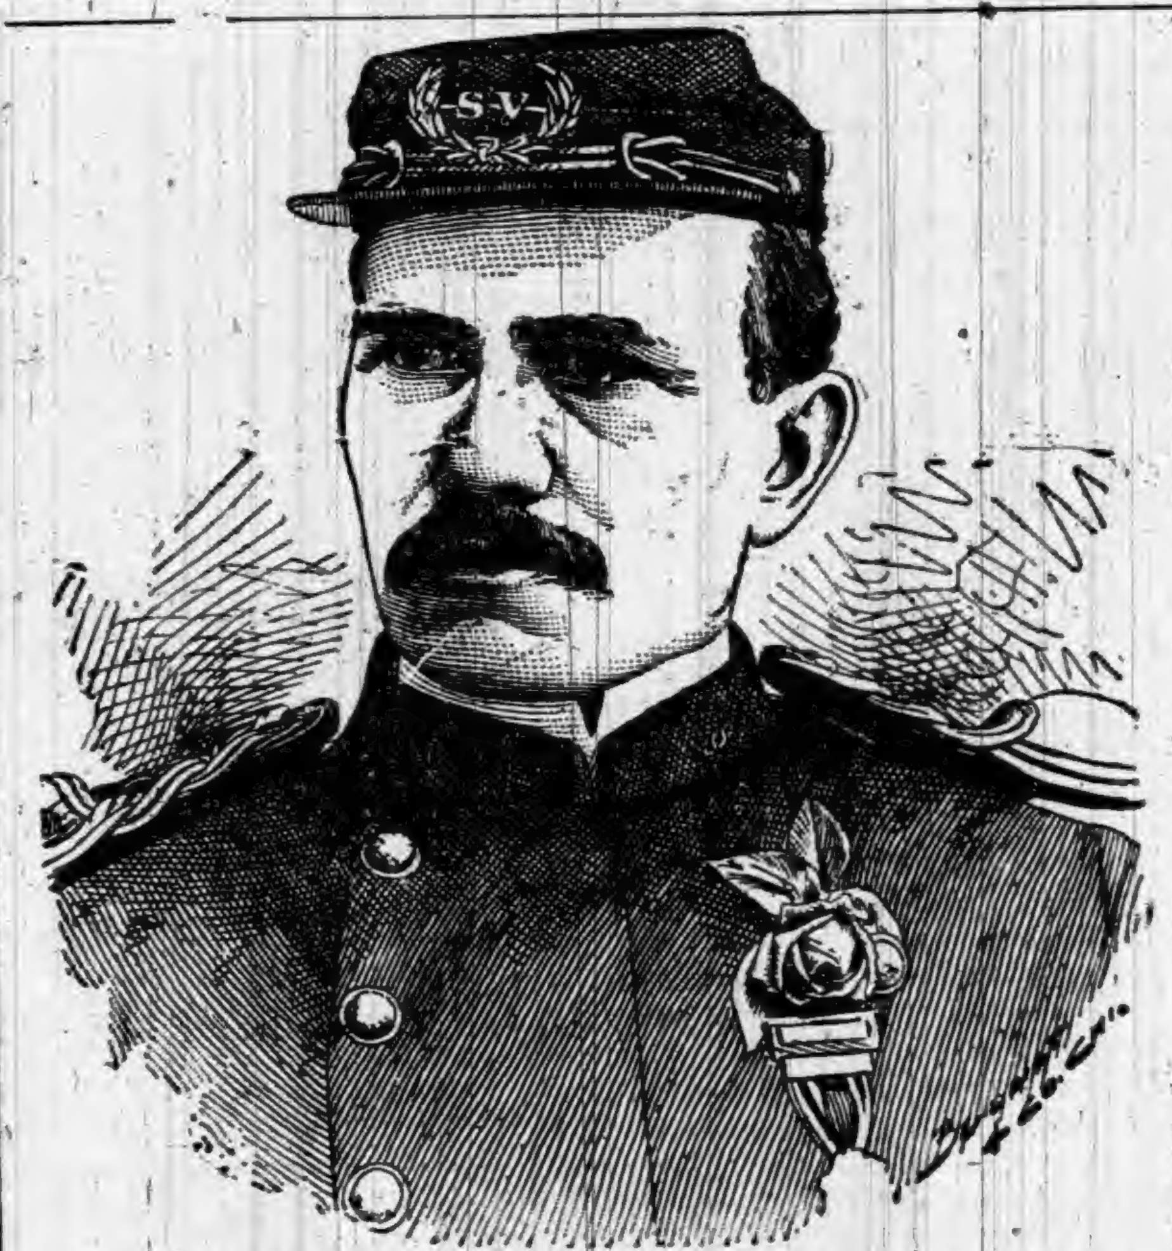
A special from Fort Wayne says: The Sons of Veterans of this State held their sixth annual encampment at the Princess Rink in this city.



JOHN W. NEWTON, Colonel Indiana Division.

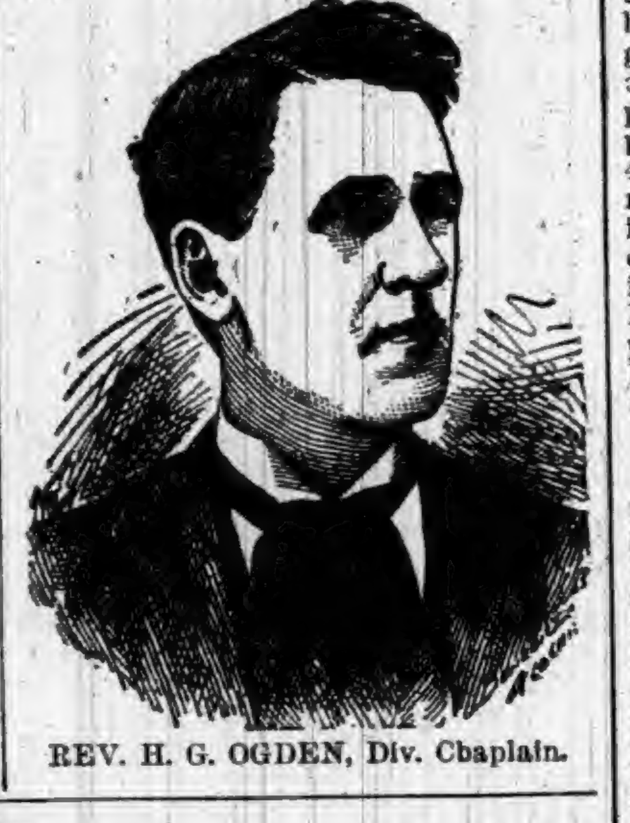
There were 1,500 delegates present. Mayor C. A. Zollinger delivered the welcome to the boys, and tendered them the freedom of the city. Governor Chase and three members of his staff arrived in this city and reviewed a magnificent parade, participated in by the Sons of Veterans, G. A. R., and almost every military and civil organization in the city.

A camp-fire was held at Princess Rink at which Governor Chase, Hon. C. F. Griffin, Colonel Newton, Colonel E. S. Walker and others delivered addresses.



E. H. BOOKWALTER, Chief Mustering Officer, Indiana Division.

Some interesting information was furnished in the annual report of the Commander, J. W. Newton, who retires after having served two terms in that capacity. This year there had been a gain of 1,570 members by muster and of 1,796 by re-enlistment, but at the same time there had been losses by death, honorable discharge, tranfers, and disbanding of camps, until the membership was now 3,484. There were sixty-five camps in the process of organization. About 6,000 pieces of mail had been forwarded from division headquarters during the year, and the commander answered about 1,500 letters personally. The retiring commander advised the Sons of Veterans to observe Decoration day and allow no grave of a soldier to be missed. He advised the Sons of Veterans to aid the G. A. R. in the enterprise of establishing an old soldiers' home. There were no court martials during the year. He advised that the ritual of the order be extended from one degree, as at present, to three degrees.



REV. H. G. OGDEN, Div. Chaplain.

The following officers were elected to serve for the ensuing year:

Commander—Newton J. McGuire of Winchester

Senior Vice Commander—Otis Green of Union City.

Junior Vice Commander—Harry Altell of Bloomington.

Delegate at Large to the National Encampment at Helena, Mont.—Past Division Chaplain Drake of Rensselaer.

Delegates to National Encampment—E. H. Bookwalter, Fort Wayne; Charles A. Beeson, Winchester; J. W. Noll, Star City.

Terre Haute was selected as the place for holding the next State Encampment

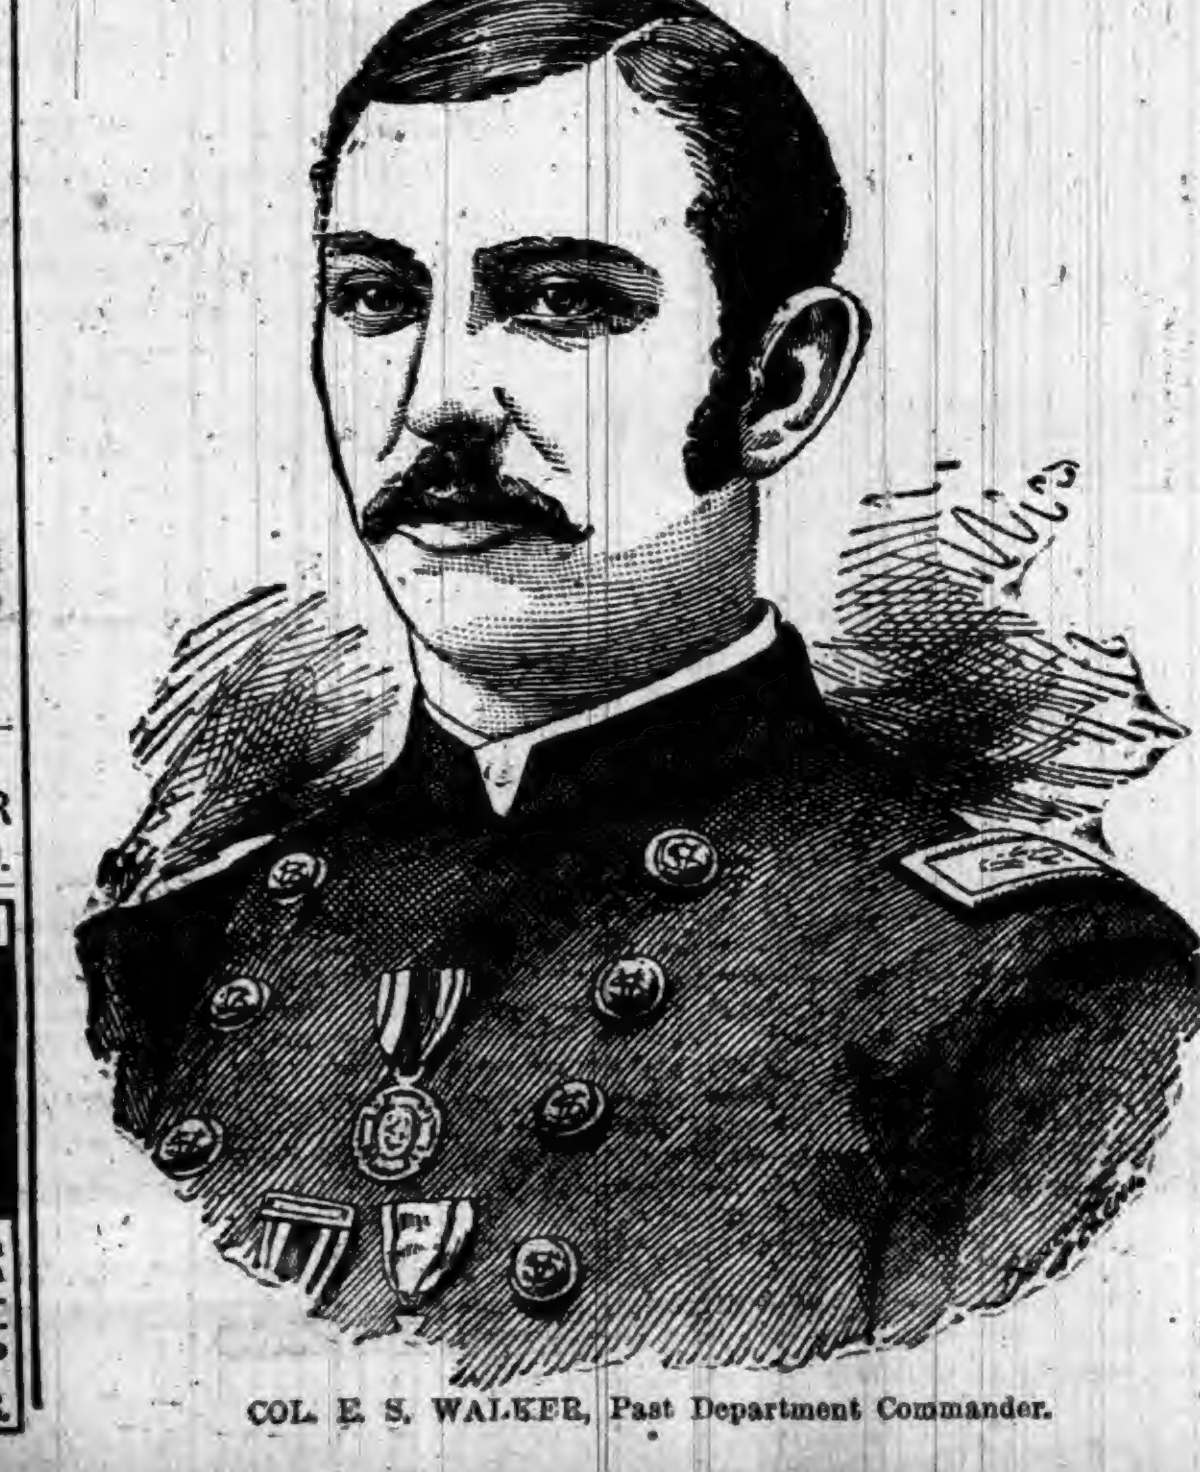
The Ladies' Aid Society of Indiana was also in session here. Miss Pearl Wills of Clayton, President of the society, delivered an address.

The following officers were elected:

President—Miss Pearl Wills of Clayton.

Vice President—Miss Georgia Duncan of Laketon.

Division Council—Mrs. Laura Rentz of Laketon, Miss Blanche Barnhart of Roann, and Miss Grace Pierce of South Bend.



COL. E. S. WALKER, Past Department Commander.

THE SENATE AND HOUSE.

WORK OF OUR NATIONAL LAWMAKERS.

Proceedings of the Senate and House of Representatives—Important Measures Discussed and Acted Upon—Gist of the Business.

The National Solons.

In the House, on the 6th, the conference report on the river and harbor bill was agreed to—161 to 83. The motion made by Mr. Tracey of New York to refer the silver bill to the Committee on Banking and Currency was lost—yeas, 43; nays 153. Mr. Williams of Massachusetts moved to reconsider. Mr. Bland moved to lay the latter motion on the table. Mr. Bland's motion was carried by a viva voce vote—146 to 32—but Mr. Tracey demanded the yeas and nays. The sundry civil appropriation bill, reported to the Senate from the Committee on Appropriations, carries items aggregating $36,797,798, an increase of $11,574,816 over the House bill. Included in this increase is an appropriation of $5,103,000 in aid of the World's Fair.

On the 7th, the House passed a resolution to investigate the Homestead conflict, and the Oates resolution regarding the investigation of the Pinkerton system was reported favorably. The Senate was addressed by Senator Palmer and others upon the Homestead riots. Items in the sundry civil bill appropriating $500,000 for the Government exhibit at the World's Fair and $320,000 for the National Commission were passed.

The select House Committee on the Columbian Exposition made a supplemental report on the 8th, advancing additional reasons in favor of the proposition for an appropriation of $5,000,000 in aid of the Exposition. The committee says the appropriation is to be made on condition that $10,000,000 has been provided and actually expended by the local corporation in preparation for the Exposition, and that the necessary excess over $15,000,000 will be raised by the citizens of Chicago. The committee is of the opinion that the Government will in all probability not only receive back into the Treasury as its proportion of the net proceeds of the Exposition the full amount of said $5,000,000, but a large sum in addition thereto. Mr. Hill made a speech (practically his first effort in the Senate) in explanation of a bill introduced by him changing the date for the dedication of the World's Fair Buildings at Chicago from the 12th to the 21st of October, and the Senate paid him the compliment of immediately passing the bill without the formality of referring it to a committee.

In the Senate on the 11th, Mr. Peffer offered a joint resolution, to lie on the table, limiting the term of office of the President of the United States to one term. Mr. Quay presented, in order that it might be printed in the Record, the statement of the employes at Homestead. The attendance in the House was larger than usual. The following measures were passed: For the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River at or near Omaha; appropriating $250,000 for the publication of the reports of the eleventh census. Mr. Herbert, Mr. Lawson, and Mr. Dolliver were appointed conferrees on the naval appropriation bill. Mr. Wheeler of Alabama submitted the conference report on the military academy appropriation bill. Mr. Holman and Mr. Robertson opposed the report on account of the large appropriations, this bill being the largest ever passed by Congress for the military academy.

CROP REPORTS.

General Outlook for Corn Is Not Good—Oats in Fair Shape.

CORN.

In Illinois the corn crop is in anything but a desirable condition. Out of the alternate counties reporting, only one gives the condition as good, all of the other correspondents giving either poor or only fair. This fair means below an average, and in some cases 25 per cent. below. The outlook in Indiana is somewhat better, nearly 45 per cent. of the correspondents reporting the prospects for the corn crop as good, the others reporting fair, with the exception of about one in seven, which report poor. The crop is behind on account of lateness in planting, but is making up for it in rapid growth. In Ohio the outlook is a little below that of Indiana, about one-fourth of the correspondents reporting the outlook for this crop as good. The others about equally report fair and poor. In Michigan the crop is making rapid growth and in about half of the counties reporting is a full average or above. Of the remainder, two-thirds report fair, and one-third poor. The corn crop in Kentucky is in very fine condition, all of the correspondents except eight reporting fair and good, most of the counties being an average or above. In Mississippi about one in five report the prospects as good, 15 per cent. report poor and the others fair. In Kansas and Nebraska the crop is reported as fair or good, with the exception of a very few counties, where the season has been particularly unfavorable. In Iowa 12 per cent. report the condition as good, 42 per cent. report fair, and 46 per cent. report poor. In Wisconsin the outlook is very unfavorable, two-thirds of the correspondents reporting it as poor, and in some cases less than half a crop. In Minnesota the crop is in from fair to poor condition, while in the Dakotas half of the correspondents report good and others fair to poor.

SPRING WHEAT.

Very little spring wheat has been sown in Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Michigan, Kentucky, Missouri and Kansas, but the little sown is generally in good condition. In Nebraska the outlook is fair. In Iowa, Wisconsin, Minnesota and the Dakotas the crop is generally reported fair and good, in a great many counties being above an average. Taking the twelve States as a whole, about 92 per cent. of the correspondents give a favorable report.

OATS.

The oat crop is in good shape over most of the country, all of the correspondents, with the exception of about 15 per cent., giving a favorable report. In Illinois 43 per cent. report the outlook as a full average or above, 25 per cent. report it fair, and the rest poor. In Indiana the crop is in fair shape, with few exceptions. In Ohio about 70 per cent. report the outlook at from fair to above average. In Michigan and Kentucky the outlook is good, but in Missouri nearly one-half report the outlook as poor to fair, the rest average or above. In Kansas one-half report the crop fair to good, others poor. Two-thirds in Nebraska report fair to good, the others poor. In Iowa one-fourth report the crop in poor condition, the others report from fair to above average. The crop in Wisconsin, Minnesota, and the Dakotas is generally an average or above.

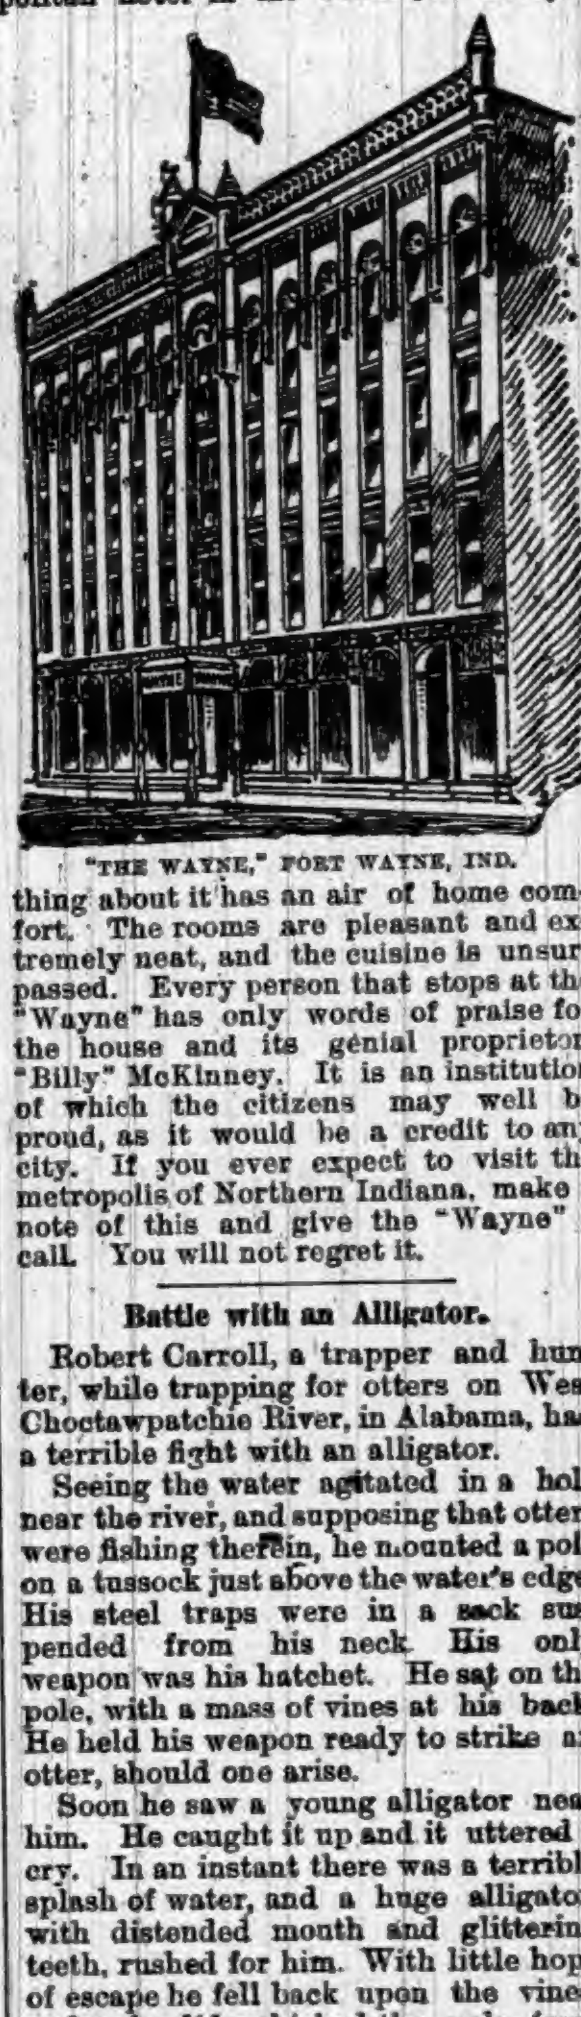
ONE OF THE FINEST.

An Institution that Makes Its Patrons Happy.

The weary traveler who happens to land in Fort Wayne, Ind., should not fail to write his name upon the register of the Wayne Hotel. That new and elegant hostelry is owned and operated by one of the best known landlords in the West, W. M. McKinney. Under his personal supervision the "Wayne" is recognized by the traveling community as equal in every respect to any metropolitan hotel in the country. Everything about it has an air of home comfort. The rooms are pleasant and extremely neat, and the cuisine is unsurpassed. Every person that stops at the "Wayne" has only words of praise for the house and its genial proprietor, "Billy" McKinney. It is an institution of which the citizens may well be proud, as it would be a credit to any city. If you ever expect to visit the metropolis of Northern Indiana, make a note of this and give the "Wayne" a call. You will not regret it.



"THE WAYNE," FORT WAYNE, IND.

Battle with an Alligator.

Robert Carroll, a trapper and hunter, while trapping for otters on West Choctawpatchie River, in Alabama, had a terrible fight with an alligator.

Seeing the water agitated in a hole near the river, and supposing that otters were fishing therein, he mounted a pole on a tussock just above the water's edge. His steel traps were in a sack suspended from his neck. His only weapon was his hatchet. He sat on the pole, with a mass of vines at his back. He held his weapon ready to strike an otter, should one arise.

Soon he saw a young alligator near him. He caught it up and it uttered a cry. In an instant there was a terrible splash of water, and a huge alligator, with distended mouth and glittering teeth, rushed for him. With little hope of escape he fell back upon the vines, and as he did so kicked the pole from under his feet.

The terrible jaws closed on the pole and crushed it. Carroll tried to interpose the traps but a vine had caught them and partly held him down. Seizing his hatchet he struck into the open mouth of his assailant. It closed on the weapon, and with great difficulty he saved the hatchet. Getting free from his traps he dealt the alligator a fatal blow on the skull as it made the next charge.

He secured the skin and such teeth as had not been destroyed in the fight. The length of the alligator was about nine and a half feet. The hole was its den. Alligators rarely attack human beings.—Abbieville, (Ala.) Correspondence N. Y. Sun.

A Drunken Herd of Swine.

Mattieu Williams says that he once witnessed a display of drunkenness among 300 pigs, which had been given a barrel of spoiled elderberry wine all at once with their swill. Their behavior was intensely human, exhibiting all the usual manifestations of jolly goodfellowship, including that advanced stage where a group were rolling over each other and grunting affectionately in tones that were distinctly expressive of swearing good fellowship all around. Their reeling and staggering and the expression of their features all indicated that alcohol had the same effect on pigs as on men; that under its influence both stood on the same zoological level.—Popular Science Monthly.

The "Novel Disease."

Medicists tell us of a "Novel Disease" which is becoming prevalent, and is destructive both to moral and the physical constitution. People who have grown up amid sensational literature get into listless, uneven habits; they find no pleasure in anything but poring over pages of trashy story books; nothing is too startling or garish for their tastes. The more incredible the plots, the more remote the incidents may be from actual life, the better they like the work of the storyteller; and feeding upon such "rot" they become actually deranged in mind; they cannot consider the real and the necessary from the point of view of clearness and propriety.—Phrenological Journal.

What Is Personal Magnetism?

Among the most powerful of unseen forces is personal magnetism. Two men address an assembly on the same topic, and in nearly the same words; one is listened to with indifference, if at all, the other stirs to every fiber of our being, and our souls thrill responsive to his lightest touch. It is not what we hear, nor is it graceful pose or elegant diction. It is nothing comprehensive or tangible, but an invisible, mysterious force, which we acknowledge and yield to, even against our convictions and reason. This strange attribute is not hereditary nor can it be acquired. Of two brothers or sisters, born of the same parents, growing up under the same influences and amid the same environments, one will possess this singular gift, another have not a vestige of it.

Heatproof Cage for a Fireboat.

The designs for a unique fireboat have just been drawn. The boat is so arranged that streams may be directed from within an iron and glass turret, in case it is necessary to go near a fire. The nozzles are turned in any desired direction by means of wheels inside of the turret, which is absolutely heatproof. By this device a fireboat could go alongside a burning vessel or a fire on the docks, and work at a great advantage over ordinary boats.—New York Ledger.

EVERY man blushes as he gets older at the recollection that at one time his idea of bravery was to do something to make the girls scream.

Swamps

Are not the only abode of malaria. You find it everywhere, even in localities where atmospheric and sanitary conditions would seem to be unfavorable to its development. The universal remedy for and preventive of the dire complaint is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Wherever the malady assumes its most virulent form, and whether it be chills and fever, bilious remittent, dumb ague or ague cake, the Bitters is most popular and constitutes the best means of protection and cure. From Maine to the Isthmus of Panama, in Guatemala, Mexico, South America and the tropics, this truly famous medicine has won "golden opinions" from all conditions and classes in more than a metaphorical sense. For debility, indigestion, constipation, rheumatism, insomnia, neuralgia, liver and kidney trouble, it is highly efficacious. Use it with persistence.

A Slow Railway Train.

Artemus Ward addressed the conductor of a train while he was punching his ticket.

"Does this railway company," said he, "allow passengers to give advice if they do so in a respectful manner?"

The conductor replied in gruff tones that he guessed they did.

"Well," Artemus went on, "it occurred to me that it would be better to detach the cow-catcher from the front of the engine and hitch it to the rear of the train. For, you see, we are not liable to overtake a cow; but what's to prevent a cow strolling after us, getting into the car and biting a passenger?"

Accident at St. Joe.

J. B. White, a well known farmer near St. Joe, accidently shot a neighbor farmer, last Wednesday morning. They were hunting. White, seeing a bird fired at it, the load of shot going through the bushes and shriking Wescott in the face and breast. He was immediately taken to town where Drs. Murphy and Bowman dressed his wounds; but one eye being injured, he was later taken to Ft. Wayne for treatment by Dr. Wheelock, the oculist. He will probable lose the sight of one eye. Of course White feels terribly over the accident.

A Little Girl's Experience in a Lighthouse.

Mr. and Mrs. Loren Trescott are keepers of Gov. Lighthouse at Sand Beach, Mich., and are blessed with a daughter, four years old. Last April she was taken down with measles, followed with a dreadful cough and turning into a fever. Doctors at home and at Detroit treated her, but in vain, she grew worse rapidly, until she was a mere handful of bones. Then she tried Dr. King's New Discovery and after the use of two and a half bottles, was completely cured. They say Dr. King's New Discovery is worth its weight in gold, yet you may get a trial bottle free at Robbins & McCord's drugstore. 6

AUBURN AND VICINITY.

As customary, a select term was opened by Mrs. Vesta M. Swarts, on April 20. Herself an experienced teacher familiar by long association as an instructor in the schools of the town, she procured competent assistants and so well pleased were the townspeople with her conduct of the school, that she was engaged by the school board as principal for the fall and winter term.

It cannot be gainsaid that under her management the school had no equal elsewhere in the county and both the quality of instruction and character of students united to justify the school board in their choice of a superintendent.

Interest in the varying fortunes of the war was intense. News from the front, "grapevine," and authentic, was eagerly caught up and repeated everywhere. On the street, in the workshop, office and store, at home and abroad, army events were subject of discussion. More than a thousand men, a full regiment in numbers were in the ranks from DeKalb county and the town of Auburn had its quota there too.

Newspapers contained little save letters from soldiers, summaries of war news, proclamations, speeches and resolutions passed at war meetings. These meetings were the vent of popular feeling; they were held in all parts of the country, attendance was full, orations were fervid and resolutions, many and lengthy were passed without dissent.

On Feb. 20, such a meeting was held in the M. E. church at Auburn. It was called to order by Rev. S. W. Widney, and Capt. L. J. Blair, of the 88th Ind., was chosen to preside. A dozen soldiers, principally of the 30th and 44th Ind., were named vice presidents.

No meeting was satisfactory without resolutions and this essential was provided for by appointment of a committee consisting of Messrs Chamberlain, Widney and McCune. The speech on this occasion was delivered by W. S. Smith, of Ft. Wayne.

Shortly following, an enthusiastic war meeting was held in Jackson township, at the swamp meeting house in the Freeman neighborhood. Alexander Provines was chairman and Hon. Henry Feagler, John Stoner and Rev. S. W. Widney were committee on resolutions. These men made their task easy by harmonious adoption of those formulated at the Auburn meeting.

Rev. Littlejohn opened the meeting with prayer and subsequently entertained the assembly in an able and eccentric speech, characteristic of this plain spoken and sensational old-time preacher.

A letter was read from a volunteer in the army to his father Rev. A. Penland, who died Dec. 16, 1891, aged 81 years, at Ft. Wayne. There was an element of the pathetic in the later vicissitude, destitution and poverty of the old man, friendless, homeless, save the asylum provided by the public.

The action of individuals and organizations was heartily seconded by substantial aid from the county, and by June 1, the expenditure through warrants on the treasury in bounties to volunteers and aid to their families was upward of $8,000.

Petitions for an equalization of bounties to include those first enlisted as well as those later, were circulated and generally signed. Despite the great number of enlistments from this county, tremendous losses from disease, exposure and casualties called for yet more men to fill the depleted ranks, and as a pause in volunteering suggested its possible limit, a law had been passed requiring an enrollment of the militia that by possible draft an equitable selection should determine the conscripted.

By June, the law was operative and the enrolling officers of DeKalb county were Joseph Johnson, Henry Willis, George R. Hoffman, Samuel George, Alpheus Wheelock, Cyrus Hawley, William R Emerson, J. B. Hubbell and W. C. Roberts.

Register of names of all liable to military duty having been perfected, the number in the first class was found to be 1382.

It is to presumed that all citizens were patriotic and loved their country, but extremists existed in large numbers. Dissatisfaction with war measures became intensified by the enrollment, and organizations were formed looking towards preventing its execution.

An incident happening in Auburn, one day strained the situation and gave ominous signs of coming trouble. Sergeant Weldon of the 30th Ind., home on a furlough, tore a butternut badge from the wearer and an angry crowd of sympathizers gathered to take the soldier into custody, but as it happily chanced, Capt. Latta, deputy provost marshal of this district, was in town, took Weldon in charge and conveyed him to Kendallville, whence he departed and rejoined his command in Tennessee.

Excitement increased when it was known that on the night of August 17, this same Captain Latta, while proceeding to arrest a deserter named Odell at the house of his mother in Fairfield township, had been shot dead by the soldier who had then fled and escaped a hot pursuit. (An article treating more fully on the killing of Latta, will appear next week. Ed.)

The consequence of an outbreak acted as a cogent restraint and measures for enlistments grew so hopeful that the date for drafting was postponed from time to time and the quota of Auburn with other localities, under calls, was finally filled by volunteers.

Happily Married.

The marriage of Mr. Frank Gilkison Sloane to Miss Laura Helen Wilcox, daughter of R. M. Wilcox, all residents of Sandusky, Ohio, was solemnized the evening of June 22, at 8 o'clock at Trinity Methodist church. The ceremony was performed by Rev. R. T. Stevenson, of Mansfield, Ohio, assisted by Rev P. F. Graham, of Sandusky. A. M. Fletcher, of Detroit, E. H. Marsh, F. L. Felch and F. L. Hubbard, of Sandusky, officiated as ushers. Mrs. J. W. Andrews, Miss Ricca Wagner, Walter Talcott and J. D. McFall sang a selection while the bridal party was proceeding to the altar, to meet the groom, and best man, T. Pitt Cooke. The bride was accompanied by her father, and Miss Jessie Wilcox, a sister of the bride was maid of honor, while E. Lee Marsh and Mary Sloane were flower children.

After the marriage, Miss Annie Lockwood, at the organ, rendered the Mendelssohn Wedding March, while the bridal party retired from the church. The church was completely filled with those who had received invitations to be present, and was beautifully decorated with palms, ferns and water lilies. An immense crowd had assembled outside, filling the walks on both sides of the street, leaving the way clear however, for the bridal party to reach their carriages. A reception, and wedding supper, of many courses, to relatives of the two families, followed at the home of the bride's father on Decatur street. The bride was handsomely attired in a costume of white brocaded satin trimmed with lace and pearls, and carried a bouquet of roses, while the maid of honor wore nile green crepe du chene with point applique lace trimmings. Mr. and Mrs. Sloane left for New York City the evening of June 23rd. They will be at home on Franklin street after August 1. Judge Rush R. Sloane and wife gave a reception at their home the evening of June 23, in honor of their son Mr. Frank G. Sloane and wife to which a large number of invitations were issued.

Among those from abroad, who attended the Sloane-Wilcox wedding were: Charles Wilcox and wife and William Wilcox, of Canandaigua, N. Y., R. Smith and wife, of Mansfield, O., Mr. Hall and wife, of Elyria, Ohio, Mrs. A. J. Gilkerson and Miss L. Morrison, of Rochester, N. Y., E. W. Sloane and wife, and Col. Eli. Lilly and wife, of Indianapolis, Ind., E. H. Nelson and wife, of Detroit, Mrs. Helen M. Finch, of Chicago, Mrs. J. U. Winslow, of Waterloo, Ind. The presents were numerous and costly, as well as in excellent taste, including everything that one could need or use. Besides, there is a fine new house, that will be ready to occupy on their return trip in August.

Two Wives Got Him into Trouble.

Sheriff Plum was called on to go down to Concord, Monday, and arrest William Mansfield and Samantha Ferrall for living together as man and wife, when he had a wife living. The wife and her sister had come up from their home in Cincinnati, on Monday morning. They had written Mr. Plum at different times, and now they wanted the parties prosecuted. The sheriff told the woman; she ought to consider well what she was doing, as it would land him behind the bars. But she insisted, and he made the arrests. Mrs. Ferrall gave bail for her appearance at the October term of court, and got out of town, as it was believed the Mansfield woman would have killed her had they met. Seeing her hated rival out of the way, Mrs. Mansfield at once insisted on having her husband freed also, as he now agreed to return home with her. Mr. Penfield was engaged, and had a writ of habeas corpus taken out, so as to bring the man at once into court. Judge Powers was sent for, and came on the morning train, Tuesday. After a good deal of conferring with the prisoner, and his wife, and the attorneys, Mr. Garwood and Mr. Penfield, it was thought best to accept the earnest promises of the parties, and let the man off easy. The judge fined him $10 and costs, and one day in jail, and gave his high tempered, red haired wife a lecture, for she had already begun to get on her high horse. She is evidently a terror, and it was plain that the little dude of a man, though pleased to get out of jail, would have preferred to stay, rather than go home with his amiable spouse. However, the judge dismissed them, Uncle Jimmy Latson said, "bless you my children," and the sheriff tore them asunder till next day. Then Mansfield walked out, a free man, and all started home. He claimed to the people at Concord, that he had been married to Mrs. Ferrall in Toledo. But he told the sheriff, that she was an old flame, to whom he had been engaged before his marriage, and that he was only visiting her. He says Mrs. Ferrall told him she had poisoned her husband, but of course, he may be lying. We believe her husband died in Elkhart county, a few years ago, and since then Mrs. Ferrall has been living near Concord, on some property she has there. Her husband, Ferrall, was a brother to Mrs. James Draggoo, of this place.

Another Editor's Opinion.

A week or two ago we gave the opinion of John B. Stoll, of the South Bend Times, on the Auburn whipping case. H. E. Wadsworth, of the Laporte Argus, one of the very ablest democratic papers in the state, had this last week:

"A blackmailing editor who habitually pounces on candidates and prominent people and scurrilously roasts them, was savagely horsewhipped by one of his victims at Garrett, a few days ago. It served him exactly right. A man who controls a few type and uses them for blackmailing purposes, or to bleed candidates for office, deserves to be punished every day in the week. If an editor is in the right he need have no fear of being horsewhipped, and if any loafer attempts such a thing the editor is a fool if he does not kill him on the spot. But there is all the difference in the world between being an honest and fearless editor and a shameless blacksmailer."

Proprietors of Dullam's Great German Remedies. GENTLEMEN—I have for the past two years been troubled with a serious and very severe Liver and Stomach difficulty. Have had advice and medicine from our very best physicians and only to be temporarily relieved. Some of my friends persuaded me to try your Great German Remedy for the Blood, Stomach and Kidneys and to my surprise after using three bottles I feel like a new man. If you desire you can use my name in print or by reference in any of the Grand Rapids, Michigan, papers, or any other papers in the state, to convince the afflicted that it is the best Blood, Liver and Kidney medicine on earth. I feel like a new man. Have lived here over 40 years.—$1 a bottle.

One of interesting questions of the coming canvass: Which is the third party, the prohibitionists or the Farmers' Alliance?

The Doctors are Guilty.

Grave mistakes are made by physicians in treating heart disease. The rate of sudden deaths is daily increasing. Hundreds become victims of the ignorance of physicians in the treatment of this disease. One in four persons has a diseased heart. Shortness of breath, palpitation and fluttering, irregular pulse, choking sensation, asthmatic breathing, pain or tenderness in side shoulder or arm, weak or hungry spells are symptoms of reliable remedy Thousands testify to its wonderful cures Books free. Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."
DR. G. C. OSGOOD,
Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."
DR. J. F. KINCHELOE,
Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."
H. A. ARCHER, M. D.,
111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

Fail to do Our Duty.

Everybody has at times failed to do their duty towards themselves. Hundreds of lady readers suffer from sick headache, nervousness, sleeplessness and female troubles. Let them follow the example of Mrs. Herbetcher, Stevens Point, Wis., who for five years suffered greatly from nervous prostration and sleeplessness, tried physicians and different medicines without success. But one bottle of Dr. Miles' Nervine caused sound sleep every night and she is feeling like a new person. Mrs. Elizabeth Wheeler, Laramie City, Wyoming, who tried all other remidies, declares that after three week's use of the Nervine for headache, nervous prostration, etc., she was entirely relieved. Sold by F. E. Davenport. Trial bottle free. 1

A Strange Freak.

The wife of our esteemed citizen, Mr. John Rowell, while suffering under a severe attack of the blues, tried to commit infanticide, but was prevented by the opportune arrival of a neighbor. Her case has been considered by the best doctors incurable, but her husband was highly pleased, after using a course of Sulphur Bitters, to find that she was entirely cured.—Kingston Herald.

THE KILLING OF LATTA.

A Bit of DeKalb County's War History

The allusion near the close of Mr. McIntosh's last weeks article "Auburn and Vicinity," to the killing of Latta in 1863 while attempting to arrest a man in Fairfield township, calls up a bit of our history, which though once painfully familiar is now nearly forgotten, and many of the present generation never heard it. For the benefit of its thousands of readers, the COURIER now, gives a full account of the unfortunate affair, and we believe it is the first time it has ever been given. Knowing that C. P. Houser of this place, formerly publisher of the Dispatch, had some personal knowledge of the matter, and that John Treesh, who was for several years marshal of the town of Auburn, had for many years owned the place where the killing took place, we interviewed both gentlemen and from them secured most of the facts that we now present.

In 1863 Mr. Houser, then quite a young man, resided with his parents in Fairfield township, a mile or so east of the Center. The war was at its heighth, and Fairfield had sent into the service, nearly every available man. Among those in the service was James Odell, son of a widow, who lived on a farm across the road south from the old Buchanan homestead, a mile north and about a mile west of Sedan. Latta, the man who was killed was at this time in the service of the government as assistant provost-marshal. Some of the duties of this office were the arrest and return into the service of any deserter who might be found in the territory under his control, as well as the apprehension of such disloyal persons, as might be considered dangerous, such as those who tried to prevent enlistment or who encouraged deserters. Latta had a bad reputation to begin with, and this made his work all the more disagreeable to the people. He had, whether justly or not, we cannot say, the reputation of being connected with the gang of horse thieves, counterfeiters, etc., that had for years infested Noble and adjoining counties. D. Z. Hoffman, of this place, who describes him as a man of great strength, remembers him well, having seen him often. He says that at the spring election that year in Butler township, he, Mr. H., was trustee, and therefore inspector, and that Latta came there and voted over the protest of the election board, as they believed he had a vote only in Swan, Noble county. Next day, Hoffman and others went over to Swan, and inspected the poll book, but not finding Latta's name, concluded he had voted but once, and let the matter drop. In August, 1863, Latta was very active in looking up deserters and such. On one of his trips into DeKalb county he formed the acquaintance of Mr. Houser, and eventually suggested it would be a nice thing to get up a party and have a dance at some convenient place. This was about a week or ten days before the murder. Mr. Houser, not knowing Latta's purpose, agreed to get up the party, and so had a number of young people invited to meet at the home of Wm. Wert, a mile east of the Center, on Monday evening, August 17. Latta came with the rest, coming over from headquarters at Kendallville, having a woman in the buggy with him. It was learned later that she was one of the tough characters that swarmed about the then military headquarters at Kendallville. It would appear that Latta's plan was to get a number of people of that neighborhood together, believing that among them would be James Odell, who he claimed was a deserter, and a man named Hewitt, who had, as he believed, been advising men to desert, or at least, not to enlist. Latta would get a bounty for the arrest of all such. Mr. Houser, however, knew nothing of the plan. Supposing the party to be what he had intended, he borrowed Latta's buggy to go after a girl near by, and on his return found the party broke up and nothing doing in that line, and Latta had Hewitt handcuffed. The people soon dispersed, and not knowing anything more was going forward, Mr. Houser and another young man went off together, helped themselves to a neighbor's melons, and at about 2 a. m. were at home in bed. Latta, however, with his prisoner and the woman, had gone down to old Mr. Buchanan's where he left the rig, prisoner and woman, and proceeded alone, across the road, to arrest Odell. He knocked at the door and Mrs. Odell got up, lighted a lamp, and without dressing asked what was wanted. Latta asked if "Jim" was at home, and was told he was. He told her to have him get up and come out as he wanted to see him. As Mrs. Odell hesitated, Latta broke open the door, forced his way into the house, and started for the stairway, as Mrs. Odell had told him her son was up stairs. Odell himself had heard the trouble, and realizing what was wanted, jumped out of bed, got his revolver and stood at the head of the stairs. He warned Latta not to come up, as he would surely kill him. But Latta's blood was up, and springing forward, he reached about the middle of the stairs when Odell fired. The aim was deadly, for the bullet struck his heart. With the exclamation "I am shot!" he stepped down on the floor, put the lamp which he had wrested from Mrs. Odell as he came in, down on the table, walked to the door, then out into the yard several steps toward the gate, then fell dead. The alarm was given and the woman in the buggy took the handcuffs off of Hewitt, and Latta's body was picked up taken across to Buchanan's, where it was cared for, and next morning taken to Kendallville. Next morning Mr. Houser says, all the neighborhood knew of it, and turned out to capture the murderer, and a company of soldiers came up from the camp at Kendallville. But Odell was never seen again. It is apparent, too, that Latta's tough character made the people care much less about punishing his slayer, than they would had he been a decent man.

The rest of this history we get largely from Mr. John Treesh. He bought the Odell farm and moved up there from his former home in Richland township. In 1866 a payment on the place came due and he had to go up into Michigan to find Mrs. Odell and make the payment. On reaching there what was his surprise to find James Odell, whom he had known personally. Odell had reached there but a few days before, from his home in Canada, where he had been living since soon after the eventful night. He gave Mr. Treesh the particulars of his part of the trouble. He said he was not really a deserter, though his leave of absence, or furlough, expired that day, August 17. It had been no intention of his to desert, but he would have joined his regiment next day, the 18th. The delay of one day was caused by the marketing of some hogs that he and his mother owned together, and which she decided she wanted him to attend to for her before he left. So he drove the hogs to Kendallville that day, sold them, and now at his home, was getting ready to join the company. Of course Latta, as a provost officer, knew the date of expiration of every man's furlough, and with the bounty in view, did not propose to let this chance escape, for technically, Odell should have reported some time the 17th. That night, when he heard the knocking at the door and heard Latta ask for him, he realized what was up, and in the excitement and desperation of the moment, resolved he would not be taken. He gives the story of the shooting as we have given it. Seeing Latta retreat, and fearing he had committed murder, he turned and jumped from the window, fourteen feet to the ground and ran for his life. He halted at a house about two miles away and borrowed a pair of boots, hat, pants, and coat, and then suddenly returned to his home, went in, got his own clothes, and such things as he could carry in his flight, and left. But he felt certain he could not escape at once to Canada, as he intended, and so went to the house of a friend not many miles away, where he found concealment for four days. This fact shows that the people were not extremely anxious to find him. Leaving his hiding place, he managed to reach the house of an acquaintance somewhere in the north part of Steuben county. Here he remained for several weeks, when his friend, happening to be at a village not many miles away, by the merest accident, overheard some one say that they had found where the murderer of Latta was in hiding, and that he was to be captured that very night. On this information Odell hastily prepared to carry out his original intention of going to Canada. It was none too soon for him either, for that very night, the officers came for him, but a few hours after he had gone. He had staid in Canada till the time Mr. Treesh met him. But we understand his present whereabouts cannot be ascertained. It is generally believed that he once made a flying visit to the old neighborhood in Fairfield, but if so, the people he visited have maintained a discreet silence.

The war, with its scenes of turbulence, its excitements, its neighborhood strifes and quarrels, its suspicions, its setting of neighbor against neighbor, and all the disagreeable features of a fratricidal war has passed and gone into history. Let us hope it may never return. Those who lived in those exciting days, whether at their homes or at the front, find its memories far from agreeable. But it is a part of our history. This tragedy is a part of DeKalb county's history, and as such, it should be correctly told. We believe we have done this, at least so far as is known or will ever be known. Next month, August 17, it will be twenty-nine years since this terrible tragedy occurred. Since then a new generation has grown up, men and women who will find it difficult to understand all that happened in the experience of their parents. But while we present the gloomy picture to their gaze, we hope it will never be to them more than a picture, and not an experience.

How's Your Liver?

Is the Oriental salutation, knowing that good health cannot exist without a healthy Liver. When the Liver is torpid the Bowels are sluggish and constipated, the food lies in the stomach undigested, poisoning the blood; frequent headache ensues; a feeling of lassitude, despondency and nervousness indicate how the whole system is deranged. Simmons Liver Regulator has been the means of restoring more people to health and happiness by giving them a healthy Liver than any agency known on earth. It acts with extraordinary power and efficacy.

NEVER BEEN DISAPPOINTED.

As a general family remedy for Dyspepsia, Torpid Liver, Constipation, etc., I hardly ever use anything else, and have never been disappointed in the effect produced; it seems to be almost a perfect cure for all diseases of the Stomach and Bowels.

AUBURN AND VICINITY.

1864.

Situated about 11 miles Fort Wayne, on the Decatur road was the once flourishing business center known in 1871 as Middleton. The Richmond railroad, instead of going through the town, turned south, and the town of Hoagland sprang into existence. Middleton, in course of time, was gradually deserted by its inhabitants and for many years, church, school-house, residences, business houses and sawmills stood silent and vacant—a dead town.

In 1890, Middleton came into the hands of a real estate agent who sold the entire town for $650, to a farmer living in the vicinity.

Something of a peril akin to this threatened Auburn for years, but two enterprises of public moment had inception and progress in 1864 which turned the scale in her favor at the most critical period.

Waterloo City in a full tide of prosperity, favored in location and market, sustained by men of push and energy, and flushed with success, had already grown to a population of about eight hundred, and was preparing to incorporate as a town, while Auburn, with but three fourths as many people, seemed to fall into the background.

"Hope springs eternal in the human breast," and it was by no means settled that Auburn was to remain an isolated inland town, for about this time came a revival, through this section, of interest in the Toledo, Logansport and Northern Indiana railroad, for the construction of which a company had been formed, as previously stated, in the winter of 1852-3.

Ten years had now gone by since the work begun so hopefully in the spring of 1854, had come to an abrupt ending in the fall, through failure of finances.

When work stopped, the earth work of grading was about half finished; several culverts and trestle bridges had been built, right of way had been almost entirely secured; grading had been done on nearly every one of the ninety-one miles of road, and the land had been thoroughly grubbed and cleaned.

Careful examination showed that there had been but slight deterioration from wasting and wear. Less than six miles had grades of between twenty-five and thirty feet per mile, the latter, the maximum, and this in only three cases and for short distances.

35 car loads daily from connecting roads, at $16	$ 560 00
16 car loads daily from Logansport at $16	256 00
60 car loads daily from local stations at $15	900 00
Miscellaneous, both directions	150 00
Passengers, both directions	600 00
Total	$2,466 00

Estimate for year including $10,000 for carrying mail, $771,858. Deducting expenses, a net profit was thought probable of $390,929. With this encouraging showing a new organization was effected for the purpose of reviving and completing this line, with J. R. Gordon, of New York, president. Among the directors was W. H. Dills, of Auburn, who, with some of the town's people, entertained Mr. Gordon and others of the officials who remained several days in the town, bringing the matter to the attention of its business men, and conferring with citizens with reference to assistance in the form of subscriptions payable only when the road was finished. The conference, though inoperative, was a benefit to the town and the time yet distant when the fruition of expectation was to be realized.

The control of municipal affairs was in democratic hands and the vote at town election continued the party in power. Ninety-six votes were cast in the ratio of 53 to 43. The trustees elected were Messrs. H. Jones, T. Gross, J. Butt, W. H. Dills and George Kuhlman. Hiram Griswold was elected marshal, T. C. Elson, assessor, Jerry Plum, clerk and Joseph Stiefel, treasurer.

The New Great South American Kidney Cure.

The acknowledged superior cure and immediate relief for all derangements, painfulness and decay of the kidneys or bladder, Bright's disease, diabetes or any complaint that hurts or despoils either of these delicate organs. This new remedy has been thoroughly tested by learned physicians and found far superior to any medicine yet discovered for quickly relieving all weaknesses, aches, pains and distresses arising from disease of any part of the urinary passages. It is a great relief for the old, middle aged and children, male or female. It relieves at once retention and pain in passing water, and it is very effective in relieving prostatic troubles in the old, and for nightly incontinence of water in children, or others, caused by weakness of the bladder. It may be worth to many a hundred times its cost. This is a remedy of great value to ladies, because they are very liable to weakness and pain peculiar to their sex. Sold by Robbins & McCord, druggists, Auburn, Ind. tf

In June more than 90,000 people, or a daily average of 3,100 visited the World's Fair grounds and paid 25 cents each to see the sights. The largest attendance on any one day was 12,033 on May 29.

MERIT WINS. We desire to say to our citizens, that for years we have been selling Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Dr. King's New Life Pills, Bucklen's Arnica Salve and Electric Bitters, and have never handled remedies that sell as well, or that have given such universal satisfaction. We do not hesitate to guarantee them every time, and we stand ready to refund the purchase price, if satisfactory results do not follow their use. These remedies have won their great popularity purely on their merits.

Troops to Remain at Homestead Until a Settlement is Reached—Raging Forest Fires in New Foundland—The Prince of Wales to Visit Canada.

THE HOMESTEAD STRIKE.

Troops to Remain Until a Settlement is Reached.

A Homestead special, dated the 20th inst., says: Major General Snowden, commanding the State troops here, has decided not to withdraw his division until some definite settlement, that will preclude further trouble of a serious character has been reached between the Carnegie Steel Company and the Amalgamated Association. He declared to-night that his whole command would remain until peace was entirely established. So successful has been the efforts of the company to place non-union men in the works that the military believe the remainder of the number required will not be allowed to go in without opposition from the union men if they are discovered in the act of entering the works.

The strikers who are accused of murder have decided to evade arrest until after the McLuckie hearing to-morrow. If the burgess is admitted to bail, they will immediately surrender and ask release under bond on the same grounds as those asked by McLuckie. They have not made any decision as to what they will do if bail is refused the burgess, but it is probable that they will ultimately place themselves in custody.

Hugh O'Donnel's friends say they expect him back in Homestead to-morrow. The fact that a warrant has been issued must be known to him by this time and his many admirers here contend that he is not the kind of man who would run away at this critical time.

Governor Pattison inspected all of the Second brigade that is stationed on this side of the river to-day. He expressed himself as very much pleased with the troops. He was the guest at supper this evening of the city troops of Philadelphia. To-morrow he will inspect the Third brigade.

Raging Forest Fires.

St. Johns (N. F.) special: Forest fires are raging in and around the country. At Bay Bulls a large fire is in progress, and another between here and Topsail is assuming serious proportions. Beyond that the whole country side along the railway line is in flames. Manuels, Hollyrood, Kelliger and Salem Cove are threatened, and five houses were burned at Whitbourne, and fourteen at Blaketown. The proximity of the fires is causing somewhat of a panic here. Bangor Manor contains nearly 1,500 persons living in huts and widespread generation of disease is feared. Doctors visit the camps frequently to direct the sanitary operations. Great difficulties are experienced in preparing for the crowds who are destitute. There is a great deficiency of house room and much suffering results from the consequent overcrowding.

Outlaws at Large.

Adair (I. T.) special: The Dalton gang of outlaws who committed the train robbery near this place the other night are still in the vicinity. Their camp, located about ten miles from town in the mountains near Grand River, was accidentally discovered by a resident of this town while searching for strayed horses. He was held up by their sentry, but when he explained his mission he was allowed to depart unmolested. It is supposed that the Daltons are delayed on account of some of their men being wounded, as they have made several trips into town for medicine. No effort is being made by the local authorities to effect their capture.

Toledo Boodle Cases.

The seven city councilmen who were recently indicted at Toledo for alleged boodling in connection with certain legislation, were taken into court the other day for arraignment. Their attorneys stated that they were not ready for trial at this time, and Judge Harmon set the case down for the first day of the September term of Court. The men will remain at liberty under bonds of $1,000 each. The City Solicitor will at once begin impeachment proceedings in the Probate Court to oust the Councilmen from their seats.

Whites Encroaching Upon the Red Men.

Washington special: Complaints have been received by the Commissioner of Indian affairs from the Indians on the Coalville Reservation in the State of Washington, that white settlers are entering in large numbers and taking possession of the lands. The Commissioner has requested the military authorities to prevent the settlers from taking up land in the reservation until the President issues his proclamation opening the territory to settlement.

Chili Foots the Bill.

Chili has paid $75,000 indemnity on account of the assault upon the crew of the Baltimore at Valparaiso last October. This is satisfactory to the United States. The money will be distributed among the families of the two sailors killed and surviving members of the crew.

Murder at Fort Wayne.

John Johnson, a street car driver, was brutally murdered in his door yard at Fort Wayne, Ind. He had just returned to his home, after telling his wife he was going in the country, and it is thought the deed was done by some one who was in the house with her.

Fatal Accident Launching a War Ship.

Chatam Special: At the launching of the war ship the cradle gave way. One man was killed outright and six seriously wounded.

To Wear a Robe.

The President has appointed George Shiras, jr., of Pennsylvania, to be Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States to succeed the late Justice Bradley.

Will Visit Canada.

It is stated that the Prince of Wales will visit Canada next year and make a trip to the Pacific coast over the Canadian Pacific Railroad, visiting the World's Fair en route.

Fatally Hurt by a Bull.

Charles Rice, a wealthy stock-raiser of Crawfordsvile, Ind., was overtaken in his pasture by a bull, who knocked him down, goring him furiously. With a knife he succeeded in partially defending himself till aid arrived, and the animal was driven off with a knife sticking in his throat. Rice's injuries are pronounced fatal.

Robbed the Mails.

Postoffice Inspector Dice has arrested Postmaster William G. Higginsbottham, of Huntsville, Mo., on the charge of robbing the mails. The Postmaster was caught by means of decoy letters. The amount of money secured is said to be small.

BIG GOLD FIND IN COLORADO.

There Are Millions in the Gulches of Park County.

Recent gold discoveries in Park County, the oldest mining county in Colorado, are destined to surpass all previous finds. The source of the placer gold produced in Tarryall Gulch, the leading gold-producing district of Park County, which has since 1856, when it was first discovered, been a mystery, has been located in the veins of the Silverheal's Mountain at the head of the gulch. A new camp of over 1,000 people has been established there within the past thirty days. The surrounding hills are black with prospectors. All the iron-stained prophyry found in these mountains is rich in gold, while the gravel is also rich. "There is $25,000,000 in coarse gold in the gulches around Tarryall," said W. F. Kendrick, one of Colorado's most prominent mining men, who has just returned to Denver from the new discoveries. "The gravel is twenty feet in depth, and is worth from 25 to 70 cents in gold per cubic yard. Beaver Creek Gulch, in this territory, is now turning out not less than $1,000 per day in gold." Many Denverites are daily leaving for the new discoveries in Park County.

EVADE THE RESTRICTION LAW.

Fraudulent Certificates Furnished to Chinamen at San Francisco.

The San Francisco Examiner charges that certificates of identification of Chinese who may wish to land in this country are being disposed of there in violation of the Chinese Restriction law. The Examiner states that it has in its possession a certificate purchased from Hy Chang, a Chinese lawyer of that city, who has been a student at both Yale and Columbia Colleges, and who agreed for the sum of $100 on the delivery of the certificate and $140 on the safe entry into this country of the Chinaman holding the certificate to procure complete identification under the terms of the law of any Chinese who might desire to land. In this case a mythical person was chosen by the examiner, but was made to appear in the certificate, which bears the seal of the Chinese Consulate, as Owyany Cum Tong, an opium merchant, who was on his way to China, but who intended returning to the United States. Chang, in his negotiations with the newspaper representative, who concealed his identity, intimated that other Chinese and some of the customs officials were implicated in the transactions.

TO TAR AND FEATHER A JUDGE.

Chased by an Angry Crowd for a Decision to Exclude the Evidence.

An exciting scene was enacted in the Criminal Court at St. Joseph, Mo., during the trial of a seduction case. A lawyer named Thomas Winn, who had been elected special Judge to try the case, sustained a demurrer to the evidence and discharged the defendant, a wealthy young farmer named Charles Farris, without giving the jury an opportunity to pass upon the merits of the case. The court-room was crowded, and as soon as the court's decision was announced the angry auditors made a rush for Winn, and had they reached him it was their intention to treat him to a coat of tar and feathers. Winn escaped through a back door and has not since been seen. Proceedings have already been commenced to disbar him from practicing at the Buchanan County bar. A party of farmers is still looking for Winn, and if found there is no telling what will be done with him.

DANGERS OF IMPORTED DISEASE.

The Canadian Steamship Line Too Handy in Some Respects.

The Toronto medical health officers are complaining of a new danger from the importation of contagious diseases by the new Canadian steamship line from China and the East to British Columbia. Already there is a small epidemic of small-pox at Victoria, caused apparently through the absence of proper quarantine arrangements on the Canadian Pacific coast. Dr. Allen, Toronto's medical health officer, says this is a new danger we have to contend with. The first case of small-pox was imported to Victoria, B. C., three or four weeks ago, but it appears the other passengers on the steamer were not quarantined. Small-pox, cholera and leprosy, the Doctor said, constantly prevailed in the countries where the ship trade is, and it is even more important to have proper quarantine arrangements at Pacific than Atlantic ports.

THE STRIKE SPREADS.

Carnegie's Men at Pittsburg Go Out Because a Conference Is Refused.

The employes in the upper and lower union mines of the Carnegie Company in Pittsburg, Pa., quit work at noon Thursday, and the gas was turned off in the furnaces. The men in all the departments are out and the mills will be shut down. The men struck because the company refused to confer again with the Homestead men. It is the most remarkable iron strike on record, the firm having signed the Amalgamated scale for the ensuing year. The employes of the Keystone Bridge Company are non-union and will not strike unless forced to. Nothing has been heard from the Beaver Falls plant, but the men probably struck there also, as threatened.

FRUIT CANNERS IN A PANIC.

The Sudden Rise of Fruit on the Pacific Coast Causes a Sensation.

California fruit canners are almost in a panic over the rapid advance in price of all fruits and the prospect that the orchardists will repudiate their contracts. Three-quarters of the canners have contracts for apricots at 1½ cents per pound, or $30 per ton, yet at present sales are quoted at 2½ @2¾ c. per pound. If the growers keep faith with the canners the latter will make big profits, but if the contracts are broken the canners will lose heavily and some may be driven to the wall.

It Is Asiatic Cholera.

The report of the Spanish Medical Commission that was sent to Paris to inquire into the nature of the epidemic of so-called "cholerine," has been received at Madrid. The report declares that the disease is Asiatic cholera. In consequence of the report the Government has ordered that precautions be immediately taken along the Pyrenean frontier to prevent the introduction of the disease into Spain.

Cincinnati Visited by a Storm.

A terrific storm of wind and rain passed over Cincinnati Friday afternoon. Several persons were injured, but only one seriously as far as known. The roof of the Veterinary Hospital on Main street was blown across that thoroughfare, crashing into the Banner brewery and causing some damage to that building. The damage to property throughout the city is estimated at $25,000.

New York Stricken with Disease.

The warm wave which centered over New York Monday still continues. The number of deaths reported to the Health Board for twenty-four hours was 177, of which ninety-nine were children under 5 years of age. Six cases of small-pox were discovered.

Thievish Tramps Wounded.

At Wilkesbarre, Pa., ten tramps broke into a Delaware and Hudson railroad car and fitted themselves out with shoes. Watchman Mills came upon them and fired into the crowd, wounding two of the men so badly that they may die.

Four Killed by a Train.

Near Middletown, New York, part of a freight train on the Ontario and Western Railroad struck a wagon containing ten persons, killing four of its occupants and injuring three others.

Carter Is Chosen.

Thomas H. Carter, of Montana, has been chosen Chairman of the Republican National Committee. He is 38 years old, and was born in Scioto County, Ohio. He has resided in Montana for more than fifteen years, having gone to Helena when quite a lad. He was elected a delegate in Congress from that Territory to succeed Martin Maginnis, but before taking his seat was chosen a member, the Territory having been admitted as a State. He was a candidate for renomination when President Harrison appointed him Commissioner of the General Land Office, which position he has since occupied.

WILL PROSECUTE THE LEADERS.

Over Two Hundred Strikers to Be Proceeded Against.

A Pittsburg dispatch says: The fact that no steps have so far been taken by the Carnegie company in the direction of instituting criminal proceedings against the Homestead men who were concerned in the attack upon the Pinkertons is not, so it is semi-officially stated, to be taken as an indication that the company proposes to remain inactive in the matter. The men who resisted the landing of the guards and who participated in their maltreatment after their surrender are to be prosecuted to the bitter end. The Carnegies are simply waiting to see what action, if any, the prosecuting authorities of Allegheny County propose to take in the premises, and if, after the lapse of what may be regarded as a reasonable period, there is no disposition on the part of these authorities to move in the matter, then Mr. Frick himself will take the initiative and warrants will be sworn out for the arrest of every man who is known to have been on the mill property at the time of the riot and the killing of the Pinkertons. Over two hundred names of such men are now in the possession of Knox & Reed, the attorneys for the company, to whom the entire matter has been referred for action. The specific charges to be made against the men who have been "spotted" is that of accessory to murder in the first degree.

ALICE MITCHELL ON TRIAL.

The Defense Prepared to Prove that Freda Ward's Slayer Is Insane.

At Memphis, Tenn., the trial of Alice Mitchell on her plea of present insanity was begun in the Criminal Court Monday morning in the presence of a large number of people. The defense holds that when Alice, 18 years old, manifested an aversion for men and loved a maiden 17 years old with the devotion and intensity of a man and prepared to marry her an planned to elope, she was crazy. The State will contend that Miss Mitchell did have a great regard for young men and will show that she not only flirted with the other sex but that she carried on a voluminous correspondence with men, some of them unknown. Jail life has agreed with Miss Mitchell, for when she raised her veil in the court-room she looked as fresh and plump as a well-fed country girl.

Naval War College Ready.

The new building known as the Naval War College, recently built on an island belonging to the Government in the harbor of Newport, R. I., has been reported by Capt. A. T. Mahan to be completed and in readiness for the reception of officers who may be sent there for instruction, and the Navy Department will, within a few days, order a number of available officers to the college for duty. It is the present intention of Secretary Tracy that the course of instruction at the war college shall be in the nature of what might be termed a post-graduate course for officers of the navy.

Jealous Boys in Mortal Combat.

At Carbon Hill, Ala., Richard Smith, aged 16, was sitting Sunday night in the parlor of Mrs. Sparks' boarding-house chatting with the landlady's daughter, when Fred Kling, aged 17 years, strode in and swore at Smith, who ordered him out of the room. Kling knocked Smith down and was stabbed to the heart by the fallen man, dying instantly. Mrs. Sparks fainted at the sight and is in a dangerous condition. Smith was caught at Jasper.

Killed in a Fencing Match.

Professor Cortelli, in fencing with Dr. C. C. Terry, of Fall River, Mass., plunged his foil through the Doctor's mask, and the tip having broken off, the sharp pointed steel entered his eye. An hour later he died, and it is supposed the steel penetrated his brain. The two men met in a friendly bout in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium. Terry was a leading physician and very popular. Cortelli is Professor of Fencing in the Newport Naval School.

Big Fire in Montreal.

One of the biggest fires in Montreal, Quebec, for some time took place Monday afternoon. At the busiest time in the day Clendenning's mammoth stove and iron foundry on William street was discovered to be on fire. The building occupies the whole of one block extending from Colborne to Inspector streets, and comprises an iron foundry, molding premises, machine shops, pipe factory, and storerooms. The loss is $250,000.

Can Destroy Whole Towns.

A story is published to the effect that Edison has invented an electrical machine which will destroy whole towns at a distance of thirty miles from it, and has sold the invention to the German Government. A professor in the Paris University, it is said, wrote of the matter to Edison a short time ago and Edison replied that he was not animated in what he had done by any wish to aid the enemies of France.

Killed by Lightning.

At Springfield, Ohio, James Maloney, aged 73 years, was struck by lightning and killed. He was pasturing his cows about 100 yards from the Lagonda avenue engine house, and when the rain commenced took shelter under the tree.

WAR IN THE WEST.

AN IDAHO COUNTY UNDER MARTIAL LAW.

The Union Men Threaten to Blow Up the Mines When the Troops Arrive—Bloody Conflict Probable in the Valley—Rushing in Soldiers.

They Know No Law.

A Boise City (Idaho) dispatch says: Gov. Willey has issued a proclamation placing Shoshone County under martial law. Word has been received that three companies of Federal troops from Missoula have arrived at Mullan. The other troops have not been heard from. Adjt. Gen. Curtis, who is in command for the State and who went to Cœur d'Alene in advance of the outbreak, has not been heard from and it is feared that he has fallen into the hands of the strikers. A dispatch to the Governor from Judge Heyburn at Spokane says that union men drove 132 non-union miners out, firing on them and killing two.

At Portland, Ore., the Union Pacific Company has received word from Cœur d'Alene that the Northern Pacific railroad bridge, together with several hundred feet of track, was blown up by strikers west of Mullan. The company is preparing to take all non-union men out of the mines to Tekoa. The union men assert that the moment troops appear on the scene they will blow up Bunker Hill, Sullivan, Sierra Nevada and Gem mines. The burning of the bridge near Mullan will hold troops there, unless they march on foot to Wallace and Wardner, a distance of about ten miles. It is now reported that the union men have taken Van B. Delashnutt of Portland, William Sweeny and other mine owners and will hold them as hostages until the trouble is settled. It is reported that the telegraph wires to Wardner have been cut.

Superintendent Dickinson of the Northern Pacific telegraphed the Governor from Tacoma that their tracks and bridges have been destroyed in the vicinity of Mullan and Wallace, and that wires have been cut. They will hold the county responsible. Another message to the Governor says that several non-union men have been blown up and that the union men propose to fight the troops to the death.

A special train over the Union Pacific left Portland, bearing 200 troops of the Fourteenth Infantry from Van Couver, Washington, for Cœur d'Alene mines. A special train over the Union Pacific arrived at Pendleton, bearing troops from Idaho. Two companies have left Fort Sherman for the scene of the trouble. In all about 700 United States troops and militia are on their way to the mines.

Gen. Schofield has ordered as additional troops to the Cœur d'Alene district four companies of infantry from Fort Spokane, Washington, a troop of cavalry and six companies of infantry from Vancouver barracks, Washington. These troops, with those previously ordered from Fort Sherman and Fort Missoula, will give Col. Cartin an active force of nearly 800 men.

WILL CLOSE SUNDAY.

The Senate Takes Decisive Action in the Matter.

The United Senate, by a vote of 51 to 14, has approved the $5,000,000 appropriation in aid of the World's Fair. Attached to the appropriation is the following important proviso:

"That the appropriation provided in this act shall be upon condition that the said World's Columbian Exposition shall be closed on the first day of the week, commonly called Sunday."

Another condition of equal importance has been attached, although it is likely to be struck out on a reconsideration. It is as follows:

"Provided the sale of intoxicating liquor on the Exposition grounds shall be prohibited, except for medical, botanical, or scientific purposes."

The final contest on the World's Fair items came up in the Senate Wednesday afternoon as the climax to the three successive days of debate which have been given the subject. Through a fiction of the Senate the bill was not before the Senate itself, but before the "committee of the whole" for preliminary revision and amendments. It was in this committee of the whole that the important action was taken, so that there is still opportunity for change when the committee of the whole reports to the full Senate. The votes were so decisive, however, that there is no possibility of change upon the $5,000,000 appropriation or upon the Sunday question.

According to a Washington dispatch, there is a certainty that an effort will be made to strike out the liquor prohibition, and, as this was passed by only two majority, the prospects are that the prohibition will be eliminated. The two Illinois Senators who voted for the liquor prohibition have determined to change their votes, which is sufficient to change the narrow majority which was given on the first vote.

Too Hasty.

Doctor Brunton, in an address lately reported in the London Lancet, was cautioning his hearers—the members of a medical society—against hastily expressed opinions as to the nature of patients' diseases, and emphasized his warning by two professional anecdotes. He was once present at a clinic, the subject of which was a man evidently suffering from some disease of the heart.

An unnatural murmuring sound could be heard from that organ, and the pupil of one of his eyes was very much dilated. The peculiar appearance of the eye seemed to have some connection with the cardiac affection, but various opinions were expressed by the different students as to what the precise nature this relation could be.

The discussion was just becoming interesting when the patient remarked that his strange-looking eye was made of glass!

At another clinic the professor in charge was discussing learnedly about the importance of attending to minor symptoms.

"Now gentlemen," he said, "in the case of this woman here, certain things should be confidently affirmed from the condition of her teeth."

He was proceeding to particularize, but just then the patient broke in upon him.

"Please, sir," she said, as she took out her teeth, "I will hand them round; the young gentlemen might like to look at them closer."

Femininities.

WE hear of men sowing wild oats, but who ever heard of a woman sewing anything but tares.

MISS TOMPKINS says that every unmarried lady of forty has passed the Cape of Good Hope.

AN Indiana woman claims to have worn a corset for seventy years. A rather protracted stay.

SANK WITH THE FOLSOM

OVER A SCORE LOST IN THE PEORIA DISASTER.

Many Persons Yet Unaccounted For Believed to Be in the Cabin of the Overturned Boat—Story of the Accident—The Storm Came Up with Awful Rapidity.

Found Watery Graves.

Twelve bodies have already been recovered from the wrecked steamer Frankie Folsom, and sixteen persons are yet to hear from, telegraphs a Peoria, Ill., correspondent. The bodies of the following named persons are recovered: The Rev. J. H. McMeen, Benson; Mrs. Fred Fisher; Cora Fisher; John H. Arends, Pekin; Mary Flatt, Pekin; Mrs. Henry Duisdecker, Pekin; Mrs. W. G. Willis, Pekin; Miss Lottie Shade, Shelbyville; Miss Lottie Butler, Pekin; Mrs. Kate Beebe, Pekin; Grant Heppler, Streator; unknown body of a young girl. Divers who were sent down near the wreck reported seeing four bodies crushed under the wreckage. These cannot be gotten at until the boat is righted. Nearly the whole excursion party was composed of the better class of the population of Pekin and Delavan.

Never since the Chatsworth disaster has there been any such excitement here. The storm burst with remarkable suddenness. Above the roar of the wind and thunder the cries of the passengers on the Folsom, as they clung to spars, guards, and pieces of furniture, could plainly be heard, while at each succeeding flash of lightning the wreck could be seen by thousands who lined the river bank in the face of the drenching rain.

The storm did not last long. It blew up with rapidity little short of marvelous, and as quickly subsided. The rain continued, but the danger was over, and soon more than a score of rowboats were slowly bringing passengers to the shore. Everything possible was done by the citizens and officials. Patrol wagons, ambulances, and nearly the entire police force were ordered out to assist in caring for the rescued.

Miss Heppler, of Streator, was rescued in an insensible condition and removed to a house. It is impossible to tell whether she will recover or not. James Thomas is in the hospital. A swinging timber struck him, terribly crushing a leg. The search for bodies was prosecuted all night. Mrs. Kate Beebe, of Pekin, is known to have been lost. She was on deck at the time of the accident and must have been washed overboard. Her father, Fred Zuckweiler, was dragged out of the water as he was going down the last time. No trace of the daughter has since been found, and all thoughts of finding her alive have been abandoned. John Smith has not been seen since the accident, and he too must have perished. Immediately on the approach of the storm women took refuge in the cabin, a small room, closed the doors and shut the windows. When the boat capsized they were as if in a prison with no means of egress.

Was Returning from Lake View Park.

The steamer was returning from Lake View Park, where a spectacular production of the "Last Days of Pompeii" had been given. The crew numbered five. The evening had been pleasant, but during the latter part of the performance there were mutterings of a storm. It burst suddenly with great violence when the boat had gotten out in the middle of the river. Edward Loesch, the captain, was in the pilot house when the storm struck. He attempted to head the boat for the shore, and as he did so the wind caught it and capsized it. Most of those who were on deck rushed to the upper side, and were in this way saved. Capt. Loesch helped all he could to put on life preservers. He pulled up two women who were struggling out of the cabin.

When the boat began to sink a whistle was sent up for aid, but in a few moments the boilers were under water. Word was sent to the police station and Mayor Warner ordered out at once all the policemen, the patrol wagon, and ambulance. The Folsom lay about 100 yards from shore in sixteen feet of water, and was about two-thirds under water careened over on the side. There was not an available tug in the city. The Longfellow, which was struggling near the Folsom, made a landing as soon as she could, and hurried her passengers ashore. It was the intention to go to the aid of the sinking boat, but the wheel got caught in some manner, and great difficulty was experienced in getting away.

Meanwhile numerous small boats were put out, although the rough condition of the river rendered the mission very perilous. Rain fell in torrents, and the wind blew in fierce gusts. All of the steamer above water was covered by half-drowned passengers clinging to the upper deck, one side of which showed just above the surface.

When the first relief boat appeared, men and women leaped from the steamer and swam to the boat. So many attempted this that they had to be driven back with oars in order to keep the little boats from being swamped. Four persons were brought off in the first boat, and after this the work of rescue went on rapidly. Mayor Warner had ordered out a number of hacks, and as fast as the people were brought off the steamer they were placed in hacks and driven to places of shelter. The river is being dragged for the bodies of those that are still missing.

Omaha and the Crow.

There is probably no city in the United States where the common wild crow makes himself as much at home as in Omaha. Here they are as common almost as English sparrows or tame pigeons, and evince about as little fear of man. All through the winter months, especially when the ground is covered with snow, this beautiful and intelligent but very mischievous bird is a common sight on our by-streets and lanes, and often in the very dooryards in the center of the city. They seem absolutely without fear of man or boy, and when busily engaged in the enjoyment of a meal can be approached within a few yards before they will take wing. This is all very strange to people who have lived in the Eastern States, where the crow is considered the shyest and most wary of all wild birds.

Just now they are at their thickest in and about Omaha, and great flocks can be seen every morning and evening flying over the city. In the evening their line of flight is from the south and southwest to the north and northeast. In the morning they traverse the same flight back again.

For years and years the birds have roosted in the forest of low willows east and north of Cut Off Island, and when the sable hosts are congregating thither in the shades of evening the spectacle is a wonderful one. Omaha's escutcheon would certainly be incomplete without the graven image of the cunning and industrious crow upon it.—Omaha Bee.

A THIEF arrested down in Georgia now turns out to be a detective. He probably wanted to test the axiom that it takes a thief to catch a thief

There has just been published A Set of the Works of Charles Dickens, in Large and Handsome Volumes, printed from entirely new plates, with new type. By special arrangement with the publishers we are enabled to offer to our patrons this splendid set of Dickens' Works, postpaid, free. Charles Dickens was the greatest novelist who ever lived. No author before or since his time has won the fame that he achieved, and his works are even more popular to-day than during his lifetime. They abound in wit, humor, pathos, masterly delineation of character, vivid descriptions of places and incidents, thrilling and skilfully wrought plots. Each book is intensely interesting. No home should be without a set of these great and remarkable works. Not to have read them is to be far behind the age in which we live. The twelve volumes in this set contain the following world-famous works, each one of which is published complete, unchanged and absolutely unabridged:

DAVID COPPERFIELD,
MARTIN CHUZZLEWIT,
NICHOLAS NICKLEBY,
DOMBEY AND SON,
BLEAK HOUSE,
LITTLE DORRIT,
OUR MUTUAL FRIEND,
PICKWICK PAPERS,
BARNABY RUDGE AND CHRISTMAS STORIES,
OLIVER TWIST AND GREAT EXPECTATIONS,
THE OLD CURIOSITY SHOP AND THE UNCOMMERCIAL TRAVELER,
A TALE OF TWO CITIES, HARD TIMES, AND THE MYSTERY OF EDWIN DROOD.

THE PLAN.

We will send a complete set of these books FREE by mail, postpaid, guaranteeing safe delivery, as follows: To any old subscriber, who sends one dollar, and renews their subscription to either of the following publications for one year:

THE PEOPLE'S LITERARY COMPANION,
—OR—
The National Farmer and Home Magazine

To any new subscriber, who sends one dollar for either of the above periodicals for one year. This is the grandest offer ever made, and the greatest bargain ever offered. Up to this time the price of a complete set of Dickens' Works has been ten dollars or more. The use of modern, improved printing, folding and stitching machinery, the present extremely low price of white paper, and the great competition in the book trade are the factors which made this wonderful offer possible. Bear in mind that we offer, not a single volume, but the entire set of twelve volumes all free to subscribers. All may now afford the luxury of owning a handsome set of Dickens' works. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. Do not neglect or put off this wonderful opportunity. Send at once; you will be delighted with the charming books, and as long as you live, never cease to regard it as the best investment of a dollar you ever made. Address all communications to

IF YOU CAN READ

and write, and are possessed of fair intelligence, you are fully qualified to make a grand success of what we offer you. We have lately published at great expense and labor a perfect wonder in the way of an Illustrated Gift Book, suitable to all classes, as a gift for any one, and at a price that brings it within the reach of all, even those of moderate means. Heretofore only those who indulged in luxuries have felt that they could afford a book of this class, as they are sold in book stores at $5.00 and upwards. The book which we offer is not in any way inferior to those above referred to, but is far superior to hundreds of books of this nature that are sold at prices exceeding ours by an enormous per cent. It is selling with a rush wherever shown. Agents have only to show the book and mention the price, and it sells on its merits without further talking. No better Christmas, New Year's or Birthday present can be selected. It will sell, not only for holiday trade, but at all seasons of the year, for the reason that all will want it in their homes, and all will have it as soon as they know the low price at which our agents can furnish them. Reader, if you need profitable employment, and a business in which you can and will take pride, as well as make money rapidly, do not fail to send for circulars containing private terms to agents and full information which will be sent FREE upon application. Old and new agents alike are making handsome salaries—yes, fortunes. Many of those who are making the best records are new at the agency business, having had no previous experience. Make a start—the field is entirely new. No such terms have been offered agents as we now offer on this wonderful book. Special qualifications not necessary, for it sells everywhere at sight. Perhaps you have at some time been unsuccessful at the agency business; if so, there is every reason why you should try this, the PRINCE of gift books, as failure is impossible if you make a START. Write to-day, study our circulars and directions, then order an outfit and go to work with push and vigor, and you may make the greatest mistake of your life if you allow this GOLDEN opportunity to pass unimproved. AN AFRICAN ROMANCE.

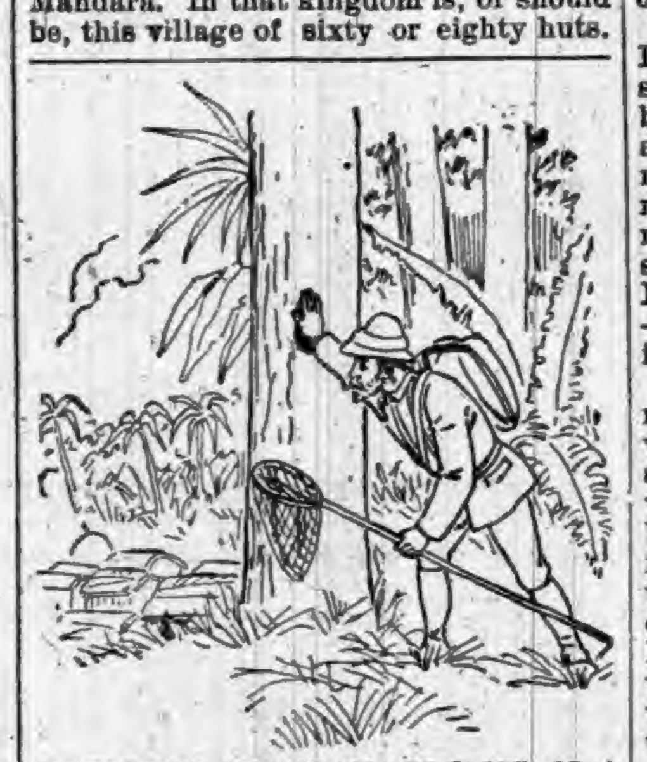
A Story Blended with Some Interesting Colonial History.

BY EDWARD EVERETT HALE.

CHAPTER I.

I find that very few of my countrymen understand anything of the detail of village life in Africa. Because the people who print the maps choose to color one region with carmine and another with cobalt, people take an idea that there are great nations there, each, I suppose, with a president, a congress, reporters, and primary meetings, and everything else to make people comfortable. All this is wrong. Africa, almost everywhere, and in particular Central Africa, south of the Great Desert, and north of what we call, conveniently enough, the Cape, is a land, I had almost said, of villages. By this I mean that there are, I dare not so how many tribes, living comfortably enough, each in its own place, only molested when Arab slave traders come along; now that the slave trade of the Atlantic has been happily put down.

It is in a little village in one of these really independent tribes that I had the adventure which I now describe. If you look on any map which is old enough you will find the kingdom of Lower Mandara. In that kingdom is, or should be, this village of sixty or eighty huts.



"IT BROUGHT ME OUT ON THE SLOPE OF A HILL."

But with all deference to the men who made the maps, and the chromo-lithograph men who color them, I doubt if anybody in that village ever heard of the kingdom of Upper or Lower Mandara, or knew that he lived under a king. They lived a good deal as the people of Cranberry Center lived, before there were canvassing committees for the county, and when they had not voters enough to send a member to the Legislature.

For me, I had come up the Congo to a point—well, say sixty miles below Houssa, when something happened to the connecting rod of the steamer and she was laid up for repairs for twenty-four hours. I was glad of the chance to stretch my legs and to try for game, and started off as soon as the engineer made this report, with my two boys, as they were called, Philip and Mendi John. Philip was of no great use but as an interpreter with the other, who had a great deal of good woodcraft in him and other working capacity. We had great luck, as how could a man fail to, going through meadows and wood which never saw an entomologist before? I had bagged and chloroformed and stuck, well, twenty-five fine butterflies and had left a dozen traps for moths, to be examined when we came back next day. We had lunched under a grove of pepper trees, when I saw what I afterwards knew better, but what then I had never seen—a magnificent specimen of Vanessa, larger than Erckhardt's, and, as I supposed, rightly, wholly new. I simply called to the boys that they were not to leave the place, and started after him.

A blessed tramp he led me, up hill and down dale. Hot! oh, how hot it was! Bamboos here, pepper trees there, plantains, bananas, palm trees—now in the shade, now in the sun, and this lovely, flattering, fluttering flutterer ahead of me, with the wiles and wit of a Siren and an Oread combined. But I was too much for him. After an hour I had the splendid creature—there he is now, framed and under glass, hanging on the wall opposite where I write. I slung my box on my back after I had chloroformed and fixed him, and then started back to my men.

If I had found them there would have been no story. The truth was that my handsome wood nymph there, the Vanessa, had bewitched the brooks and the paths so that everything ran the wrong way. Even the sun in the heavens, when he shone at all, shone in the wrong quarter. Most of the time the sky was overcast, so that the poor sun himself could not shine at all. And how was I to know my road there in the kingdom of Mandara, Upper or Lower, if the sun in the sky did not know his? I tramped and tramped. I had lost my own tracks long before. At last I came to a path tolerably well beaten, and it brought me out—on the river in sight of the smoke-stacks of the Princess Beatrice? Not a bit of it. It brought me out on the slope of a hill, on a large banana patch, with a village of sixty or seventy huts just below me.

I will not say I was frightened, for there is no good in telling tales out of school. But I will not say I was not, for there is no good in lying. The sun, wherever he was, was well near setting. For it was 6 by my watch. I could not keep it much longer. So I boldly went down into the village.

Half a dozen little curs snapped at me, just as if I had been in the village of the Yanktons, or in the Sahara. I made nothing of them, but passed on; and then, meeting a pleasant fellow, as black as the knave of clubs, with a handsome, good-natured face, clad in a long blue night-gown, made in a Manchester print shop for a bed curtain, I made a salaam to him, in the best fashion of Bel-el-djeree. And he, restraining his laughter, made one in quite another fashion to me. Then he advanced, and boldly offered me his hand, as an Englishman might have done, much to my surprise. He said something also, but I knew not what; and I took precious good care not to lisp a word of Arabic.

What I did was to lay my head on one side as if I were desirous of sleeping, and to put my finger in my mouth as if I wanted to eat. I had learned the first signal from the ballet, and the second from Mother Nature and the Navajo Indians. He laughed good-naturedly and pointed to the village. A group of boys and girls, with a few uncles and aunts, fathers and mothers, were assembled already to see the wonder. For myself, I was asking myself whether they would sing, as they did to Mungo Park:

> Let us pity the white man:
> No mother has he to bring him milk,
> No wife to grind his corn.

But I am not writing for Mr. Fewkes or the Ethnological Society. So I will only say that my guide was evidently a top-sawyer in the crowd, and that he made them march right and left as he would. Before ten minutes had passed I was lying on two or three nice sweet mats of indescribable perfume, and a gentle black woman, dressed also in a high-colored Manchester chintz, had brought me a cup of coffee. After this there was enough to eat, and of the best, too. And, to make the story as short as I can, in this house I spent the night, on these same mats, indeed. Conversation is very hard when it has to be confined to pantomime. I described the river as well as I could, and the play of the walking beam of the engine of the Princess Beatrice. Of one thing I may say I am certain—that my friend had seen her or had not. But, whether he had seen her or not I do not know. At one time I thought he had, and went on with inquiries as to the distance that might part me from her at that moment. But afterward I had reason to think that he supposed I described the jumping up and down of some monkeys who had been playing upon the tree. Such are the dangers of sign language.

After a little conversation of this sort I intimated that I would like to go to sleep. He intimated that there was no better time nor place. With a consideration I had not expected, he stretched a mat, or sort of a curtain across the room—or house, for there was but one room under the roof—and I found myself in my bed-room. I cannot say that I went to bed. I was already in my bed—a rapidity of comfort I have not found in more elaborate forms of civilization.

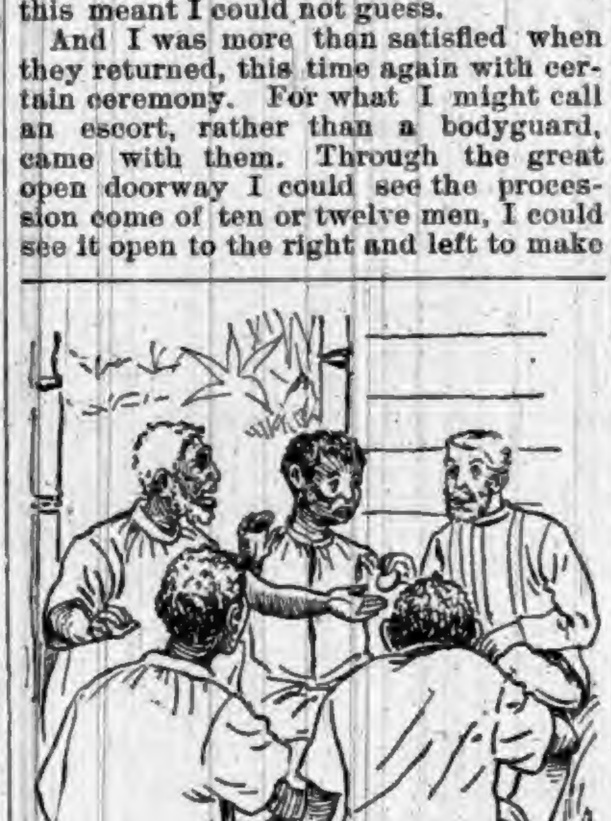
It was the next morning that the revelation came, which I am trying to write out in this story, if by good luck and persistent effort I can get to it. I was wakened early from a sound sleep, by the singing of the birds, I believe it is called by the poets. It was, in fact, the rasping and exasperating screaming of cocks, guinea hens, geese and ducks. For these African villages are nothing without their poultry. It is easy to dress when you have not undressed, and it was scarcely 6 o'clock when I found myself, not at table, for we were all on the ground, but at breakfast, with a larger company than the night before. The fare was much what it was then. There were plenty of bananas, much finer than the newsboy ever sold me on a train. The resistance-piece was a platter of rice, with boiled chicken and butter, all together. The chicken was jointed so that one could take hold of any piece he wished. For we ate as Adam and Eve did—if, indeed, they had come as far as kabobs of chicken.

As I bent forward to take a side-bone which looked attractive, a fine old fellow in a white nightgown happened to see, hanging from my watch-chain, an old, very old, silver shilling. It was a shilling of Charles I. in perfect condition, which I dug up several years before in our orchard when I was setting out some quince trees. When the old man saw this he bent over eagerly and begged me to show it to him that he might examine it. His manner was perfectly courteous. But I confess I thought I looked my last on my shilling. All these tokens of Manchester were enough to show that they had learned the value of money. This was the first time they had seen that I had any, and I was graceless enough to think that it would be long before I handled my luck penny again.

But in this I thought as a Philistine thinks, as you shall see.

I gracefully unhitched it from the chain and gave it to him with my best manner. What says Jacob Abbot: "When you grant, grant cheerfully." Old nightgown showed it eagerly to blue nightgown, and to a red nightgown on the other side. Their faces beamed with astonishment and delight. Then they pointed to each other the stamp on the obverse with evident joy. Then, with great ceremony, they handed back the piece to me. If it had been sacred it could not have been more reverently handled. Then blue and red nightgowns scrambled up from their haunches, more rapidly than gracefully, and hurried from the house. What in thunder all this meant I could not guess.

And I was more than satisfied when they returned, this time again with certain ceremony. For what I might call an escort, rather than a bodyguard, came with them. Through the great open doorway I could see the procession come of ten or twelve men, I could see it open to the right and left to make a passage for red and blue and stand fixed as they came in. Instantly the mats were cleared from the platters as if a meal were done. Then they put down a great covered basket, tightly tied.



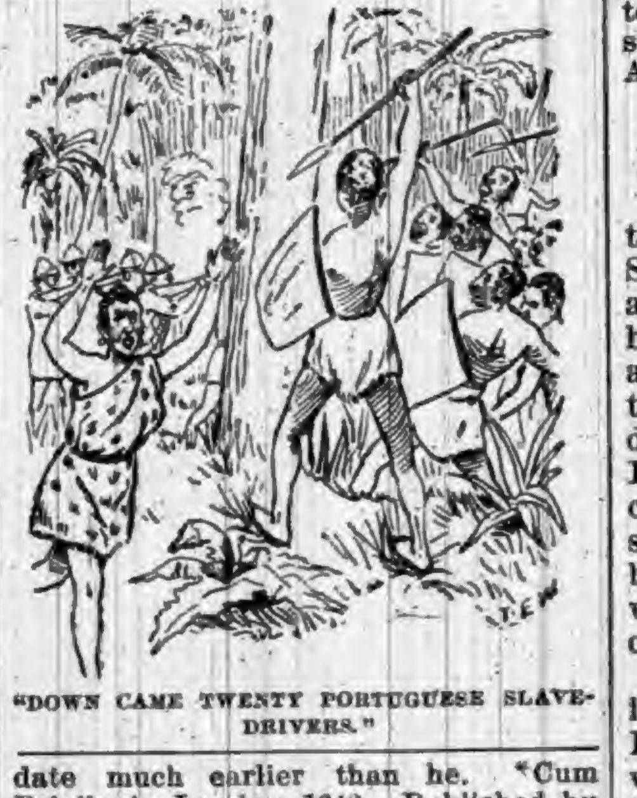
"I GRACEFULLY UNHITCHED IT FROM THE CHAIN."

With endless manipulations and ceremonies it was opened. The covers and cloths, napkins and mats taken out from it were numberless. But at last we came to a handsome necklace, made of three gold coins and say thirty silver coins. This really elegant thing they handed fearlessly to me. You know I am a bit of an expert in coins. The three gold pieces, which were made, so to speak, the center of the necklace, were perfect Portuguese Joes, as perfect as if they had been struck yesterday. The silver coins, also fresh from the mint, were English shillings, exactly like mine, but that they were not in the least worn, out of the coinage of Charles I. As everybody knows, these are, if in good condition, among the very rarest coins in the world, poor Charles having, for reasons well known to history, very little silver to coin. The Joes, as I said, were fresh from the mint of King Joannes of Portugal, the fourth of that name.

In another wrapper, where I found a husk or two of Indian corn was a very handsome wampum necklace of Narragansett manufacture. It had been my business to study wampum, not to say to make it, to buy it, and to sell it. I have never seen more perfect beads than these, white and black both, and all of the best forms. I have no doubt that the string was in the same condition as when it was traded away by Canonicus or some of his men.

This revelation was more extraordinary than the other. Silver and gold, almost of their nature, go all over the world. But wampum does not. How did this necklace—it was not a belt—come here?

I expressed by every sign—by raising of the eyebrows, holding up of my open palms, and radiant smiles—my interest, curiosity and surprise, I might say puzzled amazement. Then I handed back the two necklaces, respectfully, to Redgown. Then the ceremony continued. More mats were withdrawn from the basket. Another parcel was reached, larger than the first. This was carefully opened, with sundry prostrations, and a knock or two of the forehead upon it. When all was opened it proved to be a bound book, which was handed to me reverently. I opened it at the title page, to find a perfect English Bible. For an instant I thought it was a waif from Mungo Park's equipment. No, it was of a date much earlier than he. "Cum Privilegio, London, 1642. Published by the King's Printer."



"DOWN CAME TWENTY PORTUGUESE SLAVE-DRIVERS."

How, when or why, by what agency of church, state or trade, had these things found their way here?

CHAPTER II.

I did not choose to abate the reverence with which I saw this book was regarded. I am as little given to bibliolatry as any man. But in this case I made no scruple. I bowed as low as Redgown had bowed, and touched my forehead to the volume. Then I commanded silence. I opened at the Sermon on the Mount. I read the first three beatitudes and the Lord's prayer aloud, as solemnly and with such dignity as I could express. By a signal I made them all bow their heads. And, with all my heart, I am sure, on my knees, I said, "Father in heaven, tell me what to do, what to say, and how to lead these people." I am sure they understood that I offered prayer.

I gave back the book to the curious and dignified old chief, who was, I think, a priest of some kind. I carefully watched the folding of it in mats, and the business of taking it away with the necklace. Then I began a series of signs, and such interrogatories as can be expressed by them, wishing at the time that I had the skill of Harlequin or of Columbine, in translating into "visible speech" the language of the ear.

They led me out into the open air. They showed me the sun, which was by this time half an hour high. I was made to understand that he rose at one spot in one part of the year and at another at another season. Then I felt that we were advancing. I had the night before been made to understand that two doubled fists made ten. Now by repeated pilings together of the fists of one and another chief and priest, I was taught that it was twenty-four tens of years since these things came into their possession. The son of Red Gown was brought forward, a vigorous man of 50, and his son, a small lad of 15. I was made to understand that Red Gown's father's father's father, seven generations back, brought the sacred things from a country beyond the sunset. He had preserved them, and, as I found afterwards, by oaths the most sacred in formulas more binding than anything which is known to book-ruled lands, he had bound his children and his children's children to preserve them.

I say "I was made to understand this." How much I really gained from that long and trying conversation in pantomime I do not precisely know, but when my interpreters appeared, my guesses were confirmed or corrected, so that I find it now hard to say at what moment I gained the correct ideas.

By this time they had missed me from the ship. My black fellows had gone home at ten o'clock at night and reported that I was lost. At sunrise they sent these two out again and some volunteer skirmishers. By nine o'clock some of the Blue Gown's people met some of these scouts, and by ten I had Phil and John to talk for me. Red Gown produced a man who had taken a Mendi wife, and so, with four languages and interpreters, we understood each other in a way.

The first time I was at home in Connecticut, some five years after this happened, I made a run down to Boston, and there, in their archives, I got their part of the story. Strange enough it is, and you shall hear it now.

It was in the year 1645 that, in this same village of Lower Mandara, looking much then as it looks now, there was to be a first-class wedding. This young fellow, as he was then, who is the hero of this story henceforth—his name was Telega—was to be married. And he was to be married to his sweetheart, as it happened. I am afraid it did not always happen so. But all the accounts agree that it was a match of his making—nay, I believe they think, as I do, that this is the reason why we ever heard of him again.

Well, the forms of marriage were not ours. But in all countries lingers the tradition that the groom seizes the bride as, with her maidens, she goes unescorted by him. So Pluto seized Proserpine in Enna. And so, to this day, in a high wedding at church the bride and her maidens walk up the aisle, with the flowers they have gathered in their walk, and the groom, rightly dressed, with his men perhaps, steps out and takes her for his own. So the bride walked with her maidens that day; so at an ambush prepared and known of all, Telega and his men seized her, and then the procession passed on, he leading her to the great central house of the village, where the rite would come to an end.

Well, just as the tom-toms and banjos were doing their best that day, and the dancing girls dancing their best, down came a dozen Portuguese slave-drivers, with quilted cotton jackets on, such as turned arrows, and with guns loaded and matches burning. The dancing-girls shrieked and ran. The tom-tom men and boys ran. And Telega and his father and his friends fought like wildcats. But what had they to fight with? They were not even armed. It ended in the Portuguese rascals clapping handcuffs on seventeen of them and marching them off to a dhow which was waiting for them on the river. It was, as the traditions agreed, at the very bluff where the Princess Beatrice was mending her connecting rod, the day I wandered so far. Tradition is far more accurate, before books, paper, and ink came in.

What happened then I do not know. But it is clear enough that Telega and his neighbors were not used to being slaves, and that they led the Portuguese a wretched life. They knocked them down, they jumped overboard, they set the barracoons on fire, and at the last the Portuguese captain was glad enough to trade Telega off to a man whose language he could not understand, who had been blown south from Salles, a Moorish port where he was trading. This man of the unknown language was no other than Nathan Gibbons, a master who had sailed out of Boston, in a ship rigged as a brigantine, whose name I do not know. He looked around him in the Bight of Benin, he picked up some cotton and some palm-oil and a little gold-dust, he watered his vessel and went back to Lisbon with her. What happened then I do not know. I do know that, four or five months after the wedding was broken up, Master Telega, the bridegroom, was landed at Gibbons' Wharf in Boston. I know that Gibbons' uncle was selling off the cargo, and that Telega was advertised by poster and by town-crier, to be sold, as a hearty, strong, negro boy, just arrived from Africa.

Only a Cabin Boy.

A big battle was being fought between the English and Dutch navies; Sir John Narborough was the English admiral, and the masts of his ship had been shot away almost directly after the fighting began. In spite of the greatest care and the most splendid bravery, Sir John saw that the English must be beaten unless he could get help. There were a few ships some distance off to the right, but they were to act as a reserve, and would not enter into the battle without a message from him.

Sir John stood a moment considering how the message could be sent. It was not possible to signal; there was only one way—the message must be carried.

The admiral wrote his order, telling the reserve to come and help him at once; then he called for any one who was willing to be the messenger.

Think of the scene a moment, and then you will understand what a brave heart was needed for the service. Below was the sea; around, above, in it, there rained a heavy shower of bullets. The long swim would be trying enough, but to swim with the chance of being shot every second was terrible. Yet many sailors came forward at their admiral's call, ready to risk their lives for their country's good.

They were all grown-up men, and they must have stared in wonder as one of the cabin boys, Cloudesley Shovel, said:

"I can swim, sir; and if I am shot I shall be missed less than any one else."

After a moment's hesitation the paper was handed to the boy, who put it between his teeth and sprang overboard. How the men watched him as long as he could be seen! He reached the reserve ships in safety, and, as they went into action at once, a victory was gained by the English.

When the sun was setting Cloudesley Shovel stood once more upon the admiral's ship, and received his heartiest thanks.

"I shall live to see you have a flag ship of your own," he said.

The admiral's words came true, for the brave cabin boy became Sir Cloudesley Shovel, one of the greatest British admirals.

Higher Authority.

When Sherman reached Atlanta, he had much trouble in keeping back camp-followers, sutlers, women, curiosity-seekers, and so on. He gave stringent orders that no one was to be allowed to go to the front without a specific order. Just about that time a surgeon came back from a furlough. He had passes through to Atlanta, but at Chattanooga they refused to allow his wife to accompany him further. They had only been married a few weeks, and he had resolved that she should go with him, orders or no orders. Accordingly he dressed her as a soldier, and managed to smuggle her on a train. At Resaca, she was stopped, her sex being discovered. The officer of the post absolutely refused to let her go on. The surgeon pleaded. Finally, after appealing to the officer's sense of mercy, he fell back on Scripture. "My pass allows one to go to the front," he said, "and Scripture says a man and his wife are one." "Thunder!" retorted the officer; "Sherman outranks Scripture all to blazes in these times."

Paper-Covered Bullets.

In consequence of the enormous initial velocity of the bullet in the new Mannlicher rifle, and the resulting friction and wear on the barrel, it has become necessary to devise some method preventing both of these evils. The manager of the Government Laboratory at Thun, Switzerland, has consequently devised a method of inclosing the leaden bullet in a thin metallic covering, while over this he places a wrapper of specially prepared oleaginous paper, which reduces the wear of the rifle barrel to a minimum, without interfering with the course of the bullet.

Used Them for Observatories.

The white ant constructs habitations many yards in height, which are so firmly and solidly built that the buffaloes were able to mount them and use them as observatories; they are made of particles of wood joined by a gummy substance, and are able to resist event the force of a hurricane.

Birds of Great Swiftness.

The speed of a hawk or gull on the wing is almost incredibly great. One of the swiftest hawks could make a circle round the smoke stack of a locomotive traveling 60 miles an hour; while a gull has often been known to fly before a favorable wind at the rate of 100 miles an hour.

Unique Umbrella Handles.

The new umbrellas have unique handles which serve a double purpose. One of the latest London novelties is a dog's head of carved wood. The mouth opens on a tram ticket. Another handle has a whistle for calling cabs, and in the third is an opera glass.

THE Prince of Wales has trouble with the inside of his throat, probably due to continual friction.

GANTER'S MAGIC —CHICKEN— CHOLERA CURE!

Thousands of dollars worth of chickens are destroyed by Cholera every year. It is more fatal to them than all other diseases combined. But the discovery of a liquid remedy that positively destroys the Microbes has been made. Half of the young chickens are killed by Microbes before they are fryers. A 50-cent bottle is enough for 100 chickens. It is guaranteed. If, after using two thirds of a bottle, you are not satisfied with it as a cure for Cholera, return it to the druggist from whom you purchased it, and he will refund your money.

THE GREAT SOUTH AMERICAN

NERVINE TONIC

—AND—

Stomach AND Liver Cure

The Most Astonishing Medical Discovery of the Last One Hundred Years.

The Great South American Nervine Tonic

Which we now offer you, is the only absolutely unfailing remedy ever discovered for the cure of Indigestion, Dyspepsia, and the vast train of symptoms and horrors which are the result of disease and debility of the human stomach. No person can afford to pass by this jewel of incalculable value who is affected by disease of the stomach, because the experience and testimony of many go to prove that this is the ONE and ONLY ONE great cure in the world for this universal destroyer. There is no case of unmalignant disease of the stomach which can resist the wonderful curative powers of the South American Nervine Tonic.

HARRIET E. HALL, of Waynetown, Ind., says: "I owe my life to the Great South American Nervine. I had been in bed for five months from the effects of an exhausted stomach, Indigestion, Nervous Prostration, and a general shattered condition of my whole system. Had given up all hopes of getting well. Had tried three doctors, with no relief. The first bottle of the Nervine Tonic improved me so much that I was able to walk about, and a few bottles cured me entirely. I believe it is the best medicine in the world. I can not recommend it too highly."

MRS. ELLA A. BRATTON, of New Ross, Indiana, says: "I cannot express how much I owe to the Nervine Tonic. My system was completely shattered, appetite gone, was coughing and spitting up blood; am sure I was in the first stages of consumption, an inheritance handed down through several generations. I began taking the Nervine Tonic, and continued its use for about six months, and am entirely cured. It is the grandest remedy for nerves, stomach and lungs I have ever seen."

No remedy compares with SOUTH AMERICAN NERVINE as a cure for the Nerves. No remedy compares with South American Nervine as a wondrous cure for the Stomach. No remedy will at all compare with South American Nervine as a cure for all forms of failing health. It never fails to cure Indigestion and Dyspepsia. It never fails to cure Chorea or St. Vitus' Dance. Its powers to build up the whole system are wonderful in the extreme. It cures the old, the young, and the middle aged. It is a great friend to the aged and infirm. Do not neglect to use this precious boon; if you do, you may neglect the only remedy which will restore you to health. South American Nervine is perfectly safe, and very pleasant to the taste. Delicate ladies, do not fail to use this great cure, because it will put the bloom of freshness and beauty upon your lips and in your cheeks, and quickly drive away your disabilities and weaknesses.

THURSDAY............JULY 21, 1892.

HERE we call our soldiers, "boys in blue," but over in Canada they very naturally say "boys in red."

STEVENSON'S first name, Adlai is a scripture name. It occurs in First Chronicles, 29th verse of the 27th chapter.

SENATOR VEST in a recent speech showed that tin which sold at $3.75 before the McKinley bill, now sells for $5.25.

THE Steuben republican has found one instance of a "hurra for Harrison." But it admits it comes from a parrot and that the bird lives a long way off.

"PROTECTION" enables Carnegie to have a fine castle in Scotland, where he stays in summer; but it only enables his workmen to have their wages reduced and themselves out of work.

INDICATIONS are growing, that the democrats will not only carry New York, but Wisconsin, Minnesota and Illinois. Senator Vilas says Wisconsin is as surely democratic as Mississippi.

THE Dispatch speaks of the democratic "Deadly Platform." A very good name indeed for we have no doubt its truths will be so plain as to kill off about half a million of republican votes.

HARRISON presumes on the ignorance of the people, when he speaks of a high tariff securing good wages to laborers, while at the same time 50,000 iron workers have their wages reduced, or lie idle.

PAPER money costs the government just 2 and two-tenths of a mill on each dollar. And yet some complain because we are using a silver dollar worth 70 cents. People are hard to please, even with money.

BINDER twine may yet be made of elm wood. L. A. Clark, of Bloomington, Ind., has made a small quantity by hand and believes it can be made at half the present prices, by using the machines by which other binder twine is made.

CARNEGIE testified a few years ago under oath, that his net profits were a million and a half a year. It is likely they are greater now, as his business has more than doubled. What good reason, then can he give, for cutting down the wages of his men?

KANSAS democrats and Alliance have united on a state ticket and will support the same electoral ticket. In 1890 the Alliance polled 106,972 votes; the democrats, 71,357, and the republicans 115,025. So it will be seen that democrats and Alliance together will carry the state away from the republicans.

WHEN the McKinley bill was about to be passed its friends said the levying of a tax on tin would build up factories that in the one year, before the tin tax went into effect, would make all the tin we consume. Nearly two years have passed, and we make only 1 per cent of the tin we use, and that of a poor grade. It takes something besides an additional tax to start a new industry.

A LOCAL officer under the Ontario, Canada, government holding a minor position at Orangeville, has been dismissed by the "powers that be," for advocating annexation to the United States. Our Canadian cousins have some queer ideas. But there is a growing feeling on both sides of the line, that two strong, vigorous and progressive nations, could get along to greater mutual advantage, if a union satisfactory to both, could be had.

LOCAL republican papers are quite supersitious. They are passing around an article to the effect, that "Indiana has gone democratic but twice in thirty-five years, and then it was when she had a state candidate on the ticket." From this they argue, that as the democrats have no Indiana candidate this year, they will lose the state. Republicans will have to use better arguments than this, if they expect any standing in this age of enlightenment. The rabbit foot in politics, is a dead issue.

ONTARIO farmers have been suffering from a swindle entirely new. Dealers would get an order for a certain number of spruce trees and then send on a box containing many more than had been ordered. And in most cases, they frightened the purchaser into paying for the whole lot. It has been brought to a sudden halt however in Essex and other counties where the "Free Press," a strong local paper attacked the swindle, and exposed it so thoroughly that there will probably be no more "stuffed orders."

THE Dispatch has said many silly things on politics, but the silliest is its occasional twaddle about "British interests," and "British Candidate." If people were as ignorant or as gullible as the editor seems to think they would be still living in caves and cliff houses. No man of any judgment would mention such a thing. The only "British interest" we have seen taking a practical shape about here, was the work of the republicans in 1888 in distributing British flags over this county and state. It didn't scare anyone but themselves, especially the man who peddled them in Auburn. It is a silly cry to raise, and a party that has no other weapon to fight with must be in hard lines. Since 1776 no one has put up a British flag on American soil, except a British army in time of war, or the present republican party in time of peace.

REPUBLICAN papers show their usual ignorance, or want of thought in discussing the Carnegie troubles. They all insist that the reduction of wages was caused by a reduction of the tariff rate on steel billets, the article made at the Homestead steel works. This is not the case. See page 27, of the McKinley bill, in which we find that steel billets are divided into 11 classes according to value per pound. The six lowest classes on the list, are 45 per cent under the old law. Under the new law, the rate of the first is 59.95 per cent; the second, 47.65 per cent; the third, 53 60 per cent, all being that much higher than under the old law. The fourth, fifth and sixth classes, are not given. The seventh grade is the same under both laws, 34.36 per cent. The eighth is 29.87 under the old law, and 30.41 under the new, being again a little higher. The ninth is not given. The tenth grade was 20.90 per cent under the old law and 27.09 under the McKinley law. The eleventh, or highest priced grade of steel billets was rated at 11 89 per cent under the old law and 45 per cent under the McKinley law. We call the attention of the Dispatch to these figures because it said last week, "the tariff was higher on steel billets in 1889 when the pay of Carnegie's men was arranged, than it is now." We have shown official figures to the contrary.

THE Butler Record, instead of replying to our criticism on his article about Jefferson being a protectionist, goes on to prove that Jefferson was just that sort of a man. Well who said he was not? He may or may not have been. That was not what we asserted. What we did assert was that Jefferson, and everybody else at that time did not ask for more than 10 to 20 per cent "protection." Democrats have been vainly trying to get republicans to consent to a reduction of the 47 per cent duty down to 45. Instead of reducing, the McKinley law raised it to 60. If Jefferson were living today he might not think we needed more protection now that he did then, and republicans would go wild over him as a free trader asking for only 20 per cent. And our industries were young then. Now they are 100 years old, and able to compete with the world. To claim that our people need protection is to admit that we are feebler in every way than the people of other nations. But we are strong in every way and don't need protection. The cry of "no protection no mills" is the cry of ignorance or of demagogism, and nothing less. And when the Record goes on to say "you want a tariff on tea, coffee and sugar, You want a tariff on articles the poor man uses as high as on the luxuries" it is simply wild. Please state when and where we ever favored such a thing. But the McKinley bill puts a duty of 40 to 100 per cent on the poor man's clothing, while on the rich man's silks it is but 35 per cent, and his diamonds come in free.

AT THE Ft. Wayne republican state convention the other week, they made a very dramatic business of showing a plate of tin, which they said was American tin. It may have been or it may not. Suppose it was not. Then it was a fraud on the convention. But suppose it was made of American tin, and by Americans. What of that. There is nothing remarkable about that. If tin is found in our hills, we dig it out and prepare it for use, just as we do scores of other minerals, and deserve no more credit for it. Much less can one political party claim any credit for that political party. Neither created the metal in the earth, nor dug it out or prepared it for use. Nor did the McKinley bill, which the crowd seemed to think had made this piece of tin, provide in any way for the production of tin. Indeed the only provision the McKinley bill makes in regard to tin, is to levy an additional tax on it. In other words it makes the production of tin more expensive, and therefore more difficult. Is it possible that among so many republicans, who saw this display that all were so ignorant as to believe the McKinley bill, or the republican party, had in any way favored the production of that tin? We have often had occasion to remark that republicans for some cause are densely ignorant and seem to glory in showing it as they did that day. Had that piece of tin been shown to a democratic audience it would have created no wonder. They would have known that some one had found tin in the earth, had dug it out and had smelted it; then had at some factory, or rolling mill made some sheet iron, a little thinner than the stove pipe sheets, had then dipped this into a kettle of melted tin; and that was all there was of it. The process is no more wonderful than raising a crop of corn, and McKinley and his law deserves no more credit for it than they do for raising a crop of corn. Give us more school houses and schools. We have half the people fairly educated; let us educate the other half.

TWO LIVES.

Two lives we lead in our daily rounds,
  An outer life and inner;
And the two are one, and yet are two,
  This outer life and inner.

And the two flow on in light or shade,
  Nor yet do they grow asunder;
The one above in the broad day light,
  While the other one flows under.

The one, for the world—for all mankind,
  To be known and judged of duly;
The other goes on, unseen by men,
  And yet it goes on as truly.

The outer one—the one for the world,
  May be joyous, gay and merry;
But you know not if the inner one
  Be full as blithe and as cheery.

What crypts and graves lie hid away
  In memory's chambers lone!
For believe me, every human heart
  Hath its disappointments known.

The outer life may be spotless white,
  May be faultless, fair and pure.
But you know not if the inner one
  Would the full daylight endure.

For virtures that shine to please the world,
  Shine on and give no notion
Of the undercurrent dark, that sweeps
  To the shores of eternal ocean.

The outer life may be blurred by faults,
  Which are found in all creation;
But you know not yet what the inner is,
  Nor how strong has been temptation.

For none have seen the warfare waged
  On a spirit battle field,
Where human passions seethe and surge,
  And evil or good must yeild.

Then not by the outward life alone,
  Frail man, shalt thou judge they brother:
Thou knowest ONE half of his dual life,
  GOD and HIMSELF know the other.

LIDA LEASURE.

Camp Meeting.

The season of the year has arrived when humanity seeks comfort and recreation outside enclosures, in groves and pleasure resorts, where plenty of pure air and bright sunshine can be had in abundance. It is at this time that the human family should seek its spiritual comfort and welfare as well as the temporal. In view of giving the people a chance to cultivate piety, and at the same time strengthen the appreciation for the natural and beautiful, Rev. W. L. Meese authorizes it to be said that there will be a Camp Meeting held in some grove between Auburn and Garrett, beginning August 5, 1892. Mr. Meese will be assisted by an able corps of preachers and Evangelists. Let everybody arrange their business and social affairs so that the meeting can be largely attended. As many as can are requested to bring tents and camp out right on the grounds, where the meeting is held. Mr. Meese has conducted a number of campmeetings in this county during the years that have pased, and in every case was rewarded with success. Further and more complete announcements later.

ADDITIONAL LOCAL.

Mr. Gary, manager of the town of Ashley, was here yesterday, getting the town plat recorded. He says the iron will be laid to Ashley, within ten days.

LOST: Between Sol. Shearer's residence and the postoffice, a pocket book with some money. Finder will confer a favor by returning it to Mr. Shearer.

The Rifles start Saturday afternoon, for the annual encampment that is held at Frankfort, Clinton county. We hope to hear a good report on their return.

The Ashley Times of last week has a map of the new town. It, the map, not the town, extends from Toledo to Chicago, and shows only the Wabash lines and their chief connections.

We have a letter from Burton F. Welles, at Pleasant Lake, complaining that the Dispatch spoke of him as a young English dude," etc., using very ungentlemanly language about Mr. Welles, as he believes. But we have not been able to find these words in the Dispatch, and so refrain from publishing Mr. Welles' reply.

Dr. Nusbaum is making a marked success in the treatment of inebriates, and has already cured a number of these unfortunates who live in Auburn, and adjacent places. Last week, he received a call from Portland, Oregon, asking if the treatment could be sent by mail. This he has done, and some hard drinker on the "Coast," will be in a short time added to the list of those he has relieved from this curse.

A late copy of the Salt Lake Herald has reached our table, and the words "Lee Gœtschius" on the margin shows who sent it. It proves not only that our friends are living but from the decided tone of the Herald, that on the political issues Lee is as sound as ever. Their friends will be glad to hear even this small item from them. And if one of them should send us a letter for publication it would be interesting of course.

Dr. D. H. Nusbaum, of Cullom, Ill., is now in the city, a guest of his cousin Dr. W. H. Nusbaum. The Doctor is a graduate of Cleveland University, as well as of the Jefferson Medical College, of Philadelphia, and the Chicago Medical College, they being among the best in the country. He has practiced medicine for eight years with marked success. If the outlook is satisfactory here, he may enter into a partnership with Dr. Nusbaum and become a resident of this place.

St. Nicholis Magazine has been getting suggestions from its readers as to a national song. "The Star-Spangled Banner" seems to have the strongest existing claim to that honor, but one young person, who objects to the words but thinks well of the music, makes the novel proposition to fit the words of "My Country 'tis of Thee" to the music of "The Star-Spangled Banner." The editor of St. Nicholis suggests that she seek some quiet place and try the effect of mixing the two very cautiously.

John W. Mathews came cack last week, from his present home, at Pullman, Wash. He is looking well and evidently prospering. He and Mr. Brickman are partners in the law business, and have built up a good practice He says that in the last year, he has had 75 cases and has lost but one. Pullman is a live town, with electric lights, water works, 15 artesian wells, one of which supplies water works for part of the town. They have three churches, a $25,000 school house, and three railroads. The country is a great wheat country, and it is near there that the famous yield of 101 bushels was cut from one acre. Mr. M., will visit his parents and the old friends a week or two, and then return.

J. A. Quince, wife and children, came up from Ft. Wayne Saturday to attend the funeral of their uncle, G. W. Hill, of Garrett. They also visited with his brother George at this place, returning home Monday.

Someone has been telling on the streets for a week or two, that the Zimmerman factory had shut down for a short time during hot weather. This proves to be a mistake; they have not stopped at all, though a very few men were laid off temporarily.

Frank Hogue drove to Angola Sunday afternoon. Wm. Wolf went with him and will drive one of Mr. Hogue's logging teams for him. He is getting out an abundance of logs now. Last week he shipped several hundred fine black walnut logs from Pettysville, Ohio on the Lake Shore road this side of Toledo.

Mrs. Geo. Schaab says some one borrowed two umbrellas from their front porch, recently, and as they are their two "Sundayest" umbrellas, she would esteem it a favor to have them returned. As the wet season seems to be over, she thinks they can now spare the umbrellas for a short time, and give the rightful owner a chance.

The Lowell Extra Superfine Ingrain Carpets are the best ingrain carpets in the world. The Foster Furniture Co., at Ft. Wayne, has the exclusive agency for these great goods. They sell them at the same price as other stores charge for makes of extra supers that can be bought of the manufacturers at five cents a yard less than Lowells. Lowell carpets hold their color better, and wear longer than any other ingrain. As they cost you no more you should buy no other.

Lovers of real poetry will read with pleasure, the poem "Two Lives," that we publish to day. Dr. Lida Leasure has not only a decided gift in this line, but an abundance of good thoughts, without which, poetry has but little to attract. Mrs. Leasure read this gem at one of the recent meetings of the Ladies' Literary Club, having prepared it for that occasion. The ladies were so well pleased, that they insisted on its publication, and we gladly give it place.

Mrs. Barns was at Angola part of last week and this, the guests of Mrs. C. H. Jackson and other friends. The editor joined them over Sunday, and can testify it is a pleasant place to stay. Their many friends here, will be pleased to know they are doing well. They have a new house, one of the neatest and most convenient we ever saw. While there we met many other friends and acquaintances, including, Wm. Brown, once at the head of the Waterloo school, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Carver, Miss Woodhull, Mrs. Scott formerly Alza Ralston of Auburn, J. W. McCrory, Nick Sherwood, Mr. Bratton, D. R. Best and many others. Angola has grown greatly in the past few years owing no doubt in part to her active business men and to the location there of a flourishing college. We took a look also at John Leasure's new residence which is right by the public square, and is a neat and convenient edifice. It will be very convenient for them, especially as Mrs. Leasure will continue the practice of medicine, for which she so thoroughly fitted herself. We assure the good people up there, that in Mr. Leasure they will find a good citizen, and Mrs. Leasure a thoroughly schooled physician, lacking in nothing, for she is not only a deep student in her chosen profession, but a lady of fine, general education and high literary talents. Angola is fortunate in these additions to her list of worthy people.

Albert E. Smith, now a resident of St. Louis, was in town this week, a guest of Dr. Adams and family. He had also visited Douglas Kelley in Smithfield and the other friends about Waterloo. He is employed in the general offices of the Missouri Pacific.

County teachers' institute is held here beginning August 22 and ending August 26. Mr. Merica has already engaged some of his lecturers, including Miss Moore, of Springfield, Ohio, and Rev. Robert Nourse, of Washington, D. C. Teachers and others interested should bear the date in mind.

Brown Clark, a former Waterloo neighbor called up to see us last Friday. He had been visiting his sister, Mrs. Elza Shaffer, at Albion, his wife's people at Angola and the old neighbors at Waterloo. Many of the latter, he found now in Auburn. His home is at St. Joseph, Mo., where he is in the hardware trade.

A Special came over from Garrett Tuesday evening to attend the social of the Pithian Sisters at Ed. Mitchell's. Over 80 were on the train, including the K. P. band of 21 pieces. The attendance of Auburn people was not very good. Surely the K. P. folks have an abundance of friends here, who should have been present.

Dr. Swarts, as a specialist for throat and similar diseases is having a large number of cases. The sudden cold turn taken by the weather last week, developed a great deal of these troubles, like catarrh in the throat and nasal passages, and he had several callers daily. He has all the apparatus for such treatment and has given it close study for years.

The Wideawake clothing store opened up in the Draggoo building south of the court house yesterday, July 20th. They have a large stock of goods, that they are bound to sell at low prices. They ask everybody to call and see their goods and get prices whether they wish to buy or not. They will welcome all who come. Don't forget the new store and new location, south of public square.

H. P. Crockett, contractor and salesman, for Maish & Gorton, Manf'g Co., and Mill Builders, of Warsaw, called at this office, Tuesday, and "impressed our till" substantially. He was proprietor of the Syracuse Flouring Mills, but lately severed his connection with that concern, and is now representing the firm above mentioned. He has been in this county and vicinity, for some time and has found several real old-fashioned mills, which he did not think were in existence, and which he will seek to repair with modern improvements. Being an expert in his line, he can be relied upon.

G. H. Yesbera went to Cleveland Monday to purchase a new stock of seasonable goods. He will show our people something fine in the merchant tailoring line on his return. He will purchase the largest stock of gents furnishing goods and the best ever shown here. He will open up his large stock about the first of September, and people who want to pick from the choicest, latest and best, can afford to wait for his grand opening. At that date the extension to his building will be completed, giving him a room 110 feet deep, the largest room for this business, in this section. Yesbera means business.

An odd thing happened last week as an indirect result of the Fourth of July festivitie. Some one had given a little girl here about twenty torpedoes which she thoughtlessly put into her pocket and carried around for several days. Last week she attempted to pass hastily through a door where someone was standing, when in doing so she struck against the side of the door in such a way as to crush the torpedoes. A heavy report followed, but neither she nor anyone present could at first tell what it was. Then the smoke began to come through her dress and an examination showed all the torpedoes had exploded leaving a handful of gravel. No harm was done except scorching the dress.

Dear housewife are you burning that youthful complexion of yours away, over the heat of a red-hot stove? Stop that folly at once and buy a nice neat and convenient Gasolene Stove, the use of which will preserve your beauty and health, so far as a stove has to do with health and good looks. J. Beuret.

There are fine lines of goods you cannot afford to buy anywhere else than of the Foster Furniture and Carpet Co., at Ft. Wayne, to wit; anything in the line of furniture; any kind of a carpet; baby carriages; lamps and decorated crockery, and sets for bedroom. They are the largest dealers in the state in these fine lines.

Master Harry Lewis, little son of our popular lumber dealer, A. Lewis, took a trip to Lakeside, this week, where he expects to remain some time visiting his grandfather and having a good time in the recreative enjoyment of a summer vacation. Though but a lad, he has the rare ideas of independence in traveling, which are commendable in a boy so young.

A man called from a buggy in front of Hebel's grocery last Saturday and asked Harry Funk to come out and take a ride. Harry stopped work, went out, got into the buggy and they started away. Instead of giving the young man a friendly ride the fellow cracked up his team and drove to the Junction, refusing to let young Funk get out, or to drive back with him. When near the Junction, Funk watched his time and sprang from the buggy and walked home. We did not learn the man's name nor did he give any reason for his scurvy trick. Funk is a respectable young fellow and don't feel very well pleased over the trick.

Word comes here that Capt. Jerry Likens' trouble out west is worse than we had supposed. It seems that, as country treasurer, he used the funds in speculations of some sort, and lost. Hence the trouble. He was arrested for embezzlement, found guilty, and sentenced to eight years. At least so the report is here. We feel sorry to hear it for as far as we know, he was always considered an honest man. Speculation is always more or less dangerous.

THE Quaystone of the Republican arch is missing this year.

MR. CARNEGIE has thrown the first brick at the Republican ticket.

THE back step of the Cleveland band-wagon is already loaded down.

THE American workingman will not be "worked" to any great extent this year.

CLARKSON will not steal the subscription list of any of the Prohibition papers this year.

THE force bill hangs about the neck of the Republican Presidential candidate like a millstone.

IF Mr. Harrison does not forgive Mr. Quay after that $10,000 bluff he must have had a cold, hard heart.

J. WHITELAW REID is the style in which it now appears. Like J. Sloat Fassett, Mr. Reid was known through the earlier period of his existence as "Jakie." In both of these cases the J stands right out for Jonah.

IF the Democrats, in 1892, carry the thirty States they carried in 1890, they will secure 357 electoral votes, the Republicans will get 73, and the Farmers' Alliance 14. The issues are the same in 1892 that they were in 1890.

AS MR. HARRISON'S new Secretary of State has not yet threatened to wallop any miserable, skulking foreign power, it begins to look as if the doors of the administration's temple of Janus might be shut and the interior turned into a receptacle for pub. docs.

THE cheerful assurance of the Republican leaders in a Republican victory next fall is based, so far as it has a basis, on the supposition that in 1890 the people were fools, and that they have been educated up to the beauty of the McKinley bill by paying high taxes on the necessaries of life.

ST. LOUIS REPUBLIC: What right had Plutocrat Carnegie to arm men with Winchesters and engage in private war against American citizens? Is this the nineteenth century, or are we getting back to the days of robber barons with their armed retainers? Have we destroyed the feudalism of aristocrats merely to substitute for it commercial feudalism?

DETROIT Free Press: The vigor with which Republican spell-binders are delving into the records of profane history to find out what they can about Adlai E. Stevenson is highly amusing. The deeper they go the more clearly is shown the wisdom of Democracy in nominating him as a clean, upright, straightforward man. The whole thing is a device for apologizing for Whitelaw Reid, but each new development of the searchers puts another scotch under Mr. Reid's wheel.

DES MOINES Leader: Every interference with trade is a check on the wheels of progress. He who tunnels a mountain, bridges a river, or in any way removes any impediment to the freest intercourse between people is a public benefactor. And he who in any way puts up a barrier to commerce is a public enemy. The people are beginning to see this, and when they do see it in its fullness they will bury the opponents of a tariff for revenue only so deep there will never be a resurrection.

CHICAGO TIMES: Republican organs in Iowa should be careful how they stir up the ire of the People's party candidate for President. It is unsafe to provoke one who knows so much of Republican campaign methods. If Mr. Weaver should tell all he knows of the sources from which he drew campaign funds for his Southern tour in 1880 there might be trouble in the pious camp. Or if he should tell of the funds flowing for General Butler in 1884 from the Finance Committee of the Republican party in the Fifth Avenue Hotel, high-tariff organs might conclude that silence would have served them better.

THE Rocky Mountain News (Democratic) refuses to support Cleveland. It will throw its influence to the People's party. When it is remembered that Colorado is a Republican strong hold, it will be seen that victory for the People's party as against Republicanism in that State will inure to the benefit of Democracy.

THERE is one tariff journal, at least, which knows what duties are imposed for and is not afraid to accept the logic of a tariff like the McKinley act. The Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph says that England has to import a large quantity of breadstuffs and that "any duty it may impose on those imports must necessarily go into the price it must pay for them." But according to the Republican platform the imposition of the duty ought to bring down the price to the British consumer; and according to McKinley it should make no difference to him, because the exporter pays the duty.

CARNEGIE and the other robber barons would look with dismay upon the prospect of Democratic success. As was well said by Chairman Wilson in his opening speech to the Chicago convention: "Whoever may be your chosen leader in this campaign, no cablegram will flash across the sea from the castle of absentee tariff lords to congratulate him." Such congratulations come only to the nominees of Republican conventions. But while Carnegie and other tariff lords congratulated Harrison and Reid in June, the honest workingmen whom they have deceived and outraged may contribute not a little to the betterment of their own conditions by voting for Cleveland and Stevenson in November.

MR. CLEVELAND has written a letter disapproving of the use of his wife's name by the Frances Cleveland Influence Club of New York. He claims that the name is too sacred in the home circle, and means so much to him as wife and mother, that it should be spared in the organization and operation of clubs designed to exert political influence. The sentiment does him great credit, and will be echoed in the heart of every true woman in the land. Besides, while Grover is fully aware of the importance of woman's co-operation, he knows that the battle of next November is to be fought on other grounds than those of mere sentiment. The tariff's the thing, and Mr. Carnegie has aroused all the feeling necessary for Democratic success.

MEMPHIS APPEAL-AVALANCHE: The Chicago Inter Ocean continues to assert that one-half the legal voters are not allowed to cast a vote, or if they are permitted to cast a vote, it is not counted. Why the Inter Ocean stultifies itself by circulating such a self-evident and clumsy lie we do not understand. If it will refer to the returns for 1888 and 1890 it will see that Harrison got in the Southern States, excluding Texas, nearly 1,000,000 votes, while the Democratic candidates for Congress two years afterward, when the force bill threatened the South, secured only about 1,100,000. Yet there are two whites to one negro in the South, and the great majority of the whites are Democrats. Will the Inter Ocean explain how, in view of these facts, half of the legal voters are not allowed to cast a vote, or the vote is not counted, when the count in the Southern States, excepting Texas, gives Harrison almost as many votes as the Democratic candidates for Congress received in 1890?

THERE is great unanimity of silence among the Republican exchanges on the subject of the Carnegie murders. When an organ does refer to the matter it is always in an effort to prove that there was no politics in the war at Homestead; that the slaughter at Fort Frick was only the result of a "family quarrel," in which the public has no interest. Such reasoning is on a line with Mr. Blaine's famous contention that "trusts are largely private affairs." Unfortunately for the Republican party, the ordinary run of humanity is not at home in the specious logic of the high-tariff economists. The people understand facts. Mr. Carnegie is the bright and shining apostle of protection. He contributed liberally to the Republican campaign fund, and he has been awarded large contracts by the Government. He has written articles for the magazines on the beauties of protection. Nevertheless, he deliberately fortifies his works, reduces wages and hires an army of men to subjugate and shoot down his workmen. There may be no logical connection between Mr. Carnegie's theories and the Homestead war, but there is not time between now and November for the Republican organs to convince the voters of the fact. Mr. Harrison is described as extremely nervous over what he calls Mr. Carnegie's obstinacy, and well he may be. In the Fort Frick murders he sees his own defeat and the downfall of protection.

CARNEGIE CARNAGE.

IT WAS THE FIRST GUN OF THE CAMPAIGN.

The "Protection to American Workmen" Farce Demonstrates Itself—Republicans in a Reckless State of Demoralization—Three Great Issues.

By Its Fruits.

At the time when the Carnegie-Pinkerton assassins were shooting down American workingmen at Homestead Benjamin Harrison and various members of the fat-frying National Republican Committee were in session at the White House. They were discussing a new campaign in the interest of the protective tariff and its thieving beneficiaries. They were considering the question of leadership, the question of ways and means and the question of public deception. Who was to be chairman? What man among them was most likely to fry the fat out of the Carnegies? What sums could be wrung from this industry and that? What new lies could be circulated to mislead the ignorant and frighten the timid?

At the crisis of this interesting council a telegram from Homestead announced that the slaughter had begun and, as one telegram put it, "a deep frown settled on the President's face and his associates eyed each other in silence." There was no more discussion that day. The conference ended abruptly without result, and the questions which it had been called to settle were left unacted upon. And no wonder. The dead and mangled bodies of American workingmen—the victims of protective tariff delusion and of protective tariff rifles—would strike speechless even men of greater hardihood than Benjamin Harrison. He knew, and his white-faced associates knew, that in the deliberate judgment of mankind every gaping wound at Homestead would speak to the moral sense of the world in tones of thunder against the folly and the crime of protectionism.

The dead and wounded at Homestead are the fruits of the protective tariff delusion and crime as truly as the mankilling and child-stealing of ante-bellum days were the fruits of the slavery delusion and crime. Every rifle and every bludgeon used in Pennsylvania was urged by passion aroused by that prolific source of all uncharitableness—the monopoly tariff. It sets man against man. It deceives the laborer and then robs and murders him. It promises a division of its plunder and then reviles the poor dupe who asks that its pledges be kept. It vauntingly proclaims its paternal regard for labor and then answers labor's demands at the muzzle of a Winchester. It employs one class of bread-winners to make war upon another class, and when the cries of the widow and orphan fill the land, its beneficiaries, financial and political, sneak away to castles in Scotland or to the fastnesses of the Adirondacks that their eyes may not see and their ears may not hear! Blood is offensive to nice people. When it is spilled in their interest they prefer to be out of range.

The lies of the Ben Harrisons, the Bill McKinleys, the Tom Reeds, the Joe Forakers, and all the lesser supporters of the tariff iniquity have done this thing. They knew they were lying when they said the tariff was not a tax. They knew they were lying when they told workingmen that a high tariff made high wages. They knew they were lying when they threatened the poor and the ignorant with "pauper wages" if they voted for free trade. They knew they were lying when they proclaimed the monstrous falsehood that the foreigner paid a tax. They knew they were lying when they promised labor any benefit from the tariff that was designedly laid to produce millionaires, out of whose greasy hides they could fry fat. They now slink away to their summer retreats because they know that their lies are all exposed.

The election of Abraham Lincoln in 1864 was not more necessary to the cause of American freedom than is the election in 1892 of Cleveland and Stevenson. In the presence of wrongs like these, in the face of villainy such as that of the Carnegies, in the shadow of murder and oppression such as that at Homestead, there can be but two parties in this country—one for and one against the devilish greed that afflicts the republic like a pestilence, and is hurrying it at break-neck speed to physical, moral and political death.—Chicago Herald.

"Never Knew Defeat."

In their reckless state of demoralization the Republicans are making all kinds of unwarranted claims with a faint hope of regaining lost ground, or at least making a stand against the overwhelming and exultant rush of the Democracy. The pliant minions who forced the nomination of Harrison at Minneapolis are now proclaiming that their leader is a soldier and a statesmen who never knew defeat. It is possible that the memories of these henchmen who use public time and money for Republican campaign purposes are somewhat abbreviated, or their knowledge of the country's history may be somewhat defective, but judged by the other questionable methods they are employing, it is but fair to infer that they are trying to hoodwink the people.

These salaried shouters are respectfully referred to the annals of 1876, a somewhat memorable year in the country's record. It is not only recalled as a centennial, but it was the year in which the lamented Samuel J. Tilden carried the country by a quarter of a million majority of the popular vote, and had the Presidency stolen by shrewd political manipulators of the g. o. p. who delivered it to one Rutherford B. Hayes.

At that time Indiana was an October as well as a pivotal State. The Republicans were determined to carry the earlier election for the effect it would have upon the national contest to be determined the month following. The Democrats had selected for their leader a sturdy, honest, level-headed Congressmen whose sound ideas of economy and straightforward manner of dealing with public interests had not been impaired by evil associations in Washington. He was one of the plain people, a loyal champion of their cause, who came to be known to the country as Blue Jeans Williams.

The Republicans pitted against him Congressman Orth, but he had led too fast a life to meet the sober approval of Hoosierdom, and Benjamin Harrison was substituted by the Republicans to make the gubernatorial race. The fight was fast and furious from start to finish. When it was over with, Harrison was laid out colder than the world's charity. That was the fate of "a soldier and a statesman who never knew defeat." His acquaintance with it will be grealty enlarged in November.—Free Press.

Three Great Issues.

The Democracy derives not a little comfort and encouragement from the knowledge that its candidates for President and Vice President will experience no difficulty in standing squarely upon the platform adopted by the Chicago convention. Each of the nominees may be said to embody in his own person the cardinal principles of the party, thus establishing perfect harmony between the ticket and the platform.

The three great issues which the Democratic party makes in the pending campaign and on which it intends that the contest shall be fought to a finish are as follows: 1. The robber tariff must go. 2. There must be no force bill in this country to overthrow peaceable elections and destroy free government at the South. 3. There must be no degradation of the money standard of the nation.

The three gigantic evils which the Democracy proposes to combat zealously and aggressively are all of Republican origin and each is supported, either wholly or in large part, by rabid Republicans or men whose political antecedents were Republican. The iniquitous doctrine of protection was nurtured in the rock-ribbed Republican commonwealth of Pennsylvania, and is to-day upheld and encouraged by the monopolists and tariff barons of that highly protected State.

The idea of the force bill originated in the minds of Johnny Davenport, a New York boss; John M. Langston, a Virginia negro; Albion W. Tourgee, a wandering agitator; Thomas B. Reed, a political despot; and Henry Cabot Lodge, a puritanic theorist, who are one and all bright and shining lights in the Republican party. In the case of the ebony-hued Langston there may be some question as to his "bright and shining" qualities, but the genuineness of his Republicanism is beyond dispute. The Minneapolis platform likewise commits the Republican party to the support of the force bill.

The agitation which disturbs the financial system of the country had its source in the silver-producing States of the West which have never given Democratic majorities and can never be reasonably expected to do so. It is palpable, therefore, that the Democracy in its fight on the great questions which divide the voters in this campaign discovers the Republican party as the common enemy at every point. Under these circumstances, every friend of a revenue tariff, of home rule and free institutions and of honest finance is expected to rally under the banner inscribed with the names of Cleveland and Stevenson.

Carnegie to Harrison.

There was bloodshed, tumult, disorder, oppression, anarchy at Homestead. But there came no word from Andrew Carnegie.

The Minneapolis convention named its candidate, and quick as lightning was the message from Andrew J. Carnegie at Sunningdale, Scotland, to Benjamin Harrison at Washington:

"The American people know a good thing when they get it. Heartiest congratulations. You deserve this triumph."

Why was Carnegie thus swift? When in 1890 more than 1,000,000 majority of the popular vote declared against the monstrous system of protection-run-mad under which the Carnegies become forty-millionaires and American labor is denied its promised share in tariff spoliation Benjamin Harrison, defying the voice of the people, officially declared to the Reed Congress that the McKinley law must stand.

Hence these swift congratulations to Harrison.

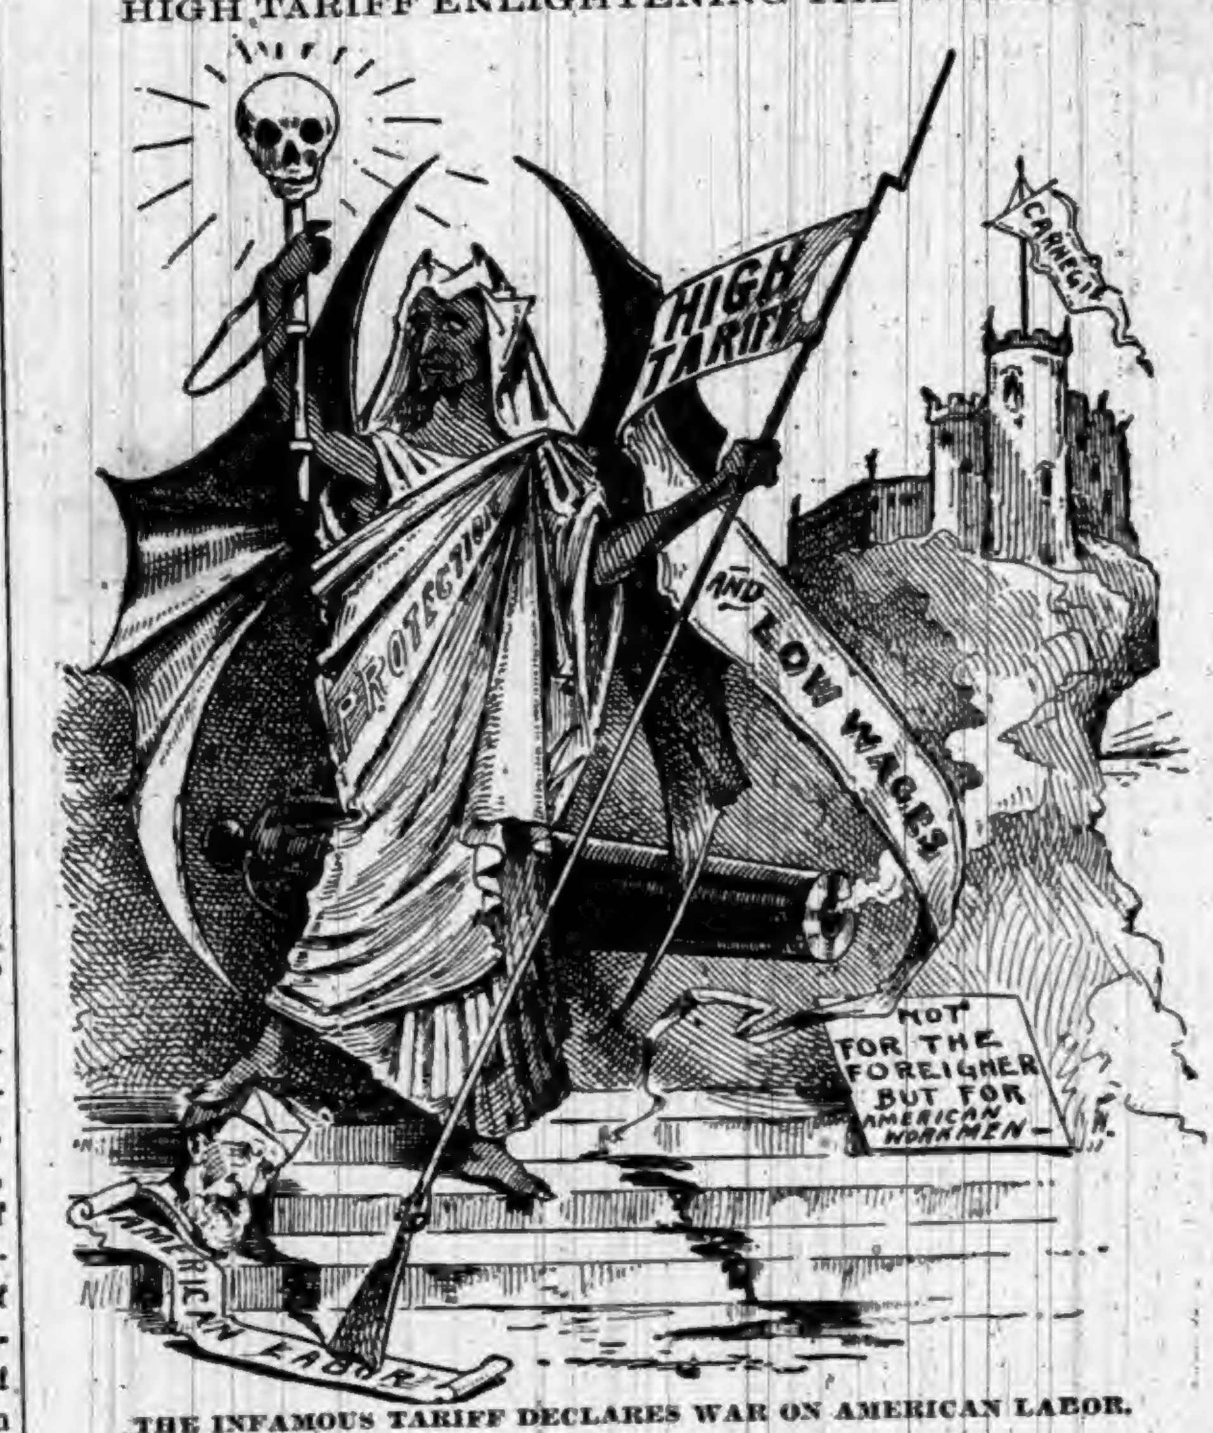
SEVENTEEN and 15 years were the respective ages of a young couple who eloped and got married at Edgefield, S. C., one day recently.

Every sin is a big one, no matter how small it looks.

HIGH TARIFF ENLIGHTENING THE WORLD.



THE INFAMOUS TARIFF DECLARES WAR ON AMERICAN LABOR.
—Chicago Herald.

M'LUCKIE IS IN JAIL.

Manager Frick Now Begins the War in Earnest.

Monday was the most exciting day at Homestead since the battle between the strikers and the Pinkertons. The boast of Chairman Frick that work would be resumed in the mill by non-union men was not realized, but the Chief Burgess of Homestead, John McLuckie, is in the Allegheny County Jail charged with murder, and warrants are out for several other strike leaders. The Carnegie official states that other strikers will be prosecuted from day to day until all who have been prominent in the trouble at Homestead have been punished or forced to leave the country, and the strikers claim that within twenty-four hours Chairman Frick and other officers of the Carnegie company will be arrested on the charge of murder.

The informations against the strike leaders were made by Secretary F. T. F. Lovejoy, of the Carnegie Company, and were made against Hugh O'Donnell, the leader of the strikers; John McLuckie, Burgess of Homestead; Sylvester Critchlow, Anthony Flaherty, Samuel Burkett, James Flannagan and Hugh Ross, who are collectively charged with the murder of T. J. Connors and Silas Wayne the morning of July 6 during the riot. Connors was a Pinkerton man, 30 years of age, and lived at 80 Bond street, New York. He was struck on the back of the head with a dynamite bomb and had his right arm crushed. Wayne was a young single workman who lived with his parents in Homestead. He had his head shot off with a cannon ball fired from the opposite side of the river while standing with his brother in the steel yard. There are two separate informations against the defendants, and only vary in the names of the victims.

A short time later Burgess McLuckie appeared at Ald. McMaster's office and announced that he was ready to answer the charge of murder preferred against him. The Alderman then had a commitment issued, and he was placed in jail. Before going to jail McLuckie said he courted a thorough investigation. The other defendants, he said, had not left the city to escape arrest, and that all would be on hand.

WEIHE WANTS AN OFFICE.

The Ex-President of the Amalgamated Association a Candidate for Congress.

Pittsburg dispatch: William Weihe, the retiring President of the Amalgamated Association of the United Steel Workers, will be the Democratic candidate for Congress in the Twenty-second District. For some time past a few of the Democratic leaders have been pulling the wires to get a candidate who would be considered a formidable opponent to John Dalzell. The field has been carefully examined and the availability and political strength of a number of Democrats has been weighed and it was not till yesterday that Mr. Weihe was announced as the Moses to lead the Democratic hosts through the wilderness. He was chosen because of his influence in labor circles. When Mr. Weihe stated that he would retire from the presidency of the local labor organization it was alleged he would enter politics, but some of his friends denied the report.

WM. WEIHE.

The report to make Mr. Weihe the Democratic Congressional candidate has been closely guarded. Several weeks ago W. J. Brennen, Chairman of the Democratic County Committee, said that his party would have a candidate to oppose Mr. Dalzell, but he positively refused to give the name of the man selected. Last evening, however, a reporter obtained positive information that Mr. Weihe was the candidate.

GREETED BY GROVER.

Cleveland and Stevenson Meet at Buzzard's Bay.

General Adlai E. Stevenson has arrived at Buzzard's Bay, says a dispatch. He had a hard trip from New York, and was tired and travel-stained when the Old Colony train from Boston pulled into the little junction station. With the General was W. G. Ewing, of Chicago, the ex-United States District Attorney, and a New York newspaper representative. Grover Cleveland drove over from Gray Gables villa to meet them, and stood chatting with a friend when the train came to a stop. General Stevenson stepped out and looked about with a dejected air as if disappointed at something, but this was only for an instant. Grover had caught a glimpse of Adlai's tall form in the crowd down the platform, and, hurrying down, grasped the Illinoisan's arm, saying: "How are you, General?" The General turned and gave the ex-President a quick glance, and, thrusting out his long arm, met Grover's, and a hearty clasp ensued as the General said: "I am glad to see you."

Mr. Ewing was quietly introduced, and the party stood several moments waiting for the train to pull out. Mr. Cleveland was recognized by several, but none seemed to know the tall man with the tired look and the air of a Westerner. Mr. Cleveland took his guests to his private carriage out in the highway and, after seating the General, sprang up beside him, Mr. Ewing finding a seat with the coachman, and they were driven rapidly down the village street to Gray Gables.

TEXAS FEVER IN KANSAS.

The Disease Spread by a Drove of Long Horns in Lyon County.

Emporia (Kan.) special: Texas cattle fever has broken out in a bad form in this county. Recently about 2,300 head of Texas cattle came in over the Missouri, Kansas and Texas Road to Mr. Brogan, of Hartford, and were driven across the southern part of Lyons County to Mr. Brogan's range in Chase County. Along the road over which these Texas cattle were driven the native cattle began to die of Texas fever. Up to Sunday last fifty head had died and about that many more were down sick. Yesterday and to-day Mr. Hurst, of the State Sanitary Commission, Sheriff Evans and S. V. Bitler, Chairman of the Lyon County Board of Commissioners, made an examination of the infected region, and established a quarantine along the route traveled by these cattle. The distance these cattle were driven through the country was about twenty-five miles. A quarantine was established not only along the route, but over such sections and pieces of ground as the Texas fever breeders were allowed to graze. It is believed that the measures taken will be effective and the spread of the fever prevented.

VICTIMS OF THE RIOT.

Another Pinkerton Detective and Another Striker Die from Their Wounds.

Two more deaths have have resulted at Pittsburgh from the Homestead riot. One is a Pinkerton detective from Chicago named Edward Sheer, who was shot in leg during the battle of the barges, and was taken to the West Pennsylvaina hospital. The other is George W. Rutter, an employe at the Homestead steel works, who was shot at the same time and died at the Homeopathic hospital.

What Your Great Grandmother Did.

She hetcheled the flax and carded the wool, and wove the linen, and spun the tow, and made the clothes for her husband and ten children. She made butter and cheese, she dipped tallow candles, to light the house at night, and she cooked all the food for her household by an open fire place and a brick oven. Yes; and when she was forty years of age, she was already an old lady whose best days were over. Her shoulders were bent and her joints enlarged by hard work, and she wore spectacles and a cap.

Her great granddaughter, with all the modern conveniences for comfort, refinement and luxury, may be as charming and attractive at forty-five as at twenty. Especially is this true if she preserves her health by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, which wards off all female ailments and irregularities, cures them if they already exist, keeps the life current healthful and vigorous, and enables the woman of middle age to retain the freshness of girlhood upon brow and cheek, the light of youth in her eyes, and its elasticity in her step.

Go to your drug store, pay a dollar, get a bottle and try it—try a second, a third if necessary. Before the third one's been taken you'll know that there's a remedy to help you. Then you'll keep on and a cure'll come.

The Robber Tariff Speaks Through the Five Thousand Locked-Out Workmen at Homestead, Pa.—Wage Reductions All Along the Line.

Wage Reductions in Iron Mills.

The following, from the Iron Age of June 23, 1892, will give some idea of the enormity of the wage reductions proposed by the iron and steel manufacturers and presented in the form of an ultimatum to the Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers:

The price for bar rolling and heating, 2,240 pounds to the ton, has been cut down from 70 to 50 cents on a 2-cent card; for boiling, from $5.50 to $4.50; for rolling common iron on plate mills, from 72 to 50 cents. Put in tabular form some of the reductions appear as follows:

It is no wonder that 5,000 men are now out at the Homestead Works of Carnegie, Phipps & Co., and that many more thousands are on strike in other iron mills. For several years Carnegie and others have been steadily reducing wages, and importing laborers to make reductions permanent. But never before has the situation been so precarious as now, when wages are cut in two and a death-blow is aimed at the Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers. These men are making a determined resistance, but their fate is in the hands of the multi-millionaires, who can, if need be, let their mills rot, and live the balance of their lives in luxury on the tariff profits made during the last twenty years. Neither they nor their children need ever want for either necessaries or luxuries. But the iron workers, they can hold out at best but a few months. Their only hope for salvation now is that the Republican administration shall put its present request in the form of a demand that peace be patched up in some way, at least until after the election, and that no government troops will be allowed to protect imported laborers even while they are at work upon government contracts now in the hands of Carnegie, Phipps & Co. These are the bitter fruits of "protection" which Pennsylvania workingmen must eat.

Consumers Never Petition Congress.

The American Economist asks, with a great deal of satisfaction, "will the 'reformer' please tell us why the only petition for free wool came from a few selfish free raw-material manufacturers?" and adds as a clincher to this question: "We should think that if the object of the measure were really to provide cheaper clothing for the masses, petitions asking for its passage would have come in from all sections of the country, bearing the signatures of thousands of poor, taxed consumers. But this was not so."

It might be inferred from the way in which the question is put that duties are charged only at the request of consumers, and not at the behest of selfish manufacturers. Nothing could be farther from the truth. The effects upon the consumer are spread out over so many, and the myriad of those upon whom the tariff bears most heavily—the poor—understand so little the cause of their burdens that petitions seldom, if ever, come from this class. It is those who are to be benefited by protective tariffs—rich, selfish, grasping manufacturers—it is these comparatively few who petition Congress and send paid attorneys to the lobbies, and who, by bribes and threats, get the duty that will rob each of the 65,000,000 consumers of but a few cents or dollars, but which will put thousands or millions of dollars into their pockets. For instance the ½ cent duty per pound on refined sugar is now costing each consumer only about 40 cents per year—so trifling a sum to each that no petition against the duty has ever been presented to Congress, and yet it means an extra profit of $25,000,000 a year to the eighteen or twenty refiners who compose the sugar trust. And it is these latter who have always appeared in the lobbies and committee rooms of Congress in opposition to any restriction of duty. It is the fear of this trust that now prevents both parties from removing a duty which produces no revenue. The Democratic Ways and Means Committee would gladly remove it, but they believe a free sugar bill could not pass the Senate and would only enable the Republicans to "fry the fat" out of this trust during the campaign.

The Economist knows well enough that this is the regular order of procedure and hence its pretended surprise is only to deceive its credulous readers.

At Its Old Tricks.

The Iron Age, of June 30, announces another advance in the price of shot of 5 cents per twenty-five pound bags. It was only June 2 that a similar advance was announced, and it was only a year ago that another advance was made. Ten large manufacturers, protected by a duty of 2½ cents per pound, have had a trust in shot since Sept. 5, 1890, and they propose to work their protection for all it is worth. The whole ammunition business is McKinleyized and trusted so that every explosion helps to swell the profits of some trust. Shoot with paper shells and the Loaded Paper Shell and Powder Trusts are benefited. Shoot bullets or shot and the Lead, Smelters' and Powder Trusts all reap protected profits. Shoot with cartridges and the Cartridge Trust, which has advanced prices 99 per cent. since it was formed in 1883, takes 50 per cent. of the cost of your cartridges as a protected profit—unless you buy the same brands in Canada for 25 per cent. less. Shoot off fire crackers on the Fourth of July and the Powder Trust will make a protected profit out of your noisy patriotism. Go down into the bowels of the earth and explode a gallon of nitroglycerine in your oil well and the High Explosive Trust will hunt you up and mand a tariff tax of you. All of these trusts will tell you that this is a free country and a blessed country.

"Rising Wages and Falling Prices."

The American Economist, the leading high tariff organ, of April 15, 1892, gives the following lucid explanation of how manufacturers can exist in the face of "rising wages and falling prices:"

"The condition which exists all around us—that of rising wages and falling prices—is not an anomalous one, but is the natural and logical result of the home competition started into being by the protective tariff, which guards alike the interests of the manufacturer, laborer and consumer—of the first, by increasing his total earnings; of the second, by raising the wages received for his work; and of the last, by reducing the prices of the articles he buys." Such logical deductions as this ought to please the most fastidious manufacturer. It should be repeated in unison by Carnegie's 4,000 iron workers while they stand idle out of reach of the hot water hose that now holds the fort.

Steel Rail Prices.

Stories have been in circulation for several days to the effect that there was to be a break in the price of steel rails. These stories had their rise in the gathering in this city of a number of prominent rail manufacturers. They appeared here suddenly on Tuesday, disappeared mysteriously in a body on Wednesday, and reappeared yesterday, with the result that the alley fronting Trinity Church was full of dark rumors. They were, however, without foundation.

The manufacturers, who held a regular monthly meeting, had converted their June meeting into a picnic and gone down to Sparrow Point, near Baltimore, to inspect the new Maryland mill of the Pennsylvania Steel Company. During their trip they drank champagne, ate soft-shell crabs, and interchanged views on the iron and steel market, and agreed to maintain the price of steel rails which has prevailed for a year.

Steel rails now sell for $30 per ton, and the manufacturers declare that their profits are only of reasonable size. The manufacturers banded themselves informally together ten years ago, but it was not until a year ago that they formed a cast-iron verbal agreement to hold prices up. They control the situation, and are free from competition. Those composing the combination are the Illinois Steel Company, Carnegie Brothers & Co., the Cambria Iron Company, the Bethlehem Steel Company, and the Lackawanna Iron and Steel Company. The following table shows how the combination has been able to keep up the price per ton of steel rails in the face of a strong decline in the price of pig iron:

Pig iron	$18.00	$18.85	$15.25	$14.00
Steel rails	29.25	31.75	29.92	30.00

The price of English rails, delivered in America (after paying the duty of $13.44 per ton) is now about $35 per ton. The American manufacturers say their profits, at $30 per ton, is only from $2 to $2.50 per ton.

It was said yesterday at the office of Carnegie Brothers & Co. that the price of steel rails would remain as at present.

B. G. Clark, of the Lackawanna Iron and Steel Company, made a similar statement. "The market is not active," he said. "The six manufactories which control the situation have a combined capacity of 3,000,000 tons of steel rails per year. I shall be surprised if their combined output this year aggregates over 1,200,000 tons. The outlook is not bright. The trouble with the railroads is that they don't seem to have money with which to buy rails."—New York Times, June 24, 1892.

McKinley Crops.

The stimulating and invigorating effects of McKinleyism are nowhere more marked than they are upon the weather and crops in the United States as compared with other nations. Last year it gave us tremendous crops of wheat, corn and cotton and by blasting the crops of Europe gave us good prices for corn and wheat. This year we are promised a repetition of this same arrangement. Bradstreet's estimates that our crop of wheat this year, including 70,000,000 reserved from last year's crop, will be 620,000,000 bushels, which, after deducting 368,000,000 bushels for seed and consumption, will leave 252,000,000 bushels for export and reserves—about the same as for last year. The next important question is, will Europe pay big prices for this surplus? As Russia has not yet recovered from last year's blighting effects of the McKinley bill, and has neither sufficient seed left for sowing nor animals for harvesting, and as a drought in France is doing great injury (in spite of her attempt to imitate McKinleyism), the prospects are that prices will be high. About the only doubt as to this conclusion comes from India, where fair crops are reported, and from the Argentine Republic, where immense grain crops are reported, which will be exported to compete with our grains in all parts of the world. notwithstanding that Blaine, with his reciprocity programme, is reported to have found markets for "barrels of flour" in this same South American country.

Mr. Roswell G. Horr, of the New York Tribune, said recently, "I do not claim that the tariff on wheat in the United States at the present time will have very much bearing upon its price, so long as we export that article largely."

The American Economist, another great high tariff authority, expressed this same opinion on March 4, 1892. The modesty of these authorities which prevents them from claiming that all favorable weather, high prices for farm products, and prosperity of every kind is due to protection, should not deter the farmer from making a careful investigation of this as yet poorly understood subject.

Protection "Forever."

The American Economist, which says its "readers are numbered by the millions," is conducting an educational bureau to give protectionist speakers and leaders "tips" as to how to reply to free traders' questions. Here is question No. 21, with the Economist's reply:

"How long should a protective duty on an article be retained?"

"Forever. It finally abolishes itself, and as it then harms no one, it should be retained to guard against future exigencies and future dangers."

The Economist should have given a few illustrations to make this economic fact clear to a few of its millions of readers who, though they may have equally acute minds, yet are untrained in economic thinking. Perhaps we can assist it. Suppose, for instance, that a farmer has a barbed wire fence in a particularly dangerous place. After it has killed all of his farm animals that had spunk enough to run against it with any considerable degree of force, it will "then harm no one," but "it should be retained to guard against future exigencies," when the farmer shall have obtained a new supply of really live animals. Or suppose that owing to imperfect plumbing which allows sewer gas to escape in the house, the proprietor is bereft of his wife and children; the unsanitary plumbing will then "harm no one," but nevertheless "it should be retained to guard against future exigencies"—such as a second marriage might incur.

Great Authorities Differ.

The American Economist, the "protectionists' Bible," said on April 15, 1892, "99 per cent. of the great fortunes that do exist here have been amassed in pursuits that are not touched by the tariff."

The New York Tribune used to talk in this way, and to prove that it really believed what it said it some time ago set about preparing a list of the millionaires in this country, classified as to the manner in which they had made the bulk of their fortunes. The list as completed recently shows that out of 4,095 millionaires 1,176 owe their wealth mainly to protected industries. Will the Economist note these figures and revise its estimates, or will it continue its glaring false assertions irrespective of protectionist statistics?

Senator Vest's Broadside.

Tariff items of late are not entirely satisfactory to Republicans who worship at the shrine of "Protection." The Democrats have boldly declared that the system is a superstition and a sham. The Prohibitionists have done the same; and the Alliance and Labor platform will follow suit.

Something must be done to stem the tide setting in against "Protection." Republicans must not be content with trying to refute "free trade" and "Cobden Club lies," but must do some aggressive work themselves. Spurred on by such sentiments as these Senator Hale, on July 28, concluded to "force the fighting," and as a prelude to his challenge to the Democrats, he recited that at "no time has so large a proportion of the American people been employed at so high wages and purchasing the necessities and comforts of life at so low prices as in the year 1892." Then he proceeded to shoot at the wicked Democrats as recklessly as a boy with a new pop-gun shoots at flies. After firing blank charges at "British doctrine," "balance of trade," "high prices," "low wages," etc., and triumphantly announcing that "the Republicans of the United States gladly accept the issue presented," he sat down ignorant of the fact that every shot had hit a hornet's nest.

Tariff reformers of late have not been satisfied with mere theoretical reasoning, no matter how well founded their theories may be. They have taken the trouble to collect some facts to substantiate their claims. Senator Vest happened to have a desk full of these un-Republican things. He had, in the first place, twenty-one samples of dry goods—coat linings, women's and children's dress goods, cotton sheets, corduroys, etc.—prepared by a big New York merchant, showing that these goods, though the foreign price has declined since 1890, are sold higher here now than then—in some cases 20 per cent. higher. In the second place he had a few facts in regard to the increased duty on pearl buttons, cutlery, tin plate, etc., and the increased prices on the same. Next he had a list prepared by J. Schoenhof, ex-Consul to Tunstall, England, giving the labor cost of producing thirty-nine articles in America and England—the cost in all but eight cases being lower in this country, in spite of our higher wages. Then he had a list of one hundred tariff trusts, prepared by Hon. John De Witt Warner, of the Reform Club, and just printed as a supplement to the New York World. H also had a list of 250 wage reductions, strikes, etc., in protected industries since October, 1890, prepared by the same gentleman for Reform Club use, and to be printed when completed in the New York Weekly World.

Loaded with these and similar facts, Senator Vest did some cannonading that silenced the Republican popguns. After he had poured out enough of these facts to fill thirty pages of the Congressional Record, and the smoke of battle began to clear away, Senator Hale found courage to say to Vest that they had trusts in England also and that "before this debate closes, the demonstration will be given to the Senate showing his inaccuracy." Senator Vest inquired, "why not give it now?" But Hale's ammunition was out, and he was compelled to retreat, saying "that was not my original purpose." Perhaps he will bring more ammunition and renew the battle. Perhaps he will prepare a list of 250 increases of wages in protected industries since the McKinley bill became a law. Perhaps he will write up one hundred trusts in England that have raised prices there—from 25 to 50 per cent.—and that sell goods cheaper to foreigners than at home. Perhaps he will produce several hundred foreign manufacturers and merchants to testify that they are regularly paying our tariff taxes. Perhaps he will be able to show that we are making all our own tin-plate and that the price is lower than ever before. Perhaps he will demonstrate that a duty on moonshine would build up a green cheese industry here. Just now, however, he admits his weakness and lack of facts on these points.

New Use for the World's Fair.

The Single Tax Club, of Chicago, has sent a letter to Geo. R. Davis, Director General of the World's Fair, requesting that "on foreign exhibits of dutiable goods at the World's Fair the selling price in the country from which the goods are exported, the transportation charges from point of origin to Chicago, and the selling price in Chicago be stated separately, so that visitors may be enlightened in reference to the influence of our present system of tariff taxation and find out who pays the duty." The Director General will undoubtedly comply with this request, as he, on June 29, notified the Secretary of State that placards giving foreign and American prices would be permitted on foreign exhibits.

Republicans will welcome this opportunity to demonstrate the fact that the tariff tax is paid by foreigners. If these placards will show that a box of window glass that sells for $2.60 in Europe sells for $2.50 here, after paying $3 duty, and that woolen cloths that sell for 50 cents per yard in England sell for no more here after paying 63½ cents duty, then McKinley will hold some trump cards, and his claim will be substantiated. If, however, they should show that duties are added to the foreign cost before Americans can possess foreign-made goods, then the Democrats would come to the front and McKinley would have to take a back seat. It is a pity that the fair does not occur before the Presidential election.

ACCORDING to European arithmetics twenty-five years ago, they nearly all wrote a billion thus: 1,000,000,000,000. That plan has been falling so rapidly into disuse that the last edition of Chambers' Encyclopedia says that with the exception of Great Britain and its colonies, and where it controls, this plan has now been abandoned, and the billion is to-day written and taught as it is in America, namely: 1,000,000,000 is one billion. Many middle-aged men from Europe were in childhood taught that a billion was 1,000,000,000,000, while the same schools now teach it as 1,000,000,000.

WHEN ability to steal depends upon individual activities, some measure of respect for skill involuntarily accompanies the condemnation. But when the power of government is invoked to help the larceny, we despise the transaction regardless of the tax protection which tariff systems are decorated with.

THE less we pay for what we need the greater the shriek of the tariffites. Did it rain good things we would all be out of work. Heavens! protectionist editor, what more do you want? You're chained to the desk now.—St. Louis Courier, June 25, 1892.

THE rejected reciprocity timber is now the plank on which Harrison relies to float him safely through the raging waves raised by the anti-tariff storm.

A Southern California Horse Farm.

Ex-Governor Leland Stanford's breeding farm for horses at Palo Alto, is one of the most complete establishments of the kind in the world. Of the seventeen hundred acres in the place, one hundred are occupied by the stables, barns, and small paddocks. The buildings, at the foot of a gentle rise of ground, make a small city by themselves, inhabited by a population of nearly five hundred, who return hither from their business on the pastures and race tracks, and have two hundred persons employed in their domestic service. The spacious barns are uniformly floored and ceiled up with redwood—a handsome material, which resembles cedar in effect. They are strewn with the freshest straw, and kept as neat as the most unexceptionable drawing-rooms.

Scions from the stock here raised, which represents the best thoroughbred and trotting strains in the country, are likely to be a most important influence in improving the breed of horses throughout the Pacific coast. It was here that curious experiments were conducted, at the expense of Governor Stanford, for arriving at a better understanding of the speed of horses by photographing them in rapid motion. The photographer, Muybridge, of San Francisco, succeeded by an ingenious arrangement of electrical wires, communicating at the touch of the animal with cameras already prepared, in securing twelve distinct views of the different stages of a single stride. The attitudes are of the most unexpected and curious sort, some of them highly comic.

Great pains are taken in the raising and training of the young colts. From the time of foaling the colts are handled gently and constantly, and are made as familiar with the touch of harness as they are with that of human hands. As a natural consequence they are perfectly tame, gentle, and even affectionate, and never need breaking. The effect of this system of training has been apparent in the performances of some of the colts which have been publicly speeded against time. The first notable exhibition of speed by a Palo Alto colt was made on the Bay District Association track at San Francisco in 1880, when the two-year-old colt Fred Crocker lowered the record for a one-mile trot to 2:25½. Last year Bonita, a two-year-old filly from Palto Alto, cut the record down to 2:24½; and later, at the same trotting exhibition, Wildflower, another two-year-old from the same farm, made the mile in 2:21; and Hinda Rose, a yearling filly, on the same day added to the fame of the farm by cutting down the yearling record to 2:36½. It is asserted that there are colts on the farm which can do even better.—W. H. Bishop in Harper's Magazine.

Earthquakes as Life Preservers.

The theory that the earth's internal heat is a residue of its former molten condition is losing advocates, and the idea is gradually gaining ground that the existence of internal heat, as manifested in volcanic action, is due to a secondary cause, i. e., the force of gravity (or in other words, the power of attraction,) which resides in every particle of the earth's mass. This theory does not gainsay the hypothesis that the earth was once in a molten condition, but, accepting that proposition as true, goes a step farther and argues that the earth, having already reached the limit of the cooling off process, is compressing, the loss of our primal heat having left room for an inward movement of rock substances of the crust, and it is the crushing, grinding action of these gathering particles that produces the intense heat that finds expression in the mighty upheavels in the weaker portions of the earth's crust—burstings forth that change the formation of vast areas, swallow up thousands of human beings, and terrorize mankind.

However destructive to life in the concrete earthquakes may be, their influence upon the formation of the earth's crust, whereby habitations are formed and maintained for such forms of life; as flourish only on solids, is essential to the existence of life; and when the day arrives that the particles of the earth, having been compressed to the fullest degree their attractive power will allow, are no longer capable of producing volcanic action, then will the sea encroach upon the land unopposed until island and continent have been ground down to one common level, and there is left not even Ararat upon which man may exist.

Biologists agree that the ocean is the mother of life, the shelter and nourishment of the primordial germ, and the geologist, gazing into the dim perspective of the future, approximates the number of years when the ocean, having swallowed the earth and its inhabitants, will again nourish in its boundless bosom the only terrestrial things that germinate and breathe.—W. H. Walker, in Midland Monthly.

Opening the Canal.

The most acceptable proposition that can be made to persons troubled with chronic constipation, is to open that important canal—the bowels. That proposition can be carried out by the parties interested if they resort to Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, the most effective, most genial alterative extant. It is the mistake of many otherwise sensible people, that they resort to drastic, or, in other words, violent purgatives. Without exaggeration, this is highly injurious, since such medicaments weaken the bowels besides convulsing both them and the stomach with pain. Relief sought from the Bitters comes freely enough, but they never produce pain, excessive action, or subsequent weakness of the bowels. Liver and kidney trouble, malaria, dyspepsia, lack of stamina and a tendency to rheumatism, are remedied by this pleasant substitute for drenching cathartics.

Scaring Birds from Wheat.

Some of the farmers of the Eifel, the district that lies between the frontier of Belgium and the Rhine, adopt a novel plan for scaring the birds from the wheat. A number of poles are set up in the cornfields, and a wire is conducted from one to another. From the top of each post there hangs a bell, which is connected with the wire. In the valley a brook runs along with a current strong enough to turn a small water-wheel, to which the wire is fastened. As the wheel goes around it jerks the wire, and so the bells in the different fields are set a tinkling. The bells thus run mysteriously frighten the birds from the grain, and even excite the wonder of men and women until they discover the secret.

In White Swiss.

A gentleman found himself one evening in delightful tete-a-tete with a fair graduate of a well-known finishing school for young ladies. She showed him the curiculum of the institution, and he after simulating a profound interest in the matter and knowledge of the subjects, being in reality a little awed by the evidence of her large mental stature, asked her rather hesitatingly, with reference to the various courses of study, in which she had graduated. "Oh," she said sweetly, "I graduated in white Swiss."—Cincinnati Times-Star.

Are You in Poor Health? Write To-Day.

The INDIANA MINERAL SPRINGS, near Attica, Warren County, Indiana, on the main line of the great Wabash Railroad, offers seekers after health combined with pleasure, everything that the heart could wish. S.S.S. CURES MALARIAL POISON

Nature should be assisted to throw off impurities of the blood. Nothing does it so well, so promptly, or so safely as Swift's Specific.

LIFE HAD NO CHARMS.

For three years I was troubled with malarial poison, which caused my appetite to fail, and I was greatly reduced in flesh, and life lost all its charms. I tried mercurial and potash remedies, but to no effect. I could get no relief. I then decided to try S.S.S. A few bottles of this wonderful medicine made a complete and permanent cure, and I now enjoy better health than ever.

ABSOLUTELY PURE

WATERLOO.

Some rain fell Monday night.

Jacob Hoover, of Auburn, is visiting friends, here.

Mr. McClure, of Ft. Wayne, was in town, Monday.

Miss Louie Patterson was at Auburn, a few days since.

Prof. Kriebel, of Butler, filled the pulpit of the U. B. church, at this plac, last Sunday.

A minister from Hudson, preached in the M. E. church, on Tuesday evening of last week.

Rev. Mr. Albertson and family went this week, to Warsaw, to attend the Assembly meetings there.

Mrs. S Barnhart went Monday, to Delta, Ohio. to visit her daughter. Winnie Till accompanied her.

Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Harper, who have been absent some days, visiting friends at Orland, returned to their home, Monday.

Many people from here, Butler and other places, attended the picnic at Hamilton, Sunday, spending the day there.

Henry Boozer, wife and child, of Mansfield, O., and Mrs. Emanuel Leas, of Angola, have been visiting Mrs. J. A. Boozer, and other friends, here.

Mrs. B. B Long, who has been quite ill for several weeks, has in a measure recovered. She sat up some for awhile, but at last reports, was confined to her bed.

Charles Meeks has returned from Michigan, with his wife. He has rented John S. Jackman's house on East Union street, where they are now keeping house.

On Wednesday evening, of last week, while a number of our young people were circling around on their bicycles, on Wayne street, two young ladies collided, precipitating steeds and riders to the ground. Fortunately no one was hurt.

Barry Beidler, who has done himself credit by mastering the mysteries of telegraphy in an unusually brief period of time, has been sent for to go to Millersburg, to fill the place of some one else, and when his duties there are ended, a position awaits him at Corunna.

Rev. Mr. Bigler, of Jackson, filled the pulpit in the Presbyterian church, Sunday. He announced to them that he would preach a doctrinal sermon, which proved to be a very practical one, also. His text was from Mat. 22 : 42,—"What think ye of Christ?" He kept close to the text and expounded a doctrine, not of creeds, but a doctrine taken from the Bible. The singing was good and the selections appropriate.

BUTLER.

Elias Strauss remains nearly the same,—losing ground if anything.

Jonathan Hazlett has so far recovered from his injuries as to be about the house and his early recovery is anticipated.

A strolling band of Free Methodists have been furnishing cheap entertainment to a certain class of our people during the past week. They have spread their tent in the west end and have a motley gathering every night.

The grand weather for the past two weeks has made a very sensible impression on the wheat and hay harvest. An immense amount of good hay has been cared for. The wheat—nearly all harvested—is decidedly a poor crop.

The writer visited the coming city of Ashley last week and was sensibly surprised with the substantial improvements of the place. There are four or five business rooms under way, and as many dwellings approaching completion. Mr. Gary, the manager, is an affable and courteous gentleman and leaves a good impression on those with whom he comes in contact. The old town of Hudson is slightly nervous over the possible result, but tries hard to keep up appearances. A number of good dwellings are being constructed and dealers report business excellent. R. B. Elliot, a former Butler boy, has opened a clothing store and seems to be succeeding.

Another fatal accident occurred in the Wabash yard last Friday. Walter Dice, day yard master, was about his duties in the yard and walking on one of the tracks near the water tank when an engine in the hands of engineer Swihart, was backing in the same direction that Mr. Dice was walking. The engineer and fireman Lakins rang their bell and whistled repeatedly, but from some unaccountable cause Mr. Dice failed to either see or hear the engine until he was run down and crushed in a most horrible manner. The accident occurred about nine o'clock in the morning. Mr. Dice lived until about twelve o'clock, noon. He leaves a wife and a family of eight or nine children,—the oldest about ten years old. Mr. Dice carried no insurance and though receiving good wages, leaves his family in poor circumstances. His remains were taken to Albion, Ind., for interment.

AUBURN JUNCTION.

Miss Clara Greenewald was visiting friends in Garrett last week.

A. J. Bell, agent at Tiffin, was here visiting his parents over Sunday.

The postoffice at this place has changed hands. Mr. Burns is now P. M.

Mrs. L. Spangler is visiting friends in Goshen and will remain there a few days.

Quite a number of the Garrett people held a picnic at this place and report a good time.

Mr. Sedburn, day operater on the B. & O., has returned home and J. E. Burns is again at his post.

Miss Pearl Grube has returned home for a few days. Her home has been with her sister at Mentone, Ind.

R E. Holler, agent for the B. & O., at this place, has been very sick for the past few days, but is now slowly improving.

The Monitor M'f'g Co., of this place, has been sending large shipments over the B. & O., for the past few weeks. They have a fine line of mills on hand. Call and see them.

David D. Greenewald and C. A. Rafler entertained quite a number of young folks last Saturday evening at the home of David Greenewald. Both are very fair players on the guitar.

The Eagle Iron Works are doing a good business and any one in need of stoves or anything in their line will save money by buying of them. They are shipping a large amount of stoves over the B. & O. and the Lake Shore.

CONCORD.

Concord picnic Aug. 13.

H. L. Buchanan was home Sunday.

C. Keller was at Waterloo Saturday.

Hugh Watt and wife went to St. Joe Saturday.

Miss Ollie Morr came home Friday from Angola.

R. Ervin is having the wall built for his new house.

Communion and quarterly meeting July 30 and 31.

Charlie Dull's mother is visiting him from Canton, Ohio.

Uncle Samuel Wasson is reported very sick at this writing.

G. W. Draggoo and wife were calling on the sick Sunday.

Mrs. F. Buchanan drove over to Auburn Saturday evening.

May Bartlett and daughter Bessie, of St. Joe, was up Sunday.

Mrs. Minnie Johnson and baby Edna visited relatives here last week.

Miss Anna Baker entertained Mrs. Brown and Mrs. F. Buchanan Friday.

Jack Johnson's pony will go either way forward or backward, any way to suit the times.

Several attended the doings at Fairview Saturday evening and pronounced it good.

James Morr and wife, of Fairview, were the guests of Will Smurr and family Sunday.

Mrs. H. and Mrs. B. A. Jenkins, of St. Joe, visited their sick aunt at Union Chapel Sunday.

Mrs. Geo. Kinzie, of St Joe, and Master Fred Jenkins spent Friday with their uncle J. B. Johnson's family.

Mrs. W. B. Brown and children, of Auburn, spent several days visiting her sister, Mrs. F. Buchanan, last week.

The thrashing machines are turning their wheels from one wheat field to another thrashing the golden grain.

Mrs. Dell Phillips, of Chicago, and Mrs. May Adison, of Jackson, Mich., are the guests of their three sisters, Mrs. Jas. Ferrell and the two Mrs. Johnsons of Rehoboth.

F. Buchanan is doing some grumbling about the arrangements in the Sabbath school The 1st of January he started out with fifteen in the class, but after five teachers being selected, treasurer, assistant supt., and secretary leaves a small number, yet he never looks cross.

Mrs. Adam Hay departed this life at her home in Mich., July 14, age 74 years, 2 months and 28 days. She was a devoted christian lady, and leaves a husband, 7 daughters, two sons and a large circle of friends to mourn her loss. Her remains were interred in the Bismark cemetery. For a number of year Mrs. Hay was a resident of this county.

CORUNNA

Mrs. Osborn is lying very low.

This is fine hay weather. Farmers are getting in a large crop.

Mrs. Jennie Adams and son have gone to Ohio, on an extended visit.

Oh, that we had some of the rain we had in the spring, when we did not need it!

Miss Vesta Bower and Miss Francie Bair were in town, Monday, visiting their friends.

David Shook's new house is nearly done and they will soon move to town, where they will have a nice residence.

Dr. Bowen's new house is nearing completion, and will be a credit to the town, it being commodious in size and beuatiful in appearance.

Chas. Tompkins, Vida Sherlock, Mr. Trumbell and Miss Husselman, visited at the home of of Miss H.'s mother, north of town.

There will be an ice cream festival, Saturday evening, given by the ladies of the Christian church. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

Mrs. Will Murphy has returned from a two weeks' visit with her parents at Findlay, Ohio. Her father returned with her, and is visiting here at present

A large audience assembled at the U B., church, last Sabbath evening, to hear Prof. Kriebel, of Butler, who was to address them, but he failed to put in his appearance. The people dispersed, feeling greatly disappointed.

A young man, who evidently is endowed with greater capabilities and possessed of higher instinct, was seen making himself obnoxious on our streets, Saturday evening. Something should be done at once to check those, who are madly, aye recklessly, going the giddy and uncertain rounds of dissipation and thus make hideous spectacles of themselves.

SUMMIT.

Eva Duncan is visiting relatives in Hudson.

Anna Betts visited friends at Waterloo, last week.

John Wagoner, of Hudson, was on our streets, Monday.

M. Gouser, of west of Hudson, was on our streets, Monday.

Mrs. David Heckathorn, of Hudson, was in town, Monday.

H. D. Snowberger and wife visited at Steubenville, Sunday.

Maggie Chapman began going to school at Auburn, Monday.

R. T. Duncan and wife called on friends at Hudson, Sunday.

Mrs. O. Stofer and children, of Hudson, visited her parents, here, last week.

Sam Ramsyre bought a new binder in the spring. He used it one day, when the misfortune of a runaway damaged it to the amount of $35.

Married.

Wednesday afternoon, July 13, 1892, a few invited friends assembled at the residencende of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Comeskey, of Jackson township, DeKalb county, to witness the marriage of Nettie their youngest daughter to Mr Jacob Lochner, of Leo, Allen county. At a few moments past 4 o'clock, Miss Maggie Snyder, of St. Johns, began playing the wedding march, when the wedding party consisting of bride and groom, and Mr. Charles Lochner, brother of the groom, and Mr. Eli Amstutz, as groomsmen, and Miss Mary Comesky, sister of the bride, and Miss Queen Lawhead, as bridesmaids, entered and stood near the center of the room, where a neat and impressive ceremony was performed by Rev. C. M. Elliott, of Leo, after which congratulations followed, and they all partook of an elegant wedding feast and the rest of the evening was spent in social enjoyment. The young couple were the recipients of many useful presents such as a set of chairs, given by Joseph Garman and wife; set of dishes, by Libbie Lochner, sister of the groom; a five dollar gold piece, groom's father; pair of table cloths, bride's parents; table cloth and bed spread, Jacob Lochner and wife; glass tea set, Chas. Lochner; China cups and saucers, Albert Lochner; tidy, Miss Maggie Snyder; lamp, J. R. Moudy and wife; linen towels, H. L. Moudy and wife; 1 doz. napkins, Mary Comeskey; cake stand Queen Lawhead; water set, Eli Amstutz; and many other articles, of which we did not learn the donors' names. Mr. and Mrs. Lochner have the best wishes of a host of friends for their future happiness and prosperity.

A GUEST.

Obituary.

Jacob S. Palmer was was born in Stark county, Ohio, Dec. 11, 1810, and died at his home in Richland township, DeKalb county, Indiana, July 12, 1892, aged 81 years, 7 months and 1 day. In 1812, his father removed the family to Washington county, Pa, where they were left with the father of the decedent's mother, while he enlisted in the war of 1812, from which he was taken ill and died five years later.

The deceased was reared by his grandfather, Peter Swihart; remaining with him till twenty-one years of age, working on the farm and learning the gunsmith trade. In 1833, he returned to Stark county, Ohio, and worked at his trade, until 1850, when he moved to DeKalb county, Indiana, and bought a tract of land in Richland township, which he improved and cultivated in connection with his trade till his death.

He was married April 5th, 1831, to Susan Tiger, a native of Pa., who died March 10th, 1866. On September 12, 1867, he was again married to Mrs. Abigail Baird, who survives him.

Father Palmer has 10 children living, 36 grandchildren and 47 great-grandchildren.

He has been a worthy member of the German Baptist church, for over seventeen years, and when the time came, calmly fell asleep,

The Story of Arachne.

Perhaps we are unconsciously prejudiced by the fairy tales which generally mention the spiders in company with bats, imps, witches; but there is an old Greek legend which speaks of her more kindly. Once, so runs this story, there was a nymph named Arachne, wondrously skilled in weaving and embroidery. She was so proud of her proficiency in this art, which Minerva herself had taught her, that she summoned that haughty goddess to a trial of skill. Minerva, assuming the form of an old crone, visited Arachne, and advised her to be less "torthputting"; but admonition was of no avail. So she resumed her goddess form and accepted the challenge. The subject chosen for the rival embroideresses was the loves of the gods and in its elucidation Arachne brought to remembrance some circumstances in Minerva's past history which a more tactful maiden would have left in oblivion. Incensed at these personalities, and envious at Arachne's extraordinary skill, Minerva struck her former pupil in the face with the distaff. Arachne, unable to bear this insult, hanged herself; whereupon Minerva relented, and changed the dead maiden into a spider. Her descendands are the spider race, who still follow there ancestress afar off,—for they are given to hanging themselves though without suicidal intentions; they have not lost the art of spinning and weaving; and some of them, as we have seen, can even embroider.—From "Pre-Adamite Silk-Weavers," in Demorest's Family Magazine for August.

The August Century will contain an illustrated article on "An Ascent of Fuji the Peerless." Japan's great sacred mountain is called variously Fuji-no-yama, Fuji-san, Fujiyama, Fusiyama, and Fuji plain and simple, but the first two are considered the proper spellings.

A Wonderful Statement.

Proprietors of Dullam's Great German Remedies. GENTLEMEN—I have for the past two years been troubled with a serious and very severe Liver and Stomach difficulty. Have had advice and medicine from our very best physicians and only to be temporarily relieved. Some of my friends persuaded me to try your Great German Remedy for the Blood, Stomach and Kidneys and to my surprise after using three bottles I feel like a new man. If you desire you can use my name in print or by reference in any of the Grand Rapids, Michigan, papers; or any other papers in the state, to convince the afflicted that it is the best Blood, Liver and Kidney medicine on earth. I feel like a new man. Have lived here over 40 years.—$1 a bottle.

A Positive Fact.

Ladies do not delay your valuable time by waiting and suffering but secure a bottle of Dullam's Great German Female Uterine Tonic and be cured of your monthly trouble either in old or young. It is the very best preparation I ever perscribed in my extensive practice. It has given the best results in the greatest number of cases of female troubles of any medicine that I ever used. I do not make a practice of using or recommending patent medicines, but this remedy is prepared by a very competent physician and chemist of my acquaintance and I can cheerfully and conscientiously recommend it as the best.—$1 a bottle. Fell Dead.

These words are very familiar to our readers, as not a day passes without the report of the sudden death of some prominent citizen. The explanation is "Heart Diseases." Therefore beware if you have any of the following symtoms: short breath; pain in side, smothering spells, swollen ankles, asthmatic breathing, weak and hungry spells, tenderness in shoulder or arm, fluttering of heart or irregular pulse. These symptoms mean heart disease. The most reliable remedy is Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, which has saved thousands of lives. Book of testimonials free at F. E. Davenport's who also sells the New Heart Cure. 1

CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."
DR. G. C. OSGOOD,
Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."
DR. J. F. KINCHELOE,
Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."
H. A. ARCHER, M. D.,
111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

Strong Witnesses.

Among the thousands of testimonials of cures by Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, is that of Nathan Allisons, a well-known citizen of Glen Rock, Pa., who for years had shortness of breath, sleeplessness pain in left side, shoulders, smothering spells, etc., one bottle of Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure and one box of Nerve and Liver Pills, cured him. Peter Jaquet, Salem, N. J., is another witness, who for twenty years suffered with heart disease, was pronounced incurable by physicians, death stared him in the face, could not lie down for fear of smothering to death. Immediatialy after using the New Cure he felt better and could lie down and sleep all night, and is now a well man. The New Cure is sold, also free book, by F. E. Davenport. 2

AUBURN AND VICINITY.

1864—Continued.

The town board passed an ordinance to plank sidewalk, to take in a part of the west side of Jackson street, and Cedar street from Seventh street north but enforcement of its provisions was postponed till the next spring.

The marshal seemingly desirous of attracting public notice called attention to the general disregard of town ordinances and announced a vigorous policy by serving notice that the hog, sidewalk, and other laws of the town were to be rigidly enforced.

To second such laudable zeal, Wyllys Griswold furnished a lot to be used for a pound. Swine were to be kept off the streets and rewards were offered to citizens, as well as fees to the marshal, for taking estrays in charge. Little regard was given this spasmodic effort and soon the embargo on Auburn's porkers became null by common consent and matters continued as hitherto.

The treasury was in its habitually bankrupt condition and a brief unsatisfactory report showed a slight over payment. Abnormal assessments of property, nominal levies for taxation with increased expenditures were responsible for this condition of the finances.

The town board applied the heroic remedy of doubling the previous levy for the ensuing year and made it 50 cents on each $100, valuation.

Mr. Stiefel within a short time resigned the office of treasurer and removed from the town and John N. Miller long and favorably known to Auburn people and frequently named in local history, likewise moved elsewhere. It is to be observed in this connection the disappearance successively from year to year from public notice and position of persons of prominence, only few of whom, retired from business by age and infirmity, still remain with us.

Business firms and individuals of small capital came and went and some localities seemed to be ever changing occupants and character of wares; on the other hand, there are those whose staying qualities have made them reliable and prosperous.

The advent of Emanuel Leopard as grocer, combined with sale of wines and liquors was scarcely known ere he had departed, while U. E. Babb was long and favorably regarded as an experienced artist in photographs and ambrotypes, many of which in our homes preserve the features of our friends and relatives, distant or departed.

Mr. Babb removed to Hicksville, Ohio, which has continued to be his home since. Revisiting Auburn recently as agent for a business house, he renewed former acquaintance and found in the present town but little of the place as he knew it. His hair has whitened and age has begun to tell on him but in manner and converse he recalls with freshness the days gone by.

O. H. Davis advertised in the local papers as silversmith and jeweler. At the store of Mr. Davis located on the north side of the public square, among other goods, could be found silver thimbles, sewing birds and melodeons. The sewing machine and parlor organ now common to most homes had not yet superseded these former adjuncts of the housewife and were still salable. He asked patronage on the ground of home manufacture, alleging as a corollary that hard times had no effect on his prices. Whatever his success, the fact of his advertising his business was a strong point in his favor.

James W. Case had rented the Rhodes block which he purchased in the following December and keeping the postoffice in a small compartment of cheap, open boxes occupying the west end of the ground floor, retained one side of the room for a small stock of school books, stationery, etc., and rented the opposite side as a durgstore to H. Gregg, M. D.

Charles Fox, an ex-confederate soldier from Texas opened a meat market in a building opposite the Weaver House; F. & C. Raut were in the boot & shoe business in the old postoffice building, and D. W. Altenberg & Co were dealing in furniture.

On May 1, T. C. Elson bought of J. Stiefel & Co., their stock of groceries and provisions and for some years carried on the business. He finally went upon a farm west of town and thence to Buchanan, near Benton Harbor, Michigan, where he has been quite prosperous.

The medical firm of Goeriz & Larimore was dissolved. The former removed elsewhere and the entire interests of the company passed to Dr. Larimore, whose office was located one door south of the Griswold House.

In the line of improvement, little was going on. Frank Jones was putting up a two story dwelling on Jackson street, an event so unusual as to attract comment, and William McBride under superintendence of Com'r. John Brandon, was constructing a new wooden bridge over Cedar Creek on the Spencerville road southeast of town.

In September 1863, Lewis and William W. Bowers brothers, the latter of Fulton county, Ohio, the former a successful grocer in Auburn, jointly purchased for $150, from John N. Miller, the two then vacant lots known as Nos. 219 and 220, O. P. In the spring of 1865, they made preparations to erect upon this site a steam flour mill.

Convenient to the business center of of Auburn and on one of the leading roads to the town, the locality presented obvious advantages and gave promise of especial patronage from farmers living to the eastward. The building was two storied. The basement story was of stone and brick and the upper story was frame. Its dimensions were 35x45 feet. The boiler was from the foundry of Messrs. Bass & Hanna, of Ft. Wayne, and was of good material. There were three run of stones and the mill had a capacity to manufacture about forty barrels of flour a day.

Obituary.

Geo. W. Hills was born in Plymouth, Ohio, April 1st, 1839. At the age of sixteen he moved to Steuben Co., Ind., where his father died. After this his home was with his grandfather. In 1864 he enlisted in the service, serving till the war closed. On returning, he and his brother, Luther Hills, moved to Montcalm Co., Michigan, where they remained five years. Later he returned to DeKalb county, and in 1875 went to work for the B. & O. company at Garrett. Later he bought a farm of Lewis Spangler, south of Garrett, and resided there two years, up to the time of his death, July 15, 1892. The funeral was largely attended, he being an Oddfellow and a man highly respected. The interment being at Auburn, a large procession followed him to the grave. Those who saw it estimate its length at half a mile. The services were at 2 p. m., July 17, at the M. E. church, Garrett, conducted by the pastor, Rev. A. L. Lamport. The interment was in the beautiful grounds of Woodlawn cemetery, Auburn. The deceased leaves a wife, and a son now residing in Chicago, as well as other relatives, including Geo. Quince, of this place, and J. A. Quince, of Fort Wayne, who are nephews. His death was caused by Bright's disease of the kidneys. We are glad to know that his family will be left in comfortable circumstances, though as a man and a neighbor he will be greatly missed.

Obituary.

Nellie, infant daughter of Samuel and Effie Morr, was born April 4, 1892, and died July 19, 1892, aged 3 months and 15 days. Its short life was in most part spent in pain and suffering; especially the last two weeks of its life were filled with agonies which cannot be described, and which blighted out of existence one more pure, innocent and sinless life.

The funeral services were held at their residence in Jackson township on Wednesday afternoon, July 20, at 2 p. m., Rev W. L. Meese officiating.

Oh, our darling babe you have gone,
From this cold world of strife,
To join heaven's angelic throngs
In purer and sweeter life.

But farewell, dear Nellie, farewell
Sleep in thy narrow bed
While silently the years roll by
As silent as the dead.

Live in that bright realm of the blest
And heaven's glory see;
For we know you've only gone to sleep,
To wake among the free.

The New Great South American Kidney Cure.

The acknowledged superior cure and immediate relief for all derangements, painfulness and decay of the kidneys or bladder, Bright's disease, diabetes or any complaint that hurts or despoils either of these delicate organs. This new remedy has been thoroughly tested by learned physicians and found far superior to any medicine yet discovered for quickly relieving all weaknesses, aches, pains and distresses arising from disease of any part of the urinary passages. It is a great relief for the old, middle aged and children, male or female. It relieves at once retention and pain in passing water, and it is very effective in relieving prostatic troubles in the old, and for nightly incontinence of water in children, or others, caused by weakness of the bladder. It may be worth to many a hundred times its cost. This is a remedy of great value to ladies, because they are very liable to weakness and pain peculiar to their sex. Sold by Robbins & McCord, druggists, Auburn, Ind. tf

The average length of life is greater in Norway than in any other country on the globe. This is attributed to the fact that the temperature is cool and uniform throughout the year.

HAPPY HOOSIERS. Wm. Timmons. Postmaster of Idaville, Ind., writes: "Electric Bitters has done more for me than all other medicines combined, for that bad feeling arising from kidney and liver trouble." John Leslie, farmer and stockman, of same place, says: "Find Electric Bitters to be the best kidney and liver medicine, made me feel like a new man." J. W. Gardner, hardware merchant, same town, says: Electric Bitters is just the thing for a man who is all run down and don't care whether he lives or dies; he found new strength, good appetite and felt just like he had a new lease on life. Only 50c. a bottle, at Robbins & McCords drug store. 2

THE Democratic platform will not have to be interpreted by the school of apologetics.

HARRISON and Reid isn't the ticket that will lead when the votes are counted in the fall.

THE Prohibition Convention followed his own instructions, and cut Demorest on the bias.

EVEN "free trade wages" would suit the locked-out employes of the protected iron and steel mills.

BENJAMIN will have to organize blocks-of-five hundred if he expects to carry Indiana this time.

IT will be an easier job to move Harrison back to Indiana than to move Indiana to Harrison. At least the country will prefer that way.

WITH all sorts of labor troubles in Pennsylvania this is not a good year to convince the workingman that protection is a joy forever.

THE difference between the labor cost of a ton of steel rails in the United States and England is less than a dollar. The tax is $13.44.

THE Tammany "discontent" is best shown by its determination to roll up a majority of 30,000 to 70,000 for the nominee of the Democratic Convention.

MEMPHIS AVALANCHE: Grover Cleveland has been tried. So has Benjamin Harrison. The verdict of the people will be to try Cleveland again.

IT is claimed that the party is taking its Hat with old-time enthusiasm. This is ominous. When a party takes his hat it's generally a sign he's going to go.

IF the McKinley bill is the regulator of wages, as the Republicans claim, then it is responsible for the lock-out of 150,000 workingmen in Pennsylvania.

THE New York Recorder says: "No Harrison was ever beaten for the Presidency." Well, this is as good a time as any to treat the Harrisons to a new experience.

THE triumphant Democracy will see to it that Harrison follows Blaine in November to that political grave which has swallowed up so many ill-fated ambitions of the past.

THE figure 2 is somewhat fateful in Whitelaw Reid's career. In 1872 he bolted Grant and Wilson. In 1882 he bolted Folger and Carpenter. In 1892 his party bids fair to bolt him.

AN aggressive fight will be made from start to finish. No apologies and no defensive attitudes will be necessary upon the part of the Democrats. The victory was assured at Chicago.

THE New York Recorder, after stating that Harrison had been notified of his nomination, says that in November the people will do the rest. Of course, and Harrison will do the resting.

SEVERAL thousand able-bodied campaign liars can obtain steady employment for 130 days by applying to the National Republican Convention Committee. Those with tin plate credentials preferred.

THE Republicans have abandoned New York, New Jersey, and Connecticut, and will make their fight in Indiana and Illinois. This is what the election of the attorney of the Beef Combine as chairman of their National Committee meant.

APPEAL-AVALANCHE: This is not a bloody shirt year, as the Harrison managers will discover to their sorrow. While the Republican leaders have been urging the people of the North and West to "vote as you shot," they have been robbing their dupes to please the Carnegies. The people have found it out at last and now they propose to shoot the robbers —with ballots.

THE legislation of the Fifty-first Congress that commanded the greatest party support from Republicans was the force bill. It is known that Harrison deeply deplored its defeat in the Senate. He has repeatedly indicated that he desired the passage of such an infamous law.

CHICAGO TIMES: Less than a month ago Andrew Carnegie was telegraphing congratulations to triumphant Harrison, who is a champion of reciprocity, he says. Would it not be reciprocal for the triumphant Harrison to telegraph a line or two to Mr. Carnegie? It would be neat application of the doctrine of reciprocity.

FOR the protection of the American hen the sagacious McKinley imposed a tariff of 5 cents a dozen upon eggs. Now Canada, in turn, has determined to levy a like tax upon such part of the output of American poultry as seeks admission to her markets. It is in such intelligent manifestations of statesmanship that the surpassing genius of the modern protectionist is displayed.

NATURALLY Whitelaw Reid, of the New York Tribune, defends Carnegie in the employment of Pinkerton Hessians to shoot down honest American laborers. Through his long intercourse with "rats" in the Tribune office, Reid has forgotten that there are any self-respecting laborers in this country. He will be reminded of the fact, however, that such laborers do exist in a very unpleasant manner next November.

THERE is one peculiarity about some of our protected millionaires like Mr. Carnegie, who make their money out of the people who have to buy their high-priced goods. It is that they spend the money they make on our home labor in foreign lands like princes. Thus they sell dear and buy cheap. While they make their piles of gold on protected prices, they spend it on foreign luxuries furnished at low prices by "pauper labor," as they call it.

THOUGHTLESS supporters of Mr. Harrison lightly speak of him as a "safe" President. No man who defends the principles and the provisions of the force bill can be a safe President. It will not do to say that this infamous bill is dead when its chief advocate, backed by a powerful party and the effective far-reaching influence of the executive branches of the government, is a candidate for the Presidency. The only sure method of killing the force bill is to defeat its supporters at the polls next November.

THE Republicans have been telling us all along that when everything else is high the wages of the laboring man become high also. While not accepting this bold assertion the Democrats have waited patiently to see if the promised result would be forthcoming. The price of living has gone up, but the price of labor has either remained stationary or been painfully depressed. That is to say, the Republican theory seems to be seriously defective, and the laborers throughout the country find themselves in a sad dilemma, for they pay more for the necessaries of life and get less for their work. If they are disgruntled over the practical working of the protective policy who can blame them?

PRESIDENT HARRISON may succeed in bringing about a settlement in order to save the Republican party, which has made Mr. Carnegie prince of millionaires; President Harrison may succeed in inducing this tariff baron to abandon his attempt to compel 4,000 men to accept a reduction of 80 per cent. in their wages; he may induce him to send his bloody Pinkerton hirelings home and to dismantle that fort which he has erected to carry out his policy of war against his workingmen; but whether President Harrison succeeds or not, the damning fact remains that the industry which is most benefited by tariff taxation and the firm which has been enabled to despoil the American people to the most gigantic extent, have given the American people an object lesson in the results of robber protection which can never be effaced.

"A TARIFF for revenue," exclaim the organs from amid the wreck of McKinleyism, "would expose our manufacturers to European competition." That would be the very best thing that could happen to them. Competition, or rather the fear of it, would smash the trusts. With the smashing of the trusts the mills and factories now closed down to limit production would reopen. In order to retain the home market the unprotected manufacturers would have to give to their business the attention and energy which they now expend in politics and schemes for preventing competition among themselves behind the tariff wall. They would have untaxed raw materials to cheapen their products, and thus could struggle on equal terms with all foreign rivals for the markets of the world, out of which protection has practically shut them. Industry would feel the healthy impulse from one end of the country to the other. Cheapened products and enlarged markets would mean work for all, and when work is plentiful, as every worker knows, wages rise.

VOTES THROWN AWAY.

BALLOTS CAST FOR THE THIRD PARTY ARE LOST.

Neither Gen. Weaver nor the Prohibition Candidate Will Secure a Single Electoral Vote—The Issues Cannot Be Solved by Abuse.

Democracy the People's Party.

Gen. Weaver, of Iowa, will run as a candidate for the Presidency upon a platform wherein is expressed certain doctrines of Democracy, and wherein the Republican party, the party which has fostered all that the People's party platform denounces, is without recognition except for its bad features. The Democratic party has not chosen to speak for either an unlimited coinage of silver, nor is it prepared to ask for a graduated income tax, however attractive in the abstract such a tax seems to be where absolute justice is sought. The Democratic party is not a party of State socialism, as is Republicanism in some aspects, and, therefore, is not prepared to say that the government should take charge of lines of transportation and of telegraph and of various other interests now conducted by private companies. But the Democracy is opposed to any subsidy or national aid to any private corporation for any purpose. It does not ask for a constitutional provision that Senators of the United States shall be elected by a direct vote of the people, and it is entirely opposed, since it reposes faith in the people themselves, to the maintenance of a large standing army of mercenaries, by whatever name known, as a menace to liberty, such a menace as is now seen at Carnegie's protected mills and is seen time and again whenever a person whose property enjoys the protection of law and is safe thereunder assumes to distrust the people. There are duly constituted authorities for the preservation of the peace and the protection of property. In counties these are the Sheriff and his posse. It is among the powers of that officer that he may summon the whole power of the county to support him in the maintenance of order.

Gen. Weaver's candidacy will be like Mr. Bidwell's in one respect. Neither will secure a single electoral vote. It is possible that Weaver will have half a million of the popular vote, but none of his followers who speaks soberly will claim that there is a State in the Union where it is possible that he can get in November next the electoral vote. The average American citizen has no desire to throw away his opportunity of deciding between the two candidates who his observation tells him are the only persons in the race. Since the organization of parties in the modern sense after the election of 1828 no particular favor has been shown at any time to a third movement. The people know that whatever its shortcomings their only hope of securing in some measure what they ask lies in what is really the people's party, the Democracy. The people know that the next President will be either Benjamin Harrison or Grover Cleveland. As among those who have fulminated strong utterances against conditions of things in the republic there are men who actually wish a change they will address themselves to the only way open for its accomplishment. They may not care particularly for Grover Cleveland, but they are totally opposed to Benjamin Harrison as the leader of that party which is responsible for every one of those conditions which they denounce. As wise electors who know that to vote for a third candidate is but to assist in the election of Benjamin Harrison they will be found when the time comes with the Democratic party to the extent at least that their votes are given to the Democratic candidate.—Chicago Times.

The Campaign.

In the wide range of human activity there is nothing more inspiring, nothing more satisfying to the loftiest ideal of the dignity and worthiness of men, than a people's free expression of their will as to how they shall be governed.

The people of this country are about to announce this decision for four years to come. They are about to determine not only what man shall be their President but what policies and principles shall prevail. Fortunately for them, the choice will be undisturbed by questions of private character and of relative personal worth that have sometimes hitherto diverted them from the consideration of larger and more important subjects.

There is no issue of private character in this campaign. There is no reason why the word of slander should be uttered from any platform. Mr. Cleveland and Mr. Harrison stand on an even footing in this respect. Both are honest and both are capable. The judgment of the country is to be unclouded by personal prejudice or turned away by the campaign liar that buzzes about a candidate's private life or character. The people are to declare their real minds on the issues that divide the parties. Once again, in the language of the day, we are to have a clean campaign.

To such a campaign the Democracy of 1892 can give most hearty welcome. It stands to-day where Republicanism stood in 1860. It is looking to the future. The light is on its face and not on its back. It does not fear to ask the suffrage of the people on its principles.

The decision will be made between a tariff for revenue and a tariff for bounties. The one will give the Treasury ample resources to make up for the present deficiency without taxing the raw material of the manufacturer or the necessaries of the people. The other robs the people and despoils the Treasury.

It will be between the man who believes in civil-service reform and the man who not only holds to the spoils system but who rewards the largest contributor to campaign funds with a cabinet office, protects the defiler of the suffrage from justice, loots the civil service from top to bottom and employs the Federal officers to secure his nomination.

It will be between the man and the party who believe in home rule and the man and party who insist that the Southern States shall be pinned by Federal bayonets to the Republican party.

The debate will be between the supporters of Billion-Dollarism and those who believe that the Government should be economically administered.

These are subjects worthy of discussion and requiring settlement. They must be dealt with intelligently, rationally, respectfully. The issues cannot be solved by the abuse of either one of the two sincere men who lead the hostile forces, nor by that supreme political idiocy known as the "still hunt." Brains are to have more influence in this campaign than lungs and torches, and frankness will be of far more value than subterfuge.—New York World.

SOME DUST STORMS.

Whirling Columns a Thousand Feet High Sometimes Seen in India.

Sand and dust whirls occur in arid regions in hot weather. They may be anywhere from a rod to several rods in diameter and from twenty to a thousand feet high. They are sometimes compound, a score or more small whirls forming a whirling circle around a common center. They are very common in India. They sometimes carry up so much sand in the Sahara and Arabia that those on whom the sand falls are overwhelmed. They occur also in the arid regions of the United States. In the Magdalena Valley, across the mountains westward from Socorro, in New Mexico, during a hot day in summer, they form at the head of the valley in a long, slender, vertical column, perhaps 600 feet high, and then travel toward the village of Madalena, over which they burst sometimes, bringing little puffs of contrary winds and a shower of fine dust. In some places a group of stationary whirls of the same general character as the preceding, are tied down to one point. Such are the whirls which form sometimes over volcanoes.

Locusts on Their Travels.

The British consul in Mogador mentions in his last report that while on an excursion inland, about a day's journey from Mogador, he met flights of locusts. He says it was an astonishing and interesting, though painful, sight, the air being in some parts so thick with them that they formed a dense, living brown fog, through which he could hardly find his way, while they so completely covered the ground that the utmost caution was necessary in walking, as we could not tell whether he was treading on soft sand, hard, slippery rock, or what. Many birds feasted on the insects, including large flights of gulls from the sea; and beasts evidently enjoyed their share, for in the middle of the densest swarm he saw a fine red fox dancing up and snapping dozens of the locusts in the air, until seeing the stranger, he suddenly dropped on all fours and quickly vanished in the live fog. Not only did the barbel get their share of the novel food (the consul used the locusts successfully as bait for them), but some of the fish of the Atlantic were found gorged with locusts which had been blown off the land by easterly winds. As usual, they were extensively eaten by the native population, both Mohammedan and Jewish.

Cunning Hunter.

Deservedly has Master Fox served for ages as the representative of craft and guile. He evidently has a brain, and means to use it in preserving his life and stocking his larder. The author of "Forty-five Years of Sport" says that a fox was one day seen coming out of a pile of stones near the water side.

He hid in the heather for a while, and then pushed out something on the water, which proved to be a bunch of moss. The wind took it into the middle of the lake, and blew it past some ducks, sitting on the surface.

Having watched his venture for perhaps ten minutes, with apparent satisfaction, and observed that it neared the ducks without arousing their suspicion, our friend began to collect another and larger bunch of moss, which he allowed to float in the same direction, but this time he swam behind it, taking care to show only his eyes and nose above water.

Just as it was passing the group of ducks, he made a sudden dive, pulled down a bird, and swam back to shore under water. Arriving there, he carried the duck to the pile of stones, where his wife and daughter were no doubt waiting to enjoy the fruits of his labors.

Healthful Locality.

Fulmodestone, Norfolk, which has 333 inhabitants, must be a healthy spot, for we find that in 1891 there was not a single death in the parish.

When the Dinner Bell Rings

People ought to feel hungry, and when they feel hungry they ought to have good digestions. But, alas!—they don't—frequently. That plague alike of the just and of the unjust; of the abstemious and the glutton; of youth, middle age and life's confine—the protean imp, dyspepsia—exacts dire penalties for appetite's appeasement in the shape of heartburn, wind on and uncomfortable distention of the stomach, and general disturbance in the gastric region. Dyspepsia is very generally accompanied by biliousness, irregularity of the bowels, insomnia and nervousness, for each and all of which, as well as their cause, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is the nation's chosen remedy. Malarial, rheumatic and kidney troubles, lack of strength and flesh, and failure of appetite and the power to rest tranquilly, are also overcome by the Bitters.

Half a Million Yearly for Cats' Meat.

Though the piety of modern days does not provide such a daily sacrifice for destitute cats as that offered in the Kadi's court yard at Cairo, puss is certainly not forgotten in the provisionary of a great city like London, where the little carts of "cat's meat and dog's meat" sellers are among the familiar objects of the streets. But it is, nevertheless, startling to learn that the sums thus annually spent in London alone, on daily morsels of horse flesh for the domestic cats, amount to £100,000 ($500,000.)—Domestic Monthly.

The Worth.

"Is life worth living?" isn't half so potent a question as "Is death worth dying?"

THE human system needs continuous and careful attention to rid itself of its impurities. Beecham's Pills act like magic.

IT is a curious fact that every species of infidelity is warranted by some religion.

USED THEM IN HIS BLOW-GUN.

Doctor—"Well, my fine little fellow, you have got quite well again. I was sure the pills I left for you would cure you. How did you take them, in water or in cake?"

Boy—"Oh, I used them in my blow-gun."

The little fellow put the nasty, great, griping, old-fashioned pills to a good use. At most, all his internal economy needed was a dose of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. They are tiny, sugar-coated granules, easy to take, and are gently aperient, or actively cathartic, according to size of dose. As a laxative, only one tiny Pellet is required.

The "Pellets" cure Sick Headache, Bilious Headache, Constipation, Indigestion, Bilious Attacks, and all derangements of the Liver, Stomach and Bowels.

The "Pellets" are purely vegetable, and operate without disturbance to the system, diet, or occupation.

Dr. Pierce's Pellets are the cheapest pill, sold by druggists, because they are guaranteed to give satisfaction in every case, or their price (25 cents a vial) is refunded. Can you ask more?

HOW MONEY IS ACCUMULATED BY A FEW.

The Duty Should Be Reduced—A Tissue Paper Trust—What a Homestead Minister Has to Say—Carnegie in Theory and Practice.

Unequal Distribution of Wealth.

The discussion of the tragedy at the Homestead Mills is bringing out some of the serious thoughts of intelligent men in regard to dangers not only from contracts of labor, like this deplorable one, but from the inevitable results that must follow the congestion of wealth in the hands of a comparatively few. The opinion seems to be rapidly gaining ground that we are to have more rather than less of these troubles, and that they are but symptoms of a disease that is becoming deep-seated, and that threatens the very life of our republic, which outwardly looks so fair. It is also beginning to be recognized that nostrums and quack remedies, such as schemes of profit-sharing, co-operation, etc., though they may do more good than harm, yet can never cure the general disease, which can be reached only by radical remedies. What, then, is the disease that is racking and torturing this industrial commonwealth? What was its cause, what has been its progress, and what is the remedy?

For want of a better name we will call the disease plutocracy. It comes from the unequal distribution of the earnings of wealth, the greater part of which is rapidly being concentrated into the hands of a few. Hundreds are reaping where millions sow, resulting in millionaires on the one hand and tramps on the other, with the pressure on all between becoming greater and greater. The evils of this system are that while in theory the laws are made by the people, practically the masses only obey the laws made by the rich. Money becomes king. The evils of the system are far-reaching. Classes and casts are established. The wealthy become arrogant or lead wild and reckless lives. The poor lose hope, courage and patriotism, and accept sullenly their lot as subjects and slaves of the millionaires who employ them or who hold mortgages over their heads.

The cause of this disease is found in the laws and systems which grant public property and privileges to private individuals or corporations.

The disease had but little hold upon the country previous to the civil war. There were then no more millionaires than could be counted on one's fingers. During the war of 1861-65 big Government contracts laid the basis of some of the large fortunes since accumulated. The protection system was then begun which has ever since been taking money from the pockets of farmers and laborers and putting it into those of the manufacturers. The increased powers of production resulting from improved machinery and methods have increased the influence and power of capital, so that millionaires are being turned out more rapidly than ever before. The New York Tribune printed a list of over 4,000 millionaires a few weeks ago, classifying them according to the sources of their wealth. According to this authority about 30 per cent. made their money chiefly in protected industries, perhaps 50 per cent. mainly as holders of or speculators in land, and the remainder mostly from patents or other monopolies, appreciation of money values, etc. The most of these fortunes are accumulated legally, though often laws are strained after being made to aid such accumulations. But justice would not have distributed wealth in any such fashion. It would leave valuable monopolies in the hands of private persons, but would make the production of property the only title to it. It would erect no barriers to commerce to compel consumers to buy dear goods of any favored set of producers, but would leave opportunities and privileges open to all alike.

The remedy for this disease, then, cannot be found in laws that will increase restrictions upon trade or grant more privileges to any class. Restrictions must be removed, and the indirect methods of taxation which now filch money from the poor and turn it over to the rich must be replaced by a direct system which shall bear no more heavily upon the poor than upon the rich; or, better still, tax the opportunities to production until the unearned increment, now largely taken by the wealthy, shall be utilized for the benefit of all. When this is done men will be put upon an equal footing, and each will get what he earns and earn what he gets. Large corporations may then exist, but it will be because they can produce most cheaply and not because they will have greater advantage over labor.

Managers of Millions.

The Rev. J. J. McIlyar, pastor of the Methodist Church at Homestead, Pa., scourged the manufacturers who had brought Pinkerton assassins into the peaceful village of the iron-workers who were manfully and quietly resisting a heavy reduction of wages and the attempt to break up their association. Here is one of questions and statements:

"Why should men who are piling up millions each year be quarreling and sending Pinkerton guards to drive away the honest men, who are as good and as honest and as upright as any in this land, but who are not willing to be made slaves or dealt with unfairly? This town of peace is bathed in tears without sufficient cause. The employers have selected a man to take charge of the plant who is the least respected by labor of any man in Pennsylvania."

If the Reverend Mr. McIlyar will investigate our present system of trusts and large corporations, which flourishes under "protection," he will find that this is the normal condition of affairs. Other qualifications being equal, the man who is the most heartless and most indifferent to the cry of hunger and distress, who has made a record for harsh treatment of labor, is the one who gravitates to the head of big stock companies. No item of saving must be neglected to maintain high prices of their watered stock on the exchange, and human sympathy must not interfere.

In small businesses and factories there is still left something of brotherly love. The employer knows the majority of his employes and sympathizes with them, but with the millionaire corporations and trusts that now predominate in the "protected" industries, this "sentiment" in business is minimized. The manger sits in his office, perhaps a thousand miles from his employes, many of whom have never seen him, and could not speak his language if they did. There is little opportunity for the cultivation of sympathy in such an arrangement, nor does the manager seek any. Justice, sympathy, love are foreign to his business, which is not run on Sunday-school principles. He, himself, has had to reverse all of his Sunday-school ideas to become the President of so great a company. He knows that shrewdness, diplomacy, deception, cunning, and fraud count for more than honesty, frankness, and uprightness in putting a man to the front.

Tissue Paper Trust.

The most recent scheme of combination to raise prices and squeeze labor is in the tissue paper industry. After many fruitless efforts to form a syndicate the fifteen or twenty manufacturers at last "got together" in the Astor House in New York, July 6 or 7. After several days' discussion they departed in a mysterious way, leaving the public ignorant of exactly what plan of consolidation was adopted. One gentleman stated that the reason for the formation of this syndicate was that prices had gotten down to the bottom notch and something must be done to save the manufacturers. The duty on tissue paper was increased by McKinley from 25 per cent. ad valorem to 8 cents per pound and 15 per cent. ad valorem—equivalent to from 75 to 100 per cent. Such a duty as this would make any industry uneasy until it had entered the last stage of McKinleyism—trustdom.

Carnegie in Theory and Practice.

The reduction of wages in the iron mills of Pennsylvania and the policy pursued by Carnegie, Frick and other protected iron barons is causing a great deal of anxiety to the party responsible for this condition of affairs. General Clarkson, ex-Chairman of the Republican National Committee, was quoted on July 5th as having criticised Andrew Carnegie in the following language: "Mr. Carnegie is a man of vast fortune and his wealth has been made by his workmen. In saying this I do not belittle Carnegie's marvelous faculty for accumulation. He has written a great deal about 'Triumphant Democracy' and the responsibilities of wealth, and created the impression among many that he is at heart a philanthropist. Now is his opportunity to show that this reputation is deserved. These workmen cannot be wrong in objecting to the treatment they are now subjected to. There have been no convulsions in business that could possibly make these great reductions necessary. Mr. Carnegie should settle the difficulty at once and be generous to these men. As I understand it, they have built their homes there and made the town. There is no place for them to go, and they must rely on Carnegie for their living.

"In France and Germany co-operation is now carried on successfully. Capital invested receives a stated return, and wages are paid as in ordinary businesses. Surplus profits are then divided. Andrew Carnegie has discussed the beauties of co-operation in magazine articles; now he should put his theories into practice and make his works co-operative. His employes would remember him with gratitude and he would establish a reputation throughout the world."

It may be well to recall some of the absurd things said by this millionaire apostle of protection to the few at the expense of the many. Here is one taken from Carnegie's article on "Wealth," in the North American Review of June, 1889: "Poor and restricted are our opportunities in this life; narrow our horizon; our best work most imperfect; but rich men should be thankful for one inestimable boon. They have it in their power during their lives to busy themselves in organizing benefactions from which the masses of their fellows will derive lasting advantage, and thus dignify their lives. The highest life is probably to be reached not by such limitation of the life of Christ as Count Tolstoi gives us but, while animated by Christ's spirit, by recognizing the changed conditions this age, and adopting modes of expressing this spirit suitable to the changed condition under which we live. Thus is the problem of the rich and poor to be solved. The laws of accumulation will be left free; the laws of distribution free. Individualism will continue, but the millionaire will be but a trustee for the poor; intrusted for a season with a great part of the increased wealth of the community, but administering it for the community far better than it could or would for itself. Such, in my opinion, is the true gospel concerning wealth, obedience to which is destined some day to solve the problem of the rich and the poor, and thus bring 'Peace on earth, among men good-will.'"

The Unprotected Majority.

Mr. Norman H. Pollock, in the World of July 5, gave the following list of workers who get no benefit from protection, but who, because of it, must pay more for what they eat, drink and wear. The list could be extended to a much greater length. It is observed that, so far as average yearly wages are concerned, these workers earn more than those at work in the highly protected woolen, iron, cotton and silk industries:

Actors, authors, architects, agents, artists.

Bakers, butchers, boot and shoe makers, builders, brakemen, bricklayers.

Drivers, dock-builders, deck-hands, dressmakers.

Engravers, expressmen, elevatormen, engineers.

Farmers, flagmen.

Gardeners, grocerymen.

Hotelkeepers, housekeepers, helpers.

Kalsominers.

Laborers, 'longshoremen.

Ministers, machinists, musicians, masons.

Printers, painters, plumbers, priests, physicians, plasterers.

Seamstresses, school teachers, servants.

Tailors, truckmen.

Watchmen, whitewashers.

Reform Club Work.

Chairman E. Ellery Anderson, of the Reform Club, has just issued an appeal for subscription, which contains the following statement of one of the objects of the club during this campaign:

"It is our earnest desire to secure the election of Grover Cleveland as President of the United States. We wish to satisfy the great masses of voters that a protective tariff does not tend to increase the wages of the workman, but on the contrary tends to decrease them. We wish to satisfy them that a protective tariff does not increase the prices of the necessaries of life, and that the truth in regard to this matter cannot be reached by comparing the prices of today with prices in years gone by, but that the true test is obtained by comparing the prices of articles in this country with the prices at the same period of the same or similar articles in other markets.

"We wish to satisfy the great masses of the voters that the chief end and object of the protective system is to develop in this land the most baneful of all industries, the 'manufacture of the millionaire.' We wish to satisfy the masses that wealth, which is not the reward of labor, but which is the unnatural product of laws passed for the benefit of favored classes, is of necessity drawn out of the substance and savings of the poor, and it is for that reason a cruel and unjust burden to the community."

Reduce the Duty.

The Carnegie steel works enjoy protection to the amount of from 50 to 75 per cent.

They refuse to share this bounty equitably with their workmen. Their political agents in the last Congress rejected an amendment offered by the Democrats making all increase of duty contingent upon a corresponding increase of wages.

As the monopolists will not share their bounty either compulsorily or voluntarily with their workmen, for whose benefit it is claimed that high tariffs exist, why not repeal or reduce the duty?

A bill to this effect passed by the House would be a healthful admonition.—New York World.

FOR THE LADIES.

ACCOMPLISHED SWEDISH WOMEN.

Swedish women are unusually accomplished, and they have attained to distinction as musical composers, painters, sculptors, authors and translators. They are also proficient in the arts of engraving on wood and glass, wood carving, map making, mother-of-pearl cutting, goldsmithing and book-binding. Woman's wages are, however, smaller than those received by men, and educational advantages are greater for boys than for girls.—[New York Commercial Advertiser.

MY LADY'S SHOE BUTTONS.

Shoe buttons are now enlisted among the slaves of Dame Fashion. The plain, black commonplace shoe button is styled antique and bright silver, or gold ones are attached to the fashionable shoe. Carrying the thing to extremes, as usual, the French shops have jeweled shoe buttons in stock, which they sell by the set of twenty-four round, sparkling buttons. Silver, studded with turquoise, are popular; so are the round gold buttons, brilliant with diminutive garnets. Buttons of solid pearl, mounted in gold, have been seen.—[Shoe and Leather Facts.

PRETTY PARASOLS.

Each day shows some handsome addition to the already elaborate display of parasols. For coaching are elegant designs in white and gold brocade, pink, lilac and silver, white, green and primrose, and other delicate combinations. Rose-colored linings appear on parasols of gray, fawn, black and white silk, and frills or tape fringes finish the edges. Dressy styles in pale-hued silk have wide lace insertions put on in arching bands or deep Vandyke points. For garden parties are wonderful creations in tulle, with a wreath of flowers outside and grasses for fringe, and fancy rush or willow handles. Many of these are transparent and show the gilt ribs through the airy folds of lace, muslin, tulle, gauze or lisse—plaited, shirred, puffed or gathered. A large portion of the parasol handles are of natural woods, holly, white birch, bamboo, oak or cherry, with curiously twisted rings or crooks at the end, or they are quaintly carved and silver-tipped.—[St. Louis Republic.

AN ODD KIND OF CORD.

A material that is new this year is an odd kind of cord, hardly more than a thread. Whole hats are made of this, in one color, or two, or more. The cord is not woven, but lies loose. A crown of the cord in yellow looked like a twist of taffy. Green and brown are pretty together. In ornaments there are bands of spangles, jet ruffling, plain and tipped with gold, jet oblongs, mother of pearl crescents, butterflies and bees with rhinestone bodies, big gold daisies, bigger black lace daisies with jet centres, and biggest black and blue jet daisies. Filigree ornaments are employed with special success by one house. The ruffling of jet and beads is entirely new and is repeated in straw.

Ruffles of every material are much approved. One or two narrow, single ruffles of velvet are on the edge of hats, or, perhaps, a double ruffle, as one of green velvet shirred on a large centre cord about the edge of a green and white-striped Milan hat, the trimming completed with high-stemmed white jonquils and white Irish lace. A double ruche of this same lace is on a blue chip. Ribbon is quilled and sewed on the brim of a hat to give a celled surface. Lace is put on around the edge in a box-plaited ruffle.—[New York Times.

WOMEN ALWAYS ECONOMIZE.

The most recklessly extravagant woman has a vein of economy somewhere in her composition. Economy is born in a woman. It may not develop in a manner to prove either beneficial to herself or her husband. Yet there will always be some point at which she will retrench, will look well to the pennies and think and calculate with the ablest financier.

She may be willing to pay $100 for a gown, but will shop all over town to save ten cents a yard on the lining.

She may spend $5 for a ride in the park, but she will begrudge five cents car fare when out shopping. She may stint the table at one time and be wildly extravagant at another. She may ruin a whole garment by the desire to finish it cheaply, which desire has remorselessly seized her at the last moment, but there is one thing in which she never economizes. When she loves she loves with her whole heart. There is no stint—only a giving of all the wealth of her affection. Therefore do not laugh at her little economies; simply remember that a woman to be womanly must be just made up of those contradictions that seem so ridiculous to the average masculine mind.—[Philadelphia Times.

HINTS WORTH REMEMBERING.

One never-to-be-forgotten principle governing the selection of girdles is that if the waist is large a belt darker than the dress makes it seem smaller; if the waist is willowy a light or bright belt emphasizes its slender grace. And also equally important is that a wide belt and a small girth are the only combinations compatible with good taste.

A quaint conceit is that of matching the belt with shoes for outing costumes, lizard, alligator and suede being the materials usually employed. Ultra fashionables indulge in rattlesnake and pig skin for girdle and boots, and white suede, white canvas and white patent leather will be well worn. For evening wear red slippers with jet butterflies and black suede with jeweled butterfly tips of cream-white fans of lace set in over the instep and jeweled buckles are among the novelties. Cloth-topped button boots with patent leather tips are most approved for the promenade, and low-laced shoes of patent leather or suede, matching the costume in tint, for house or carriage use.

Ties are certainly the most convenient thing for ordinary wear. They will not do for tramping or climbing, but apart from these they will answer almost every purpose. For dressy occasions the fine ones are just the thing, and those of a very stout and serviceable make and material can be secured for other use.

But above all things avoid gaiters is the advice of a New York correspondent. I know they look very pretty in pictures, and they can be had in all shades and can be made to order in the same material as your dress if you desire at a very low price, but, in spite of all this, never, never spoil the shape of a pretty foot—if you possess one—by wearing a gaiter. You can positively have no ankle, small or large, and no instep, if you don one of these ungainly boot tops. Rather wear a well-fitting shoe, if you must have a top.

HOW VICTORIA TRAVELS.

The two carriages provided for Her Majesty's railway journeys were constructed and furnished in Belgium, and are usually kept in the Gare du Nord at Brussels.

Their external aspect is not very different from that of other saloon carriages. They are connected by a short corridor, forming a suit of small appartments. In front is a box for the Scottish Highland man servant attending on Her Majesty.

The drawing room for the Queen and princess Beatrice is furnished with a sofa, two armchairs and footstools of Louis XVI. style, all covered with blue silk, with yellow fringes and tassels. The walls are hung with silk capitonnee, which is blue for the dado and pearl gray above, brocaded with the shamrock, rose and thistle in pale yellow. The curtains are blue and white. The small table is of a pale colored wood. A dark Indian carpet is spread on the floor. There are four lights in the ceiling; in the center is a ventilator of cut out brass.

The saloon leads to the dressing room, which is hung in Japanese style, with bamboo round the floor. The wash hand stand is covered with dark red morocco leather, relieved with white metal ornaments and nails. The basins and all the toilet service are of the same metal. Two fairy lights stand on the table. The royal ladies' bedroom is decorated in gray and light brown colors; the larger of the two beds is for the Queen, the other is for the Princess Beatrice or whoever travels with Her Majesty.

Beyond the bedroom is a sort of luggage room, where the maids sleep on sofas. Her Majesty on the road takes her meals in the saloon, which is lighted at night by four oil lamps fixed in brackets on the walls, and by one or two portable lamps. No electric lighting is adopted, but electric bells are fixed to call the servants. The bedding is the Queen's own, and she takes it away on leaving the train.—[New York Press.

FASHION NOTES.

Moonstones are much liked, whether worn by themselves or with a setting of diamonds.

The peasant bodice is pretty, in bright silk, laced over a French guimpe of Indian linen.

Many of the newest foulards show a Paisley shawl pattern in delicate colors on a shot foundation.

There are jet-embroidered hose, also those with large designs like baskets of flowers with trailing vines.

Garden hats are of coarse rustic straw, or of shirred mull, with no trimming save a large rosette or a few soft loops of mull.

New waitress aprons seen in the best shops are of fine lawn with wide hems and deep ruffles reaching to the bottom of the skirts.

The bedford cord challie is a dainty fabric. Fine serge or Henrietta in delicate shades has colored stones set sparsely in a fancy border.

Aigrettes of feathers are worn again in the hair, and large straw hats show aigrettes of antennæ or insect horns rising from bows of ribbon.

Moire or brocaded ribbon, laid in perpendicular stripes, with floating ends cut in a fishtail, are effective for ornamenting wool or silk dresses.

Robes prepared for the Russian-blouse gowns have the narrow border on sufficient of the goods to form the blouse skirt, besides that for the bodice.

The old-fashioned Swisses, dotted in white, red or blue, make cool and fresh-looking morning dresses made up with a quantity of ribbon and embroidery.

The prettiest trimmings for French ginghams, batistes, zephyrs and similar fabrics are of open work embroideries, point de Gene or the light and delicate Irish linen laces.

Something new in shoes is the bootee. It is merely a low shoe that has the front uppers extended high on the instep till it protects the ankle slightly and is laced. It comes in all colors.

Hats of gold and silver lace have little trimming save a tuft of ostrich tips or a knot of flowers or ribbon, being sufficiently natty and pleasing to the eye without other adornments.

It is reported on excellent authority that shorter sleeves and longer gloves will be worn. During the hot weather this is a very comfortable fashion and long gloves are distinctly dressy in appearance.

Shawl straps for steamer rugs are made of dark leather, studded with gilt beads and caught with gilt buckles representing anchors. Pillows to be placed at the back of steamer chairs are made of linen edged with a soft twisted cord.

Suede, apricot, Argentine gray, mignonette green, raspberry, silver-blue, also soft tints, shot with color, are among the shades of driving or dust cloaks of light taffetas or surah worn in open victorias and in village carts of the various summer resorts.

White crepons come in patterns or robes beautifully embroidered in colors. There will be a wide border of scattered daisies worked in green silks, or of violvets in their own color and in yellow. Narrower bands of the embroidery are provided for the waist.

Sailor hats, which are always used for lawn tennis and boating, are more becoming than usual. The shape is something like the old one, but has a round brim, and is trimmed with sash ribbon around the crown, tied in a bow at the side, under which the brim is slightly caught up.

Speaking of the elaborate silk embroidery in colors, it is a pleasure to note the exquisite work of this sort upon white chiffon parasols for midsummer. Plain white silk parasols have the canopy gathered high around the ferrule without bows or rosette. A canopy of black silk has tiny white plumes brocaded all over it.

The rigid simplicity of the tailor-made gowns is decidedly modified by handsome buttons and bright waist-coats of rich material. This is particularly noticeable on warm days, when ladies leave their coats unfastened, and in the plainest gowns of rough, dark material glimpses of gay plastrons, waistcoats, and yokes are seen covered with handsome embroidery or brocaded with brilliant patterns.

The Quantity in a Barrel.

In the United States the barrel is a very uncertain quantity. A barrel of wine, beer or cider contains thirty-one and a half gallons; the Cincinnati lamp-oil barrel has forty-three gallons; the Kentucky whiskey barrel from forty to forty-five gallons. In several States of the East a barrel, as a measure of articles other than liquids, is a legal fixed quantity. In a half-dozen of the Eastern States a barrel of grain is five bushels, of rice 220 pounds, of flour 196 pounds and of lime 320 pounds.—[St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

An American Achievement.

Chicago is a synonym for enterprise, endeavor and success, but most people associate her fame with success in the material and staple lines rather than the artistic; hence it will surprise many to learn that in the manufacture and sale of musical instruments Chicago possesses the largest house not only in America but in the entire world. Lyon & Healy, whose factories are located near Union Park, produce annually more musical instruments than any other factory in existence. The yearly output now exceeds 100,000 instruments of all kinds, and the large buildings which a few years ago amply sufficed for their purposes are now taxed to the utmost to accommodate their working army of three hundred skilled mechanics. The business done by them in brass-band supplies alone is enormous, and covers the entire United States, from Bangor to Tia Juana, and from Whatcom to De Funiak Springs. Their success has been won by years of earnest work, combined with careful attention to the needs of the musical public, and as a result the American-made guitar, banjo, mandolin, or any other instrument is preferred by the best judges to the finest work of foreign manufacture.

It is a real pleasure to an American journalist to record such an achievement, because, while we are justly proud of our great stock yards, our colossal elevators and our immense shipping interests, it is something more to know that our people have not neglected the more elevated fields, but stand as prominently forward in them as in the others. The largest and most varied stock of musical instruments carried by any firm in the world can be seen at Lyon & Healy's warerooms, 53 Monroe street, Chicago, catalogues of which can be had free upon application.

A Prominent Citizen.

Three years ago I had a severe abscess, and used everything I could hear of without benefit. My blood was in a very bad state, had intense pain in my back, had to give up work and walk on crutches. Was advised to try Swamp-Root, the great Kidney specific. After only using one bottle I feel better than for years.

THE AUBURN COURIER

OFFICIAL PAPER OF DeKALB COUNTY.

JAMES A. BARNS, Editor.

Registered at the Auburn, Indiana, post-office as second-class matter.

THURSDAY..........JULY 28, 1892.

REPORTS of many deaths from excessive heat comes from all over the country.

NEITHER Carnegie nor any other "protected" industry has any right to employ hired assassins like the Pinkertons to crush out their refractory workmen.

THE office of the LaGrange Register was destroyed by fire last Friday morning in a big blaze they had there. The loss is put down at $3,500, with $2,000 insurance.

GEO. C. STOLL, secretary of the people's party state committee, and Dr. J. A. Houser, their candidate for lieutenant-governor, have both resigned. There are other indications that the party is going to pieces.

H. C. FRICK, the manager of the Carnegie works at Homestead, was shot Saturday afternoon, by a Jewish Russian anarchist, who says he is a printer. The wounds were not fatal, and the would-be assassin was locked up.

CARTER, present commissioner of the general land office, has been chosen chairman of the national republican committee. He has no great reputation, but the big bosses had all refused to serve. Harrison seems to be in a bad way.

R. T. McDONALD, the great Blaine man at Ft. Wayne, has also resigned. He was a member of the republican county committee. He gives the same reason as do the others, that there is a coldness between them and the Harrison ice wagon.

THE Carnegie trouble teaches one lesson at least that will prove valuable to workingmen. It shows that a protective tariff does not raise their wages—that it does not prevent their wages from being reduced. Hundreds of strikes and reductions in wages in the protected industries have proved this before.

THE COURIER recently gave a list of democratic laws in the interest of common people. We wish to add another. The last democratic legislature passed a law forbidding the use of Pinkerton men in Indiana, under a penalty of $100 and imprisonment one year. The people can see which party is friendly to them.

REPUBLICAN papers generally show sympathy with Carnegie in the recent troubles, as they know that men who have been made millionaires through "protection" are the ones who contribute campaign funds. But they speak sneeringly of the men as having "struck on account of a slight reduction in wages."

LATEST accounts say that Frick's wounds are not serious. There were three pistol wounds and four dirk stabs, but all are healing nicely, and he is giving attention to his business. Whether he was to blame in the original trouble or not, every law abiding citizen will unite in condemning his cowardly assailant.

THE BUTLER RECORD is again entangled in figures and trying to prove that the McKinley tariff rate averages only 20 per cent. It has been only a year or so, since he was trying to prove that the former tariff average was only 30 per cent. All admit that the McKinley rate is higher. So he can now go to work and show that 20 is higher than thirty. We would like to see his figures.

HARRY HANNA, of Ft. Wayne, the chairman of the republican congressional committee for this district, resigned last week, giving a pressure of business as the reason. Probably the real reason was a dislike of Harrison. Capt. J. B. Harper has been chosen to succeed him. But the Allen county republican vote is likely to fall off a good deal, owing to the great number of anti-Harrison men there.

THE republicans have much to say against the democratic tariff plank. They may as well say it while they have a chance, for the people are tired of this robbery. Not a man in DeKalb county is a penny richer for a protective tariff. But it has killed our foreign trade, and so reduced the price of farm products, that farms are only worth two-thirds as much as they were thirty years ago, though greatly improved since then.

CLEVELAND AND STEVENSON were formally notified of their nomination last week at Madison Square, in New York City, in the presence of about 20,000 people. It is usual to have these formal notifications at the home of the candidate, or at his office, but this was the first one in public. It will probably set the fashion. Each candidate replied in a brief speech. Both spoke well, and were repeatedly cheered. Mr. Cleveland's speech was, as usual, clear cut and decisive—no waste of words, and an abundance of good ideas. No one should fail to read it.

REPUBLICAN papers are still insisting that "foreigners pay the tariff". This ridiculous proposition has been exploded so often that we wonder they don't get ashamed to mention it. But anyone who is thin enough to be gulled by such truck, is not likely to blush at anything. Suppose we see how the foreigners would pay the tariff on pearl buttons. For each dollar's worth he sends over to us, he would have to pay, under the McKinley rate, $3.50 to $14.00. Will any of these editors kindly borrow of the Indianapolis Journal, or the Inter Ocean, or of the New York Press, an explanation of how the foreigners could do this and make money?

SATURDAY there were several more disgruntled republicans brought to light in Ft. Wayne. The county chairman, Vesey, did not resign, but two precinct committeemen did. Then later, while the Hendricks Club was in session, ex-Mayor, Daniel Harding, whom the republicans managed to elect two or three years ago, suddenly entered the club room, and said, "Please enroll my name on the list of members." Then he walked out and went and left his measure for a Cleveland and Stevenson uniform. His son also joined the club. It is also said that Attorney Andrew Purman will support Cleveland. He has been quite prominent as a republican speaker.

QUITE a number of republican papers about here are getting their patent campaign "original editorials" again. The one headed, "Dana shames the 'small' democratic editors," is quite popular with those republican editors who can't write their own. They are probably ignorant of the fact that Dana seldom or never, supports the democratic ticket, and is to all intents and purposes a republican. He believes in the highest of protective tariffs, and the influence of his paper, if it has any, is always on the side of republicanism. Lastly, Dana is not an able man, except so far as being a wild, brilliant writer is concerned. We can point to a number of editors in this state, of both parties (outside of DeKalb county,) who are abler men than Dana ever was and any of them better democrats.

Improve West Seventh Street.

We have now had about four weeks of good traveling over West Seventh street to the Lake Shore station, and people can appreciate the advantages of a "navigable" road, over one which for the previous six months could hardly be navigated with a life-boat. This street becomes almost or quite impassable every year, but the winter and spring just past has been even worse than usual. But like the Irishman's house roof, when the weather was bad it could not be fixed, and now that the weather is good everybody seems to have lost interest in it. But now is just the time to talk business. This street should be improved. The west end from Geo. Lanning's to the railroad grounds should have the attention of the people, the property owners and the town board now while work is possible. As to the plans, all agree that the first thing to be done is to drain the road, that no water will be left to soak the ground. To do this the best plan that we have heard is that of Dr. Matheny, who has given this subject a great deal of intelligent study. His plan is to put in a triple, or at least double line of drains to bring the water from the west end eastward into the big drain by Lanning's. Then remove about eight inches of the present surface and cover it with a heavy layer of stone and overlay this with gravel, or as good material as we could get. This road would have a hard foundation, be without water or mud, and in a few years, when we felt able, we could pave it, for the foundation would still be good. The expense would be, he thinks, not far from $75 a lot, to be assessed in the main on property owners, the town paying its proper share for street and alley crossings. The work could be paid in bonds to run ten years, giving owners a chance to pay. We have been told that a number of these are anxious to assume this expense, as the improvement would add to the value of their property, as well as remove an unsightly sea of mud during a half of the year. The matter could be started by a petition to be presented to the town board. Who will be the one to move in this matter.

Business Change at St. Joe.

Editor Mort. Olds, of the St. Joe News, was in the city last Saturday and from him we learned of an important business change at St. Joe. The well-known dry goods store of J. D. Leighty has changed hands, the purchasers being M. Olds, J. K. Stafford and W. C. and C. A. Patterson. Of these Mr. Stafford has been an extensive dealer in agricultural implements, and more especially in buggies. The Patterson brothers have long been engaged in the drug business, and lately W. C. Patterson has been cashier in the St. Joe bank. Mr. Olds is the only member of the new firm who has any great experience in the dry goods business, and as it is expected that he will take charge of that department he will probably find it necessary to sell his paper, the News. This will be a good chance for some enterprising young man, especially a good printer, who has some capital and a fair share of energy and industry. Mr. Olds has made a success of the newspaper business, and we believe has made it pay financially. Mr. Leighty will go out of business, though he has a good deal of property about there that will take some of his time. The store room will be fully refitted, papered, etc., and the new firm will have a big opening about Sept. 1.

Lawsuits Over Mince Pie.

The latest phase of the famous mince meat litigation which has occupied the attention of the courts and the public for the past five years, is the announcement of Merrel & Soule, of Syrracuse, N. Y., the manufacturers of the celebrated None Such brand of Condensed Mince Meat, that they have effected a settlement with the owners of the patent, by which they and their customers are exempted from all further share in the litigation, or claims for damages. The arrangement also porvides future immunity to Merrill & Soul in the manufacture and sale of their None Such brand. This is good news for mince pie lovers everywhere, who can now eat their None Such pies in peace. This brand has always been a decided favorite wherever introduced; and the further fact that it can now be handled without the risk of the legal complications which attaches to the other makes, will doubtless add very largely to its already large sale.

A Chance for Composers.

In order to stimulate American composition, The Ladies' Home Journal has just made public an attractive series of liberal prizes for the best original musical composition by resident in the United States and Canada. The prizes call for a waltz, a piano composition, a pleasing ballad and a popular song, an anthem and the four best hymn tunes. The competition is open until November 1st, next. The opportunity has an additional attractiveness since the prize compositions will form part of a series for which Strauss is writing an original waltz, and Charles Gounod and Sir Arthur Sullivan each an original song.

Auburn's New Factory.

It is settled now and we feel free to talk about it. The Auburn Carriage Body Co. will be at Auburn. On Monday evening a number of Auburn capitalists met here for final action in regard to subscribing the necessary stock and effecting an organization. The stock subscribed is $20,000, and all the parties are substantial men. The board of directors elected are: Geo. A. Bishop, Charles Eckhart, Frank Zimmerman, W. P. Harter, Samuel Nickey, J. D. Leighty and John W. Baxter. The officers chosen are: Geo. A. Bishop, president; W. P. Harter, treasurer and Geo. J. Duncan, secretary. Within a week a site for the erection of the necessary buildings will be selected, and building will then begin at once. Two sites have already been offered them, gratis, and we presume one of the two may be taken, as the company feel that a site should not cost them much, in view of the great benefit the location of the factory will be. Still, they will have a good site, no matter how much it will cost. And it is also definitely settled that the factory will be located near one of our railroads. This is the outcome of negotiations that have been pending for some time with the parties who owned the plant at Waterloo. Of course new machinery of various kinds will be added and its facilities greatly enlarged. This will bring us in a number of very desirable citizens, and add to Auburn's already large list of working men and manufacturing interests. The stockholders are G. A. Bishop, F. T. Zimmerman, J. W. Baxter, Charles Eckhart, I. O. Buchtel, George Lanning, W. B. Campbell, W. P. Harter, H. C. Shull, Gandy & Nickey, Geo. J. Duncan, H. N. Coffinberry, S. D. Hanna, W. H. Nusbaum, F. L. Britton, J. D. Leighty and C. M. Merica. There are others who will probably enter the company, who were not present at the meeting.

In Business Again.

Our people will remember the genial and accommodating Henry J. Mossey, who was so long connected with John Kruger in the grocery business, and who succeeded the former at the store room where the City Laundry is now located, and conducted the business until Mr. K., again started on the great voyage of trade and traffic, when he again became connected with the latter. On Thursday evening, of last week, he took possession of the store, bakeshop and business, of C. H. Ling, on South Main St., where he will continue, as did his predecessor, to supply the public with the best qualities of groceries, general produce, canned goods, bread, pies, cakes, confectionery, tobacco, cigars and tropical fruits. He also has one of the most finely equipped ice cream parlors in this part of the country, to which he invites careful attention. Mr. Mossey is a fair and square man to deal with, as those who have had business transactions with him in the past, will testify. He does not propose to take the town by storm, sweeping everything that comes before him; nor does he expect the people to believe that he will sell goods for less than cost. For he intends doing no such thing. If honest goods at fair prices are what you are looking for, he will meet you half way. Call at Ling's old stand, Auburn, Ind.

"The Rocky Mountain Limited" And "The Big 5."

Two Grand Trains Daily Between the World's Fair City and the Foothills.

One Night Out, or One Day Out. Take Your Choice. Business Demands It, and the People Must Have it.

The popularity of "The Great Rock Island Route" as a Colorado line—it having long time since taken first place as the people's favorite between the Lakes and the Mountains—has compelled the management to increase its present splendid service by the addition of a train that is onenight on the road from Chicago to Denver, Colorado Springs or Pueblo. This train will be known as the "ROCKY MOUNTAIN LIMITED," and will be put in service May first. Leaves Chicago daily at 10:45 a. m., arriving at above cities in the afternoon of the next day, earlier than any of its competitors. Especial equipment has been built for this train, with the view of making it a limited in every sense of the word, and best of all, there will be no extra charge. The route of this exceedingly fast train is by the Rock Island Short Line, and a few of the large cities through which it passes, are Davenport, DesMoines, Council Bluffs, Omaha, Lincoln, Beatrice, Fairbury, Belleville, Phillipsburg, Smith Center, Colby and Goodland. This makes it a most desirable route, and particularly interesting to the traveler. Another point: The popularity of our dining-car service is still on the increase, and no money spared to make this service what our patrons always say, "the best."

Our "Big 5" will continued as usual, leaving Chicago at 10 p. m. and arriving at Denver, Colorado Springs and Pueblo, the second morning, being but one day out, and this fast and popular train goes through Omaha.

Our No. 11 will leave as heretofore at 6 p. m., arrive at Kansas City at 9:00 a. m., and will reach Denver, Colorado Springs and Pueblo the second morning.

Our Colorado service is made perfect by this new "Rocky Mountain Limited" and the "Big 5," and gives to the traveling public two flyers daily.

Manitou passengers should consult the map and time tables of our line, to fully appreciate the advantages in time saved by taking this route, when on their summer vacation.

The Auburn Iron Works are crowded with work at present, so much so that they were compelled to hire another hand last week. John Mitchell, who formerly worked in the Auburn Foundry, is now at the above named institution.

Dr. Morrison, at Hudson, writes us a severe letter about the new town of Ashley. We think there can be nothing gained by Hudson or by Ashley, in getting up a quarrel. It will be better for both, that we omit the letter.

We had a talk this week with three farmers, S. M. High, Dan Metcalf and H. P. Stroh, all men of good judgment in crop matters, who say the wheat will not be over half a crop. L. J. Miller, of this place, the leading grain buyer, says the same.

The W. R. C. had a good patronage at the ice cream social on the court house lawn Saturday evening in spite of the short notice. The ice cream was splendid, the weather hot, and the cause a good one, so of course they had good patronage.

Miss Mary Teeters' Sabbath school class went to Hamilton Friday for a picnic. They surprised themselves and everybody by getting up before 4 o'clock, so as to go in the cool of the morning. The lunch baskets were abundant, and they had an enjoyable party.

We are told that Bro. Campbell, of the Dispatch, is so anxious to receive the nomination for state senator that he goes into Jackson township every day, to see the delegates. In fact, when prospects are favorable he goes twice a day. There are some mighty fine people in Jackson township, anyway.

The ladies of the Lutheran church will give a good, substantial supper at the lecture room, next Saturday evening, July 30. Supper served from 6 to 8 o'clock. Mite 15c. Also the young people will give an ice cream social at the parsonage the same evening. Mite 10 cents. All come and have a good, enjoyable time.

G. H. Yesbera returned last week from his business trip to Cleveland. He bought an immence stock of goods, including a complete assortment of the best goods in ready made clothing. The new stock will be opened when his additional rooms are done and ready to occupy, which will be about Sept. 1st.

Mrs. Cuppy was awakened the other night by some one pulling off flowers in front of her residence. She warned them to stop, but the two ladies who pulled the flowers, had the cheek to stop long enough to pin them onto their best fellows, who appeared glad to be the receiver of stolen goods. A love for beautiful flowers may be all right, but we draw the line at stealing them.

S. C. Swineford has a cousin at the new town, Everett, on the Sound, in the northwest part of Washington. It is north of Seattle and Tacoma, and has an excellent harbor, plenty of timber, coal, silver, iron, etc., and added to these natural advantages, has an abundance of capital. Several wealthy men like Rockafeller, have money in the enterprise, several miles of streets have been graded, factories and railroads have been secured, and other industries attracted there. Though started only this spring they already have a population the size of Auburn's.

Tuesday about one o'clock, the fire bell rang out its warning that angry flames were somewhere licking the arid atmosphere unreined. The boys and "Si Ghreys" were soon at the scene of action. which proved to be the immense pile of sawdust at Trentman's factory. The fire soon yielded to the force of a steady stream of water, and all went merry again. The department made a grand display going down Main street on a run. One man on horseback came first, to clear the way, "same like Chicago". Then came Marshal Pfefferl with the big team and engine on full run, followed by the other big team with ladder trucks, hose cart, etc. And though the first team was hauling gravel when the bell sounded, it was all changed—hitched up, and the run of half a mile made in time to save the property. Auburn has reason to be proud of her fire department.

The Methodist ladies of the north section will give a lawn social at the home of Mrs. Boland, Friday evening, July 29. Refreshments will consist of ice-cream, cake and coffee, and will be served from half past five o'clock till eight. A most cordial invitation is extended to all.

Albert Weaver, who clerks at Hebel's was careless enough to lay his vest down on a box in a rather prominent place in the store Tuesday morning. Not long after, he found that his watch had been taken from it. No clue. But this hot weather is proving expensive in several ways.

J. F. Shuman, secretary of the Waterlooo fair, was here Tuesday. He is begining to work up the fair and its interests. It begins Oct. 3, leaving a space of two full weeks from the time the Auburn fair closes to the time the Waterloo fair begins. That will give both fairs a good showing.

Joe Beugnot got either drunk or crazy, or both, and made a murderous assault Tuesday evening, on first his mother and later his wife, both times using a butcher knife. He was arrested and several knives, razors, etc., were found on him. He was brought before 'Squire Walborn, and in default of bail, is now in jail.

The democrats of this place have been talking of raising a hickory pole on Saturday and we had prepared a notice, but after waiting till nearly 5 p. m. Wednesday and not receiving a definite notice, as had been promised, we are not prepared to say whether it has been abandoned or not. Perhaps it has been decided to wait till cooler weather.

Rev. H. A. Sawyers and his wife reached here last Thursday on their return from New York, where they attended the great Christian Endeavor meeting. They found many warm friends to greet them here. They visited the friends at Waterloo Saturday and Sunday, and after concluding their visit here, returned to their home at Cameron, Mo., where Mr. Sawyer is pastor of a flourishing congregation.

E. C. Krontz of Wilmington ought to take his head of hair to the fair and enter it among the scientific curiosities. For some years it has been growing gray steadily, but last winter he had a long pull of the grip, and some time after he got well some member of his family noticed that his hair, especially near the temple and a prominent bunch over the center of his forehead, was changing color, and it is now a dull red. Just what causes this is hard to tell.

A. J. Halderman, of this place, called up to see us Friday. He goes to Nettleton, Miss., where he is in charge of the "Nettleton Hardwood Lumber Mills". His family will remain here and enjoy the comforts of our beautiful little city. He was formerly connected with the Gandy & Nickey Co., of this city. A very strong desire to hear from old Auburn, each week, prompted him to make those communications certain by subscribing to the COURIER. May success crown his efforts in the sunny south.

One of the COURIER scribes was granted the opportunity of gazing upon the magnificent interior of the Lutheran church at Columbia City, a few days since, and was met by a scene of artistic splendor. The building is being finished after the latest modern style. The frescoing is replete with designs of most difficult and beauiful to decorative art, while the electroller chandelier, made of solid brass, with its thirty-two incandescents, doubtless will dazzle the eye, when once the electric current illuminates. Besides this center chandelier, there are four others located in each corner of the room, each containing 6 lights. On each side of the pulpit, worked in bold relief, is Reubens' painting of Christ, while behind the pulpit will stand the harmonic pipe organ. About $6,000 is being spent in preparing a sanctuary of art and grandeur.

Will Kruger is now chief man at the popular South Main Kruger grocery, since Mr. Mossey bought out Ling. That reminds us too, that he has the right to sell in this county, the improved potato peeler that makes the Saratoga chips. It is an improvement over the one sold at the Waterloo Fair last year. Parties can see them at the Kruger grocery.

Isaac Speer, of Waterloo, was in town last Thursday. He had been with his sister-in-law, Mrs. Elza Speer, visiting among the old neighbors east of Auburn. Her home is in Russell county, Kansas, where they have resided several years. She came back here to attend the funeral of her mother, Mrs. Adam Hay, who died at her home in Michigan week before last. She also visited her old home in Concord township.

The location here of the Auburn Carriage Body Co. as mentioned elsewhere, in addition to the table factory, that is now putting its establishment at the Trentman factory into shape for beginning work, will be hailed by our people and especially our business people wtih great pleasure. It is business of this kind that Auburn needs more than any other one thing. The Carriage Body Co. has liberal offers of land, and in some cases, of money to locate elswhere, and we think it would be no more than right that our citizens donate to them, the amount of ground they will need.

The Rose Reunion Association.

The Rose family have a reunion at Linwood Park, Vermillion, Ohio, August 24, and 25,. The place is about thirty miles west of Cleveland, and a large attendance is expected, for the family is a numerous one. Last year they held a meeting at the same place and several hundred were present. All the relatives of the "Roses" are invited. For information, address Mrs. E. N. Rose Linwood Park, Vermillion, Ohio, or J. E. Rose, Sec., Auburn, Ind.

Fined Soundly.

Two young men, Stewart and Wallace from east of town, were brought before 'Squire Walborn Tuesday, for disturbing the church picnic at Norris Chapel Saturday evening. The boys named had a grudge against Frank Pyles, a member of the Union Chapel band, and came to the picnic for a fuss They assaulted Pyles, and began pounding him, but were taken away before he was badly hurt. Pyles behaved himself admirably and kept out of the quarrel all he could, but his assailants hung around and made themselves disagreeable to the last. The pleasant meeting soon broke up and the disgusted people went to their homes. The 'Squire fined the boys, and this, with costs, figured up over $72 for both. They should be made to behave themselves.

Our Old People.

DeKalb county has many honored citizens who have lived to a ripe old age, some who have seen every year in the present century. Old Mrs. Weaver, who resides with her son, H. H. Weaver, at the south part of town, is of this number. She is 92, having first seen the light in 1800. Then there is Aunt Mary Brown, whose home is a short distance east of town, who was born in 1802, and will be 90 the 11th of October. She has lately received a visit from one of her sons, Wm. McClellan, who has resided in California since 1849, which would make him one of the original "Forty-niners," as they call themselves, the first who went there in the days of gold excitement. He has been a widower now for thirty-seven years. Then there was Uncle Sammy Wasson, who died last week, who must have been 83. He settled in this county at a date earlier than any other living pioneer, locating where he has since lived in 1833. Then there is Mrs. Mary Mott, who resides with her daughter, Mrs. Hodge, at the north of town. She must be about 86. A list of our old people, who have safely passed through the so called unhealthy days of early settlement, would prove interesting, and besides would show that possibly our county was not as unhealthy as was claimed.

Over Three Hundred Buildings Destroyed by Fire at Bay City, Mich.—Shot Her Husband—Struck by Lightning—Double Tragedy in the South.

BAY CITY IN ASHES.

More Than 300 Buildings Destroyed by Fire.

A special from Bay City, Mich., dated the 26th inst., says: This afternoon at 3 o'clock fire broke out in the lumbering establishment of Miller & Turner on the west side of Water street at the foot of Twenty-ninth. A brisk west wind sent the flames across the street to the east side, which is principally built up with stores, hotels, and restaurants, most of which are of wood. Within an hour Miller & Turner's entire plant had been consumed. The fire had also traveled eastward three blocks, cutting a swath two blocks wide. At this point the path of the conflagration broadened and block after block was swept over with terrible rapidity. Flint, Saginaw and Detroit were telegraphed to for assistance, and Saginaw and Flint responded, each sending an engine and quantities of hose. But the flames continued to spread in spite of the efforts of the firemen, and at 8 o'clock to-night more than 300 buildings had been destroyed, while the conflagration was still sweeping toward the east.

Most of the buildings destroyed were the dwellings of poor people. Many rumors are afloat as to the number of persons who have perished, but so far as known only one fatality is positively known. A woman was sick in one of the houses and perished before help could reach her. The entire loss will reach upward of $1,000,000, but nothing as to the insurance can be learned to-night.

The fire extended north on Thirty-third street to Marsac, north to Thirtieth, east to Broadway, north to Fremont, east to Stanton, north a block and a half, and west to the river, thirty blocks in all. A terrific windstorm from the southwest prevailed. Within fifteen minutes the entire row of frame buildings on Harrison street, from Thirty-third to Thirtieth street, four blocks, were ablaze. Fire companies no sooner laid hose on Harrison street, before they were obliged to run for their lives leaving those exposed to the heat and flames. Long charred and burning boards were lifted up bodily by the wind, and carried to a height of 800 feet, whirled around like feathers and lodged where another sprang up from it. From Harrison street the fire worked back to Polk, then to Taylor, then to Webster, to McCormick and Marsac streets, sweeping everything before. The latter streets were occupied by residents, some of them the poorer classes, and they were obliged to flee to places of safety.

O'Donnell Admitted to Bail.

Pittsburgh special: The action of Judge Magee in admitting Hugh O'Donnell, the leader of the Homestead strikers, to bail, was just what had been anticipated by those who heard the evidence adduced by the prosecution. The court reviewed this evidence at length, cited the law on the question, and announced as his conclusion that no case of murder in the first degree could be made out against the prisoner. It was apparent, he said, that O'Donnell was not an actual participant in the action. Although there are grounds for the belief that he was a sympathizer, there was not evidence enough to justify an indictment for murder in the second degree. He hoped, however, that when the defendant came to trial he would be able to show that he was in no wise guilty of participation in an affray that had resulted in the loss of so many lives. It was the court's imperative duty to admit the defendant to bail and that bail would be fixed at $10,000. The decision was received with a buzz of satisfaction from the crowded courtroom, and it was fully a minute before the officers could secure silence. Then it was announced that no evidence would be offered against Ross, Foy, and Allen, and bail in the same amount was filed for each defendant. Bail was promptly given for all four prisoners and they were released.

Shot Her Husband.

Mrs. Ida Sadler of St. Louis, shot and instantly killed her husband, Marcus. Sadler had been drinking, and returning home after an absence of three days, he had some words with his wife. On removing his coat, his wife saw a photograph of a woman in his pocket. She demanded the picture and the name of the woman. Sadler refused to give her either and his wife seized a revolver and threatened to kill him. Sadler attempted to get the revolver from his wife, and in the scuffle the weapon was discharged, the ball entering Sadler's breast near the heart, killing him almost instantly. Mrs. Sadler claims the shooting was accidental.

Double Tragedy in the South.

A terrible double tragedy was enacted near Benwood, W. Va. Thomas Berlong and his 16-year-old son, John, it is said, insulted the wife of Samuel Winesburg, which the latter resented. The men came to blows, whereupon John Berlong drew a revolver and killed Winesburg, three bullets entering his body. Mrs. Winesburg was shot in the breast near the heart and died. Both of the Berlongs were arrested and jailed.

Sympathy for Private Iams.

Petitions were circulated and liberally signed by citizens of Pennsylvania at Washington, asking Governor Pattison to dismiss from the service Lieut.-Col. Streeter, who inflicted severe punishment on Private Iams, who is said to have applauded the shooting of Frick.

Consular Nominations.

The following nominations have been sent to the Senate: Francis B. Loomis of Ohio, to be Consul of the United States at St. Etienne; Soren Listos of Minnesota, to be Consul of the United States at Dusseldorf.

Struck by Lightning.

Advices from Carthage, N. Y., state that lightning struck a building in that place and a conflagration followed which destroyed $45,000 worth of property. Carthage was almost totally destroyed by fire in 1885.

Killed and Robbed His Partner.

J. B. McCumber, the traveling mechanic who murdered his partner, Frank Tyler, at Rawlins, Wyoming, and who robbed the body, has been captured. He claims that he shot in self-defense. Appearances indicate that a bullet was sent into Tyler's head as he slept. McCumber was found with a party of tramps 200 miles from the scene of the crime.

Oil Refinery Burned.

The main plant, refinery, warehouse, etc., of the Waters Pierce Oil Company, the St. Louis branch of the Standard Oil Company, was burned. The loss will be heavy.

CHOLERA RAGING.

Has Broken Out in a Densely Populated Factory District.

St. Petersburg advices say: Six cases of cholera and four deaths have occurred at Kolomna, sixty-three miles from Moscow, where there are extensive factory works. Two deaths from cholera has occurred in a village near Moscow and two within Moscow. None of these, however, have been reported officially. Few of the principal merchants intend to visit the Nijni-Novgorod fair. Many will abstain from doing business at the fair while others will send subordinates. The Novoe Vremya, describing scenes in the cholera-infected districts, says: "The Baku railroad station was filled with a tumultuous crowd of fugitives. When the doors were opened the crowd rushed to the platform and so overcrowded the trains that many sat on the floor rather than be left behind. The stench of the atmosphere was suffocating. Prudent passengers sprinkled their own and their neighbors' clothes with carbolic acid. A doctor looks at the tongues and feels the passengers' pulses. Everybody protests that he or she is in perfect health. The train then starts. Often within a few minutes a passenger is taken ill with cholera. The inmates of the patients' compartment at once become panic-stricken. The patient is removed and the place where he sat is sprinkled with carbolic acid and the passengers immediately refill their places. A similar scene occurs frequently. At each station the same perfunctory examination is made. No wonder cholera is spreading in Tiflis and other places.

POWDERLY TAKES A HAND.

He Has Some Advice to Offer the President and Governor Pattison.

General Master Workman Powderly has addressed a letter to President Harrison and another to Governor Pattison calling attention to the fact that the laws of the United States and of Pennsylvania have been violated by the invasion of the Pinkertons on July 6. In his letter to the President Mr. Powderly points out that an armed body sailing under the United States flag and not acting under the legal authority of the State or any country or municipality had come up the Monongahela River and opened fire upon the citizens of Homestead, killing a number of persons. Mr. Powderly says that whoever ursurped the functions of the Commander-in-chief of the army of the United States in ordering these men to invade Pennsylvania is guilty of treason and should be punished accordingly, and he therefore asks for an investigation. In his letter to the Governor he points out the illegality of the acts of the Pinkertons in operating as an armed body without the Governor's permission, and asks that steps be immediately taken to effect their punishment.

HEAVY LOSS AT SAUK CENTER.

Davidson Mill, Waterworks, and Other Buildings Destroyed by Fire.

A great fire swept Sauk Center, Minn., doing damage to the extent of $60,000. The fire originated from a hot journal in the third story of the Davidson mill, and spread with such surprising rapidity that the town was soon beside itself with excitement. Connections were made with the waterworks, but they were soon ablaze and the firemen driven off. Messengers were sent to St. Cloud and Little Falls, and those cities responded by starting their fire departments to the scene. The great mill in a short time was beyond saving. A bucket brigade was formed and other buildings drenched. The Davidson mill, which had just been purchased for $36,000, is a total loss, as is also the electric light works across the street. The fire was creeping into the Northern Pacific Depot, when the wind suddenly changed to the north and gave the sweltering bucket brigade a chance to check the flames.

KILLED WITH A COAL PICK.

A Worthless Husband Murders His Mother-in-Law.

William Brooks, a young married man of Jobs, Ohio, has been separated from his wife for some time on account of his failure to provide for her support. She has been living with her parents. Wednesday night Brooks went to Murray City and got drunk and before leaving the town he bought a large coal pick. Armed with this, he went to the house of his father-in-law, Murray Hanshaw, and attacked his wife, striking her three times with the pick and knocking her senseless. Mrs. Henshaw interfered, when Brooks struck her in the face with the pick, killing her. His wife is dying from the effects of her injuries. Brooks escaped, but if caught will probably be lynched.

SUGAR TRUST COMPETITOR.

Reports that American Capital Is to Be Interested in Cuba.

Juan Romero, a representative of a syndicate of Cuban sugar planters, has been in Philadelphia since last week conferring with several prominent capitalists and sugar men, with a view of forming a large sugar company. With what success he has met is not known, as Senor Romero declined to discuss the question. It is said that several American capitalists formed a syndicate for the purpose of starting a large central sugar establishment near Trinidad.

Judgment Against Carnegie.

At New York, judgment for $7,500 was docketed in the county clerk's office against Andrew Carnegie, the millionaire steel manufacturer, in favor of the Continental Trust Company as receiver of the defunct American Opera Company, of which Mr. Carnegie was president. The amount is due, it is said, on Mrs. Carnegie's subscription to the capital stock of the company.

Retaliation Against Canada.

The House Committee on Foreign Affairs has ordered a favorable report on the bill introduced by Mr. Curtis, of New York, to enforce reciprocal commercial relations between the United States and Canada.

Blow at the Fair.

The World's Fair amendments to the sundry civil bill were defeated in the House by a vote of 129 to 65 excepting the Sunday-closing amendment, which was concurred in by a vote of 78 to 74.

They Shot the Constable.

Constable Henry Smith, of New York, Uinta County, Wyo., undertook to arrest two strangers at that place, believing that they were wanted in Colorado for some crime. He had received a circular advising him to look out for a pair of horsemen, and the arrivals answered the description. So soon as Smith announced himself as an officer one of the men shot him in the breast and he was dead in ten minutes. The two leisurely struck for the hills. A posse is following. The outlaws are headed for the Blue Mountains of Utah, a rendezvous for hard characters.

MANAGER FRICK SHOT.

Assaulted in His Private Office by Alexander Berkmann, an Anarchist.

At Pittsburg, a desperate attempt was made Saturday afternoon to kill Henry C. Frick, manager of the great Carnegie steel mills in Homestead and elsewhere. He was shot twice in the neck. The murderous hand was thrown up when the third shot was fired, and the bullet imbedded itself in the wall over Mr. Frick's head. The would-be assassin then stabbed him four times before he was overpowered. Later the man tried to destroy himself by chewing a fulminate of mercury cap, such as Anarchist Lingg used to kill himself in the prison in Chicago. He was seized before he had succeeded in biting into the cap, and his plan of suicide was fruitless. He gave his name as Alex. Berkmann, a newspaper compositor of New York. He is not connected with the Homestead troubles. Mr. Frick will live.

DEAD IN A MINE.

Fearful Disaster at York Farm Colliery, Pennsylvania.

York Farm colliery, situated two miles from Pottsville, Pa., was the scene of a terrible explosion about noon Saturday. Fourteen men and a boy are known to have been killed and it is believed that more have suffered the same fate. The explosion, it is believed, was caused by a strong feeder being broken into and its force penetrated a safety lamp and ignited the gas. The explosion was terrific and completely closed the gangway with several cars which were on the tracks. Several men are known to be shut in, but their number and the extent of their injuries cannot be ascertained.

Wild Man Captured in Alabama.

A wild man has been captured in the woods near John's, Alabama. His hair and beard reached to his waist, were matted and tangled, and he looked like a wild animal. His only possessions were two tin cans stained with the juice of blackberries. After being cleaned and clothed he said he was from Chicago, by profession a bookkeeper, and wrote the date 1865. His story is that for four years he has lived in the woods, stealing food in the winter and in summer living on fruit. He was taken to Birmingham and placed in jail.

Convicts Seek Speedy Revenge.

Harry Wiatt, John Glock, and Frank Gilmore, three convicts from Dayton, Ohio, who were released from the Columbus prison on expiration of their sentences, immediately secured revolvers, and, proceeding to the vicinity of the penitentiary, began firing at the guards on the wall. A squad of police charged upon them, and, after a long chase and in which a number of shots were exchanged, they were run into the river and captured. They stand a good chance of returning to the State prison.

Smallpox in Victoria, B. C.

Smallpox in British Columbia has been systematically and thoroughly eradicated, and with unrelaxed precautions, which will be kept up by the authorities, no further trouble is expected from the disease. The city of Victoria has been disinfected to an extent unknown before, and a majority of the citizens have been vaccinated. This, with the city's advantageous position in being exposed to a sweep of fresh sea breezes, has greatly helped to stamp out the contagion.

Wanted to Wreck a Train.

At Indianapolis, officers of the Pennsylvania Railroad arrested Milard Edwards, a 15-year-old colored boy, on a charge of attempted train wrecking. He admitted that he had placed a tie on the track at McVey's station, for the purpose of seeing the train hit it. The engineer saw it in time to prevent it. Edwards also admitted that he had stolen a watch from a man named Harvey, for whom he had worked, and had pounded it to pieces with a stone.

O'Donnell Surrenders.

Hugh O'Donnell and Hugh Ross, against whom warrants had been issued as leaders of the Homestead rioters, held a consultation with their attorney, W. J. Brennan. At the close of which the two workmen proceeded to Alderman McMaster's office and gave themselves up and were by him remanded to jail. Attorney Brennan at once entered application for the release of Messrs. Ross and O'Donnell on bail.

Pattison on the Scene.

Governor Pattison arrived at Homestead in a drenching rain. He got off at the station near the carriage works, instead of coming to the main station in the center of the town, and took the shortest cut to General Snowden's headquarters under an escort of cavalry. His coming was the signal for a salute of guns and he was loudly cheered on his way to the camp.

Thirty-five Deaths from Cholera.

Eighteen deaths from cholera occurred on board a Volga steamer between Astrakan and Kazan. During the last three days seventeen persons have died from the disease on the Trans-Caucasus railway.

Explosion of a Thrashing-machine Engine.

A thrashing-machine engine exploded in the grain field of Thomas Gomez, near Sacramento, Cal., killing Joseph Sanders and John Merrion and terribly injuring three other men.

Thomas Cook Dead.

Thomas Cook, the head of the well-known firm of London excursion managers, is dead.

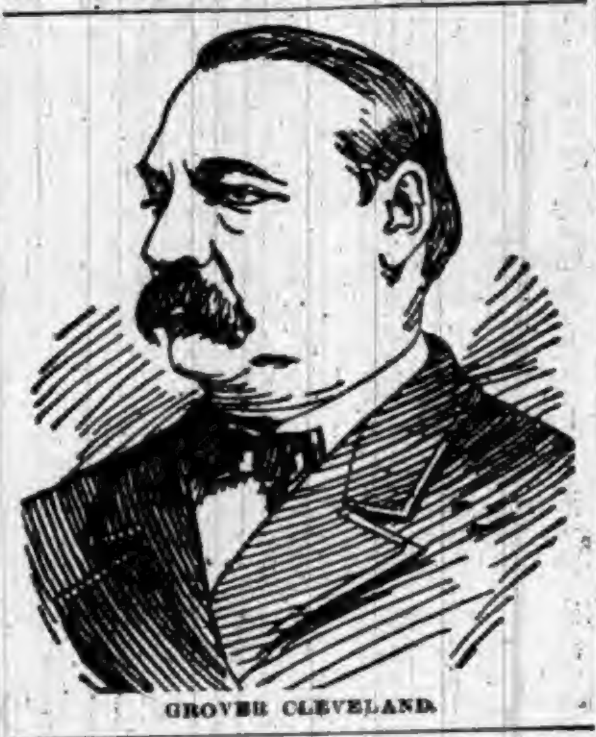
NOTIFIED THE LEADERS

A BIG DEMOCRATIC DEMONSTRATION.

Cleveland Finally Told of His Nomination—Stevenson Also Learns—What Part He Has in the Democratic Ticket—Thousands Present.

Now They Know It.

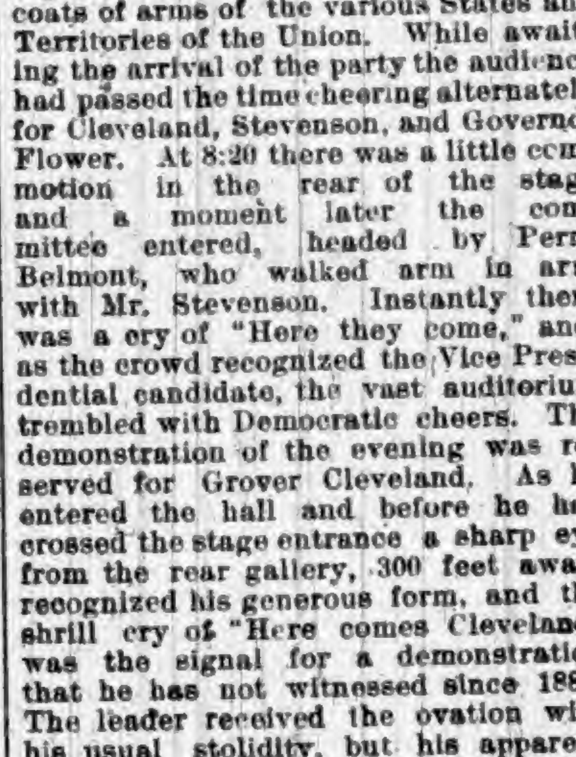
Grover Cleveland and Adlai E. Stevenson were formally notified by the Convention Committee at Madison Square Garden, in New York, that they had been chosen by the Democratic party as its standard-bearers on the national ticket during the campaign which will end Nov. 4 next. The formal duty imposed upon the Notification Committee by the wigwam convention was made the excuse for a free-for-all mass meeting of Tammany and Kings County Democrats. For that purpose President Cleveland's running-mate was brought from Bloomington, Ill., to stand up with his chief and receive the homage of the host. The crowd which surrounded Madison Square Garden was big and unruly and impatient to get in. The police had their hands full, and were glad when the doors were swung open at 7:45 p. m. The body of the theater was free to the public.



GROVER CLEVELAND.

Meantime, members of the reception committee had driven to the home of Mr. Whitney, where they took Mr. Cleveland into a carriage, which was driven to the Manhattan Club-house. The National and notification committees were in waiting there. They were joined by other members of the reception committee who had escorted Mr. Stevenson from the Hoffman House. The three committees, with the nominees, entered carriages and were driven to Madison Square Garden, where their arrival was marked by an elaborate display of fireworks. The party alighted and entered the hall amid cheers.

As the candidates passed inside more than 15,000 people were awaiting them. The admission tickets were confined to the stage and boxes, and the vast amphitheater was occupied by the general public. In many respects the occasion was typical of a national convention. There were the same decorations, the same gay streamers of variegated colors, and from the topmost gallery surrounding the inclosure were suspended the coats of arms of the various States and Territories of the Union. While awaiting the arrival of the party the audience had passed the time cheering alternately for Cleveland, Stevenson, and Governor Flower. At 8:20 there was a little commotion in the rear of the stage and a moment later the committee entered, headed by Perry Belmont, who walked arm in arm with Mr. Stevenson. Instantly there was a cry of "Here they come," and, as the crowd recognized the Vice Presidential candidate, the vast auditorium trembled with Democratic cheers. The demonstration of the evening was reserved for Grover Cleveland. As he entered the hall and before he had crossed the stage entrance a sharp eye from the rear gallery, 300 feet away, recognized his generous form, and the shrill cry of "Here comes Cleveland" was the signal for a demonstration that he has not witnessed since 1888. The leader received the ovation with his usual stolidity, but his apparent modesty seemed to excite his admirers to make more noise. Then the speech-making began.



ADLAI E. STEVENSON.

Officially Notified.

Congessman W. L. Wilson, Chairman of the late late Wigwam convention, made the opening speech. He was followed by Secretary Bell, of the National Committee, who officially notified Mr. Cleveland of his nomination. Mr. Cleveland accepted in a speech of considerable length.

Stephen V. White informed Mr. Stevenson that he was the choice for Vice President, and the nominee accepted in brief words of thanks for the honor conferred.

During Mr. Wilson's address Mrs. Cleveland, who had been detained, tried to enter the hall unobservsd, but the audience caught sight of her and went wild with enthusiasm. In the midst of Mr. Wilson's speech three cheers were given for Mrs. Cleveland, and when a voice from the gallery proposed "Three cheers for Ruth" the enthusiasm reached such a height that the Chairman was obliged momentarily to stop. Mr. Cleveland's face darkened with displeasure, but even his frown was powerless to check the cheering, and it was fully a minute before the enthusiasm for Miss Cleveland ceased.

FATAL SOUTH DAKOTA STORM.

A Woman Killed at Gettysburg and Her Child Injured—Churches Destroyed.

Specials from various points in South Dakota give details of a severe storm that did considerable damage to crops and property Wednesday night. At Gettysburg a woman named Herron was killed and her child fatally injured. The storm struck that place at 10 o'clock and destroyed the Methodist and Baptist churches, and nearly every house in the city was more or less damaged. Two heavy freight cars were blown fifty feet from the track. Wires from Gettysburg are all down and the details of the storm are meager.

MAY COST MILLIONS.

Favorable Action on the Bill Requiring Automatic Couplers and Air-Brakes.

Washington special: An important decision was reached by the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee Wednesday afternoon on the House bill to compel all of the railroad companies to use automatic car couplers. This matter was one of the subjects treated in the message of President Harrison in the interest of public safety. The House passed the bill and sent it to the Senate, and it was referred to the Interstate Commerce Committee, where an amendment was added, providing that, in addition to the automatic coupler on all cars, engines shall be provided with air-brakes. It is said that the passage of such a law means an outlay of at least $50,000,000 by the various railroad companies of the country. The proposed law gives the Interstate Commerce Commission power to extend the time for putting on the couplings and air brakes at its own discretion.

THE ELECTIONS OF 1892.

Twenty-eight States Will Choose Governors This Fall.

The elections of 1892 include those in all the States for 444 Presidential electors, which will be held on Tuesday, Nov. 8. Wyoming will elect Governor and State officers, a Representative in Congress, and a Legislature to choose a United States Senator vice Warren (Rep.), Nov. 8.

The Professor's Mistake.

There is a story, at his own expense, which the late Professor Moses Stuart Phelps used to tell with great glee. In the days when he was a graduate student, he took a walk one morning with Professor Newton, a man who lives in a world of mathematics and simply exists in the common world of ordinary things. Professor Newton, as is his habit, started off on the discussion of an abstruse problem. As the Professor went deeper and deeper, Mr. Phelps' mind wandered further and further from what was being said. At last Mr. Phelps' attention was called back to his companion by the Professor winding up with, "Which, you see, gives us 'x.'" "Does it?" asked Mr. Phelps, thinking that in politeness he ought to say something. "Why, doesn't it?" excitedly exclaimed the Professor, alarmed at the possibility that a flaw had been detected in his calculations. Quickly his mind ran back over the work. There had indeed been a mistake. "You are right, Mr. Phelps; you are right!" almost shouted the Professor. "It doesn't give us 'x;' it gives 'y.'" And from that hour Professor Newton looked upon Mr. Phelps as a mathematical prodigy. He was the first man who had ever caught the Professor tripping. "And so," Mr. Phelps used to add, with his peculiar smile, in telling the story: "I achieved a reputation for knowing a thing I hate. It's a way many reputations are made in this superficial world."

THE NATIONAL SOLONS.

SENATE AND HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Our National Lawmakers and What They Are Doing for the Good of the Country—Various Measures Proposed, Discussed, and Acted Upon.

Doings of Congress.

On the 19th the House took up the World's Fair bill. It disagreed to the Senate amendment making the appropriation for the government exhibits $500,000 instead of $316,500. The House also disagreed to all the amendments to the paragraph relating to the appropriations for the World's Columbian Commission. It also disagreed to Mr. Atkinson's amendment prohibiting the sale of liquor by a vote of 41 to 189. The appropriation of $43,000 for bronze medals and diplomas was agreed to in committee of the whole. The House disagreed to the Senate amendment making an appropriation of $5,000,000 to the World's Fair by a vote of 78 yeas and 132 nays. On a viva voce vote the proposition to close the Fair on Sunday was carried—78 to 74.

In the Senate, on the 20th, Mr. Vest made a vigorous speech against the anti-option bill. Mr. Daniel of Virginia also spoke in opposition. No bills were passed by the Senate, but the House passed a number of measures, the most important of which was a bill increasing the pay of life-saving service men. The bill granting an American registry to the steamship China was defeated. The Commerce Committee was authorized to investigate the Reading combine; the House Judiciary Committee has summoned Robert A. Pinkerton and William Pinkerton to appear before the committee to be questioned in regard to their police and detective system. Mr. Blount reported the bill introduced by Mr. Curtis authorizing the President to close the St. Mary's Falls Canal to all Canadian vessels or levy a tax of from $2 to $5 a ton on them, if it is shown that American vessels are discriminated against in passing through Canadian canals and in the imposition of duties.

In the House on the 21st the bill for enforcing reciprocal commercial relations with Canada was passed without division. In the Senate Messrs. Daniel and White denounced Washburn's anti-option bill, and the general opinion is that its enemies will try to kill time until the final ad- Nothing was done by the conferrees in regard to the World's Fair loan, and it is expected that an adverse report will be presented to the House. The World's Fair, however, has gained many friends since the non-concurrence vote.

The House bill to enforce reciprocal commercial arrangements between the United States and Canada was taken up in the Senate on the 22d, read and passed without any explanation and without a division. The relations of capital and labor were brought to the attention of the Senate in two speeches. The first of them was made by Mr. Peffer, and was based on a resolution previously offered by him instructing the judiciary committee to inquire into that subject and as to what legislation was necessary to protect the right of the employes to fair rates of wages. The other speech was made by Mr. Call, and was directed chiefly against the Pinkerton detective force. Mr. Peffer's resolution was referred to the committee on education and labor. The World's Fair question still agitates the House.

In the Senate, the 23d, the debate upon the anti-option bill and the monetary question occupied the whole time, with no definite result. The House made substantial progress with its business in at least one particular, and that was the disposition of the Senate amendments to the general deficiency bill, which were, with one exception, nonconcurred in and sent to a further conference. Otherwise the day was without feature. The Senate amendment which was concurred in was that appropriating $478,000 for the payment of Indian depredation claims.

TRADE MUCH BETTER.

Returns Show That the Spring Wheat Crop Is Surpassing All Expectations.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says: "There is distinct improvement, not only in transactions in comparison with the same time last year, but also in prospect for the coming season. Prospects of spring wheat are remarkably good and returns from many of the States surpass all expectations. Wheat has risen 2¼ cents in spite of Western receipts amounting to 2,136,000 bushels in three days, against exports of 908,000 bushels. Oats also rose 1 cent and pork products a shade, and corn has advanced 2 per cent. In coffee there was a slight advance, and in oil a fractional decline. But in the cotton market a decline of a sixteenth occurred, with sales of 560,000 bales in a week."

THE deplorable occurrance at Homestead, Pa., for which the employment of the Pinkerton mercenaries appears to be directly responsible, is certain to arouse popular hostility to the Pinkerton system as it has never been aroused before.—Omaha Bee.

THE notion that in any State of this Union a disagreement between a corporation and its employes on a question of wages shall be made a pretext for summoning a private army of mercenaries to kill the latter at will, under the plea of protecting property, is intolerable to the country.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

DURING the last siege of Paris the French acquired a fondness for the flesh of equines (horses, asses, and mules), which they have not lost since then. The price of such meat is about 50 per cent. less than the price of beef, and it is eaten in Lyons, Bordeaux, Orleans, and other French cities besides Paris.

A BILL is in Congress for the reform and extension of the money-order system of the postoffice. If it provides some means whereby a man in a strange city, with a $50 money order in his possession, can get it cashed before starving to death it will fill a long-felt want.

A COMPLETE SET OF THE WORKS OF CHARLES DICKENS
FREE!
The Most Valuable and Remarkable Premium Ever Offered Free with any Periodical.
A MARVEL IN BOOK-MAKING.
A Set of the Works of Charles Dickens, IN 12 LARGE VOLUMES, FREE.

There has just been published A Set of the Works of Charles Dickens, in Large and Handsome Volumes, printed from entirely new plates, with new type. By special arrangement with the publishers we are enabled to offer to our patrons this splendid set of Dickens' Works, postpaid, free. Charles Dickens was the greatest novelist who ever lived. No author before or since his time has won the fame that he achieved, and his works are even more popular to-day than during his lifetime. They abound in wit, humor, pathos, masterly delineation of character, vivid descriptions of places and incidents, thrilling and skilfully wrought plots. Each book is intensely interesting. No home should be without a set of these great and remarkable works. Not to have read them is to be far behind the age in which we live. The twelve volumes in this set contain the following world-famous works, each one of which is published complete, unchanged and absolutely unabridged:

DAVID COPPERFIELD,
MARTIN CHUZZLEWIT,
NICHOLAS NICKLEBY,
DOMBEY AND SON,
BLEAK HOUSE,
LITTLE DORRIT,
OUR MUTUAL FRIEND,
PICKWICK PAPERS,
BARNABY RUDGE AND CHRISTMAS STORIES,
OLIVER TWIST AND GREAT EXPECTATIONS,
THE OLD CURIOSITY SHOP AND THE UNCOMMERCIAL TRAVELER,
A TALE OF TWO CITIES, HARD TIMES, AND THE MYSTERY OF EDWIN DROOD.

THE PLAN.

We will send a complete set of these books FREE by mail, postage paid, guaranteeing safe delivery, as follows: To any old subscriber, who sends one dollar, and renews their subscription to either of the following publications for one year:

THE PEOPLE'S LITERARY COMPANION,
—OR—
The National Farmer and Home Magazine

To any new subscriber, who sends one dollar for either of the above periodicals for one year.

This is the grandest offer ever made, and the greatest bargain ever offered. Up to this time the price of a complete set of Dickens' Works has been ten dollars or more. The use of modern, improved printing, folding and stitching machinery, the present extremely low price of white paper, and the great competition in the book trade are the factors which made this wonderful offer possible. Bear in mind that we offer, not a single volume, but the entire set of twelve volumes all free to subscribers. All may now afford the luxury of owning a handsome set of Dickens' works. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. Do not neglect or put off this wonderful opportunity. Send at once; you will be delighted with the charming books, and, as long as you live, never cease to regard it as the best investment of a dollar you ever made. Address all communications to and write, and are possessed of fair intelligence, you are fully qualified to make a grand success of what we offer you. We have lately published at great expense and labor a perfect wonder in the way of an illustrated Gift Book, suitable to all classes, an ornament to any home, and at a price that brings it within the reach of all, even those of moderate means. Heretofore only those who indulged in luxuries have felt that they could afford a book of this class, as they are sold in book stores at $5.00 and upwards. The book which we offer is not in any way inferior to those above referred to, but is far superior to hundreds of books of this nature that are sold at prices exceeding ours by an enormous per cent. It is selling with a rush wherever shown. Agents have only to show the book and mention the price, and it sells on its merits without further talking. No better Christmas, New Year's or Birthday present can be selected. It will sell, not only for holiday trade, but at all seasons of the year, for the reason that all will want it in their homes, and will have it as soon as they know the low price at which our agents can furnish them. Reader if you need profitable employment, and a business in which you can and will take pride, as well as make money rapidly, do not fail to send for circulars containing private terms to agents, and full information which will be sent FREE upon application. Old and new agents alike are making handsome salaries—yes, fortunes. Many of those who are making the best records are new at the agency business, having had no previous experience. Make a start—the field is entirely new. No such terms have been offered agents as we now offer on this wonderful book. Special qualifications not necessary, for it sells everywhere at sight. Perhaps you have at some time been unsuccessful at the agency business. If so, there is every reason why you should try this, the PRINCE of gift books, as failure is impossible if you make A START. Write us to-day, study our circulars and directions, then order an outfit and go to work with push and energy. You may make the greatest mistake of your life, if you allow this GOLDEN opportunity to pass unimproved. E. C. Allen & Co., Box 203, Augusta, Maine.

IF YOU CAN READ

AN AFRICAN ROMANCE.

A Story Blended with Some Interesting Colonial History.

BY EDWARD EVERETT HALE.

CHAPTER III.

Thus it is that I am able to fix the date much better than if I had to rely on that business of the double fists and the rising and setting of the sun.

There were no newspapers in Boston, but there was a great deal of conversation, and whatever was posted up on the town pump, or at the town house hard by, or above the whipping post, or on the front of the meeting house, was rapidly repeated from mouth to mouth. So was it that the week had not ended before the town knew perfectly well that a "Ginny black" was offered for sale. And in one and another conference, in which Winthrop and Dudley and John Cotton took the lead, as they came out from the Thursday lecture, the matter was discussed in all its relations. When John Cotton and John Williams went into the meeting house Thursday morning they did not know much about the matter, and far less did they know what they thought about it. But, after the informal conversation with the other elders, after the meeting was over, and before they left the house, both of them knew very well. Winthrop knew what they thought, and Dudley knew; for, in a fashion, Winthrop and Dudley had had their share in telling John Cotton what it was as well that he should think. And so, when people went to meeting on Sunday, there was quite a general impression in the congregation that before they came out they would know what was to be done with the black man.

The meeting-house was always as full as it would hold. On this occasion Wilson led the congregation in prayer; then he "deaconed out" one of the psalms, as versified for the congregation. Then Cotton led in prayer, and, after the prayer, he announced the text of his discourse. It was from the tenth, eleventh, twelfth, and thirteenth verses of the eighteenth chapter of Revelations. "Alas, alas, the great city of Babylon, that mighty city, for in one hour is thy judgment come. And the merchants of the earth shall weep and mourn over her; for no man buyeth their merchandise any more; the merchandise of gold and silver, and precious stones, and pearl, and fine linen, and purple, and silk, and scarlet, and all thyine wood, and all manner vessels of ivory; and all manner vessels of most precious wood, and of brass, and iron, and marble, and cinnamon, and odors, and ointments, and frankincense, and wine, and oil, and fine flour, and wheat, and beasts, and sheep, and chariots, and slaves, and souls of men."

The first head was a description of Babylon in all its glory. The second head showed that, although Boston was but a small town now—nay, had been called "Lost Town" in the sneers of the people around her—there was every reason why, if Boston held firmly in her loyalty to the living God, King of kings, and Lord of lords, Boston should have more wealth and trade and rule and dominion than any of the principalities and powers of the heathen. The third head showed that all this was impossible for Boston if she did not cleave to the living God, and did not live by His commands. The fourth head showed, by full reference to the books of the Old Testament, that God's people made no slaves, excepting in war. The fifth head pointed out the denunciations of the prophets against the Syrians, because they bought and sold slaves from the islands of the West. And the sixth head brought all this to a close, in its denunciation of Babylon because she traded in souls and slaves.

"I have read to you," he said, "from the word of God, the names of some of those things which perish with the using, which this great Babylon bought and sold. I have read to you also the names of treasures which do not perish in the using, which this Babylon pretended to sell and to buy. It is all as Boston can buy corn and fish and fur, as Boston can buy beaver and otter and skin of mink and skin of bear, as Boston can send out her sasafras to England and buy her cotton from the Indies, so could Babylon buy and sell cinnamon and frankincense." And then he read the whole verse. "But woe to Babylon, because she bought, or tried to buy, the souls of men! Babylon the great is fallen, because she bought those slaves which her merchants captivated far away. And woe to this town, which we thought the Lord founded, woe to His kingdom, which we thought was to come even in the wilderness, in the day when our shipmen and our merchants shall carry away from us our furs and our spices, and shall bring back to us, for a recompense, slaves and the souls of men." Then, pausing for a moment, he went on to address the King of kings in prayer. The whole congregation, thrilled and excited, rose to their feet and stood as he prayed, pouring out the anger of his eloquence in eager words.

"O Lord God, save thy people, and save thy heritage! Let not the curse and the damnation fall on this place which fell upon those heathen. Let not thine own people, the sheep of thine own pasture and the flock of thine own hand, stray in the waste in which the Gentiles strayed. Let them not taste the fruit that was forbidden, let them not drink of the waters of Marah. Save, O God, save in this thy time! Blot out from the book of thy remembrance our follies and sins in the days that are past. Remember thine own infinite mercy, and hold fast to thine own purpose in the redemption of this land, and show thy people, in the light and majesty of thine own holy spirit, how to undo the chains that they have bound, how to turn back from the paths of their weakness, and how to proclaim liberty to the captive. O, rule in this thy land, thou who art King of kings and God of gods, thou Lord of hosts. Rule for our good, and do not trample us under the feet of thy vengeance. Save us, save, we beseech thee, O Lord! Lift up him that is oppressed, break the bonds of him who is enslaved, and set the prisoner free. Save us, Lord Jesus, who hast been pleased in thine own flesh, to lead captivity captive, and thine shall be the glory and the honor, the power and the dominion, forever and ever, world without end. Amen."

And then he directed them to sing the forty-fourth psalm. Wilson, as before, gave out the lines one by one, and the congregation all joined in a fashion in the singing. Wilson pronounced the benediction and the assembly was dissolved.

There is no diary nor notebook which gives any account of the conversation in excited circles on that day or the next. But in the colony records, brief as fate but no less decided, is the memorandum:

"The court wrote to Mr. Williams of Piscataqua, requesting him to send the negro which he had of Mr. Smyth that they might send him back to Ginny."

CHAPTER IV.

It was this promptness of the general court which brought about the dramatic close to the story, as it was finally told me by my four interpreters.

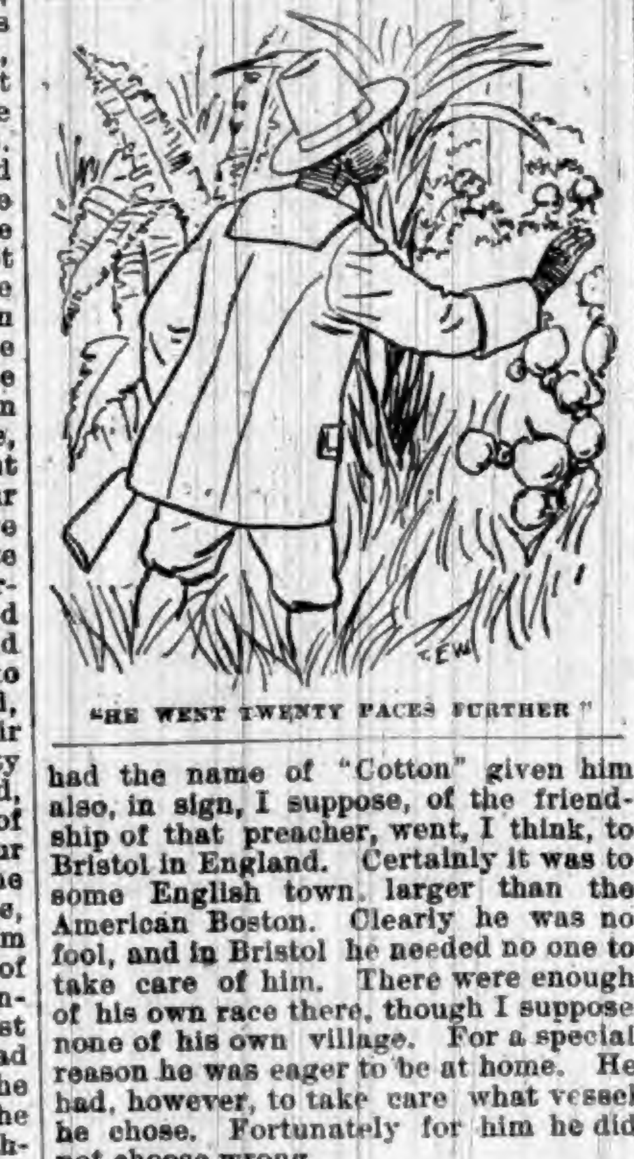
At the first, even after the interest I had shown in the necklace and in the book, they had not understood how intense was my curiosity, and how eager I was to gratify it in every detail. As I have intimated already, they had one detail and another of it to give me, such as I should search for vainly, though I should go up and down among the oldest people in Boston, and ask to tell me what they remembered of October, 1645. Alas, so soon as we give ourselves over to printing-presses and libraries, this matter of tradition, from father to son, and from mother to daughter, dies out. But this tale of the days and weeks and months which Telega the "Ginny Black" spent in Boston, while they were waiting for a mast-schooner to sail from Piscataqua, which might transfer him to a Guinea trader, which should take him to the Congo—this tale had been repeated, without any "Russian scandal," and without any vagueness of detail, for seven generations. Cotton and Wilson and Winthrop and Dudley, with all the pride of paper and ink, have been more reticent. They have not told whether he dined with them or breakfasted with them or took his tea with them. Winthrop has not told by what efforts of interpreters he tried to find out whether this man knew that he was a grandson of Ham or whether he did not know. This is certain, that Telega picked up some words of English, and I found that they still had the name of the shillings in the necklace, and they still knew and could speak the word Smyth in a fashion, and more plainly the word Cotton, and they knew as well that the wampun necklace was a treasure of a different sort from the string of silver and gold.

Telega had seen and driven horses and oxen; Telega had been taught to sail in a boat and to fish with English fishing tackle; Telega had once been trusted with the care of sheep; Telega had been able to tell of the cocks and hens for whom he had scattered corn morning and evening; and at last, when Telega had been sent, as I found, to the Piscataqua for his farewell—sent with the blessings of priests and the hearty hand-shaking of many others—he had been told that the money that was given to him was to be used for any purpose of his passage, if he should find himself in a strait; but, as the reader will see, he fell into no misfortune which an intelligent black like himself, with a smattering of two languages besides his own, could not fairly meet. He had carried in a bag at his neck, concealed under his clothing, the three joes and thirty-one shillings, which had been given him by the treasurer in the town house in Boston, and he had brought them out safely when he arrived at his home. He had also brought with him the copy of the Scripture, which he had been made to understand was more precious by far than the joes and the shillings. After he had gained some little knowledge of the English language, I suppose that one and another attempt had been made to rescue his soul from its certain danger. But it was clear enough that nobody pretended that he had thus gained any understanding of the vital truths of the religion of John Cotton. There had been no blasphemous baptizing, and he had been left—unwillingly, I dare say—to worship such gods as he found in the streams or the stars. Only John Cotton had borne his testimony in a fashion, by holding up for him and giving him, as a precious keepsake, the copy of the Bible, which had with such reverence been shown to me.

As soon as I had been made to understand this I begged that the book might be brought to me again. I opened and examined it carefully, hoping to find John Cotton's name, or some notes from his hand. But there was hardly a written word. Once or twice a palpable printer's error had been corrected. For the rest, it was as it had been sent to Boston from London. Why, O, why did not dear John Cotton, if it were he, write something on that flyleaf, which seemed made for writing? Or, putting it in general, why did people who wrote so much that is dull, and said so much that there was no need of saying—why did they hold the pen, just when we their children are most eager to read and hear?

CHAPTER V.

This ends the story, so far as the Massachusetts records go. A year after, the Bay people had to send back a "Ginny interpreter" and another black, who had slipped into their hands in much the same way. Telega, who had had the name of "Cotton" given him also, in sign, I suppose, of the friendship of that preacher, went, I think, to Bristol in England. Certainly it was to some English town, larger than the American Boston. Clearly he was no fool, and in Bristol he needed no one to take care of him. There were enough of his own race there, though I suppose none of his own village. For a special reason he was eager to be at home. He had, however, to take care what vessel he chose. Fortunately for him he did not choose wrong.

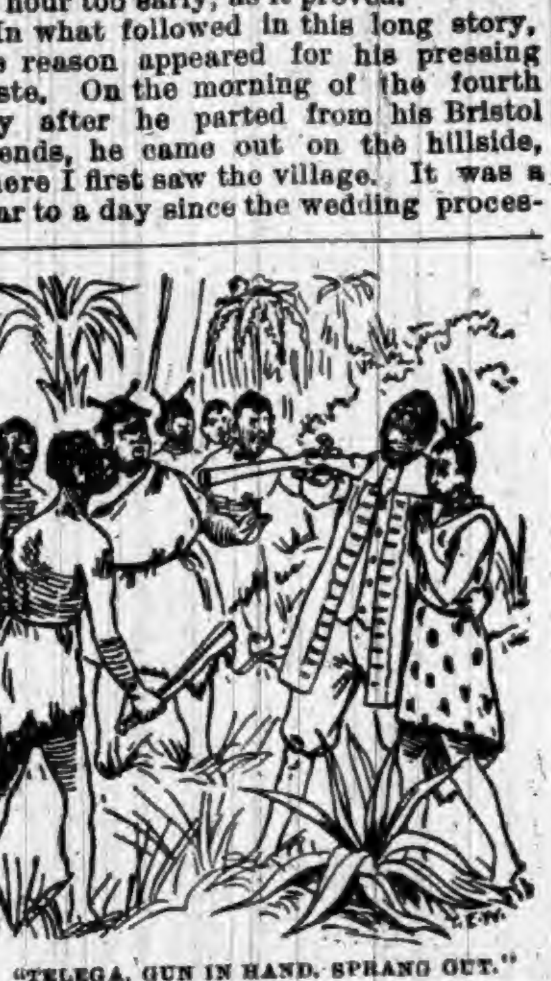


"HE WENT TWENTY PACES FURTHER."

Whatever the vessel was, as they passed the latitude of the Straits of Gibraltar, they fell in with a pirate rover from Sallee, one of the Moorish ports. Of the fight which followed all my story-tellers had much more to tell than of anything that happened to him in Piscataqua or in Boston. In that fight poor Telega had a bullet shot through his chest, and of this shot I am told he bore the mark when he died, seventy years after.

His real dangers did not begin—and this he knew—until he was in the Bight of Benin. Had not his English captain been true as steel he would have sold him there to the first Portuguese trader he found. But Telega had not chosen a knave nor a pirate among the British shipmasters. He had chosen a God-fearing man, who would have kept his promise though he had "promised to his loss." I was told, in delightful detail, how he was kept below until the ship was fairly at her anchorage off the mouths of the river. Then I was told how, on a dark night in July, he was called and how the English captain bade him good-by. He was put upon a boat, with a good store of hard bread and a bit of dried beef and, what he prized more, what we might call a carbine, a pouch with match and bullets and a flint and steel. The captain fell on his knees on the deck and prayed to his God and bade Telega good-by. A sea breeze was blowing so that the sailors could put sail on the boat, and when morning came she was well up the river. I was told how long they hid themselves from Portuguese marauders and then, at length which I could have well spared, I was told where at last he was landed on the northern bank, not an hour too early, as it proved.

In what followed in this long story, the reason appeared for his pressing haste. On the morning of the fourth day after he parted from his Bristol friends, he came out on the hillside, where I first saw the village. It was a year to a day since the wedding procession had been interrupted so wretchedly. He knew that, and he knew what depended on the passage of a year. By all the customs of his tribe, his sweetheart, his almost wife, was a widow for that year. But it was for that year only. When the year was ended she might be betrothed again. Telega did not believe that there would be any careful astronomy in this affair. He knew very well that when twelve moons were over every man in the village would think he had a right to the prettiest girl and the most lovely in the village. Here was his reason for refusing to wait with the English captain till he should have gone to Fernando Po, and still he should have come up the river to trade for ivory.



"TELEGA, GUN IN HAND, SPRANG OUT."

As I have said, he was not an hour too early.

As he approached the village no one met him. "He was afeared, it was so still." This was Philip's phrase to me, in interpreting. He hurried all the faster. He passed a close grove of pepper trees to see in it the pretended ambush of a bridegroom and his men in full dress waiting for the bride's procession.

Telega had been stealing along as a cat does, and this merry group did not see him. But he seems to have seen his advantage. He passed them on the instant, he went twenty paces further, he hid himself under a heavy tuft of banana plants, and he had not to wait long. The bride came, wretched enough for all her bridal toggery. She had insisted on wearing two or three sea-gull feathers, which were tokens of deepest mourning. She wept as if she were at her husband's funeral. She flung away a bunch of flowers which the new bridegroom's mother gave to her. None the less was this a bridal procession. Banjos and tomtoms and the whole village behind and before made this certain.

A large stone to-day marks the corner where Telega, gun in hand, sprang out like a tiger, and, in literal fact, seized his bride. Pluto was not less expected in Enna. The girl screamed now to some purpose, and in a minute was sobbing with her head upon his shoulder. The banjos and the tomtoms were silent. And bridegroom number two, with his handsome cohort of "best man"—hearing nothing after they should have heard music and song—after a mysterious minute or two came out from their lair to learn what had hindered the procession.

At this point the story, which I heard two or three times at least—once as we went up the river, twice as we came down—varies in its forms. Who can wonder, after nearly 250 years? But there can be no doubt that when Telega caught his bride with his left arm, and when she sobbed upon his shoulder, his right hand held the matchlock, and he blew the match to be sure that it was a live coal. And when that braggart, groom No. 2, came up, howling and storming, Telega turned over his bride to one of her women, dropped the gun to a level, and, in very classical language of Mandara, told bridegroom No. 2 that, if he did not keep a civil tongue in his head, he would blow his brains out. Nay, more, I am afraid that Elder Cotton's seed had sprouted so ill that Telega would have done what he said, had there been occasion.

But there was no occasion. The game was played through. There were elders in the village who had as much to do with its affairs as in that other village of mud walls and thatched roofs called Boston, where John Cotton and John Wilson and Thomas Dudley and John Winthrop did the thinking for the rest, and told them what was right and what was wrong. Nay, the evident public opinion of the procession was in favor of the handsome young traveler, who had been in Europe, not to say America, and had brought home its latest fashions. There were bride-maidens, as you saw, and they whispered: "'Twere better by far to have matched our fair cousin to her old sweetheart." And so, after some flourishing of clubs and knives, much scolding, swearing, threatening and other debating, three or four elders, much like those I have described, I think, stilled all voices and bade the tom-toms and the banjos begin again.

I doubt if it were the march in "Midsummer Night's Dream," but it answered every purpose of that midsummer noonday as well. Bridegroom No. 2 sulked off. But all his men joined in the procession, and afterward, I fancy, partook of the banquet. And, though his cabin was not occupied for a day or two, a sufficiently good cabin was found for all purposes of Telega and his bride.

This happy conclusion to a story so sad was brought when the general court in the bay voted to send the "Ginny black man" home. But I should never have heard it but for "King Charles' Shilling."

[THE END.]

Slang from a Good Source.

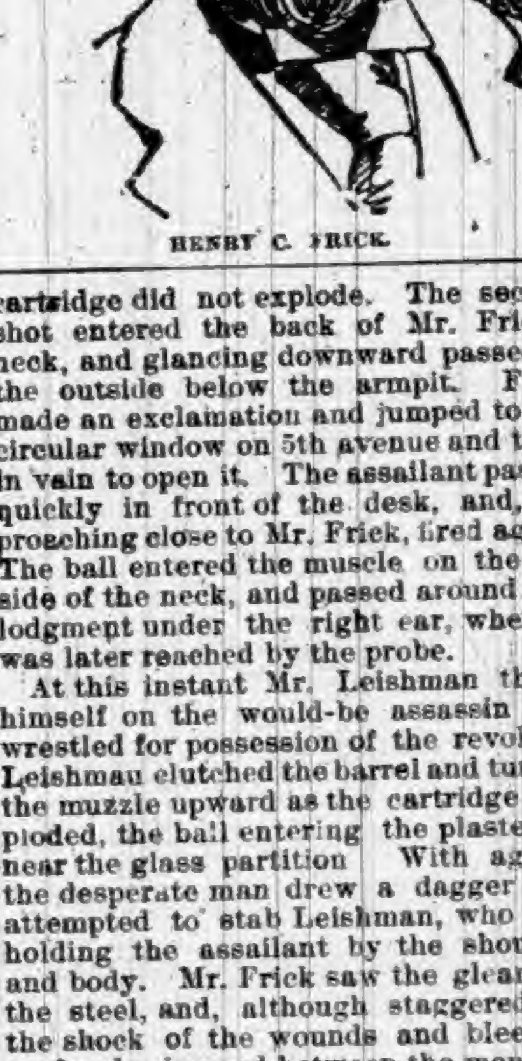
An English paper recently alluded to the expression "dark horse" as a piece of American slang. It would probably surprise that editor to know that Thackeray in "The Adventures of Philip," and Beaconsfield in "The Young Duke" both used the expression, and in each case in precisely the sense in which it is now employed, to denote a candidate who early in the race does not appear at all.

USED REVOLVER AND KNIFE.

Desperate Effort Made to Kill H. C. Frick in His Pittsburg Office.

A desperate and almost successful attempt was made Saturday afternoon to assassinate Henry Clay Frick, Chairman of the Carnegie Steel Company, limited. His assailant was Alexander Bergmann, a Russian Jew, who came here from New York, says a Pittsburg dispatch, with the evident intention of removing the man who has been the principal on the employers' side in the great struggle now going on between capital and labor in this city.

Mr. Frick took lunch at noon, and returned to his office at 1:30 o'clock. He went to the fifth floor, where he remained but a few minutes. He then came down the elevator to his private room on the second floor, fronting on Fifth avenue, where he seated himself at his desk. The office of Mr. Leishman, a business partner of Mr. Frick's, adjoins that of the chairman. Mr. Leishman came in and the two were holding a private conference, no one else being in the room. A few minutes before 3 o'clock Harry Heckley, the office boy, noticed a man hastily push open the swinging gate in the railing that runs betweens the public portion and the inclosure whre the desks of the stenographers and clerks are located. There was no one near the private office door, and the boy hurried up to ask the intruder what he wanted, but he was too late, as the stranger had already entered the private apartment. As he entered the office Mr Frick looked up, as did also Mr. Leishman, to see who it was. Mr. Frick was examining a bundle of papers. The man sprung within about five feet of Mr. Frick, and, quickly drawing his revolver, pulled the trigger. The first cartridge did not explode. The second shot entered the back of Mr. Frick's neck, and glancing downward passed to the outside below the armpit. Frick made an exclamation and jumped to the circular window on 5th avenue and tried in vain to open it. The assailant passed quickly in front of the desk, and, approaching close to Mr. Frick, fired again. The ball entered the muscle on the left side of the neck, and passed around to a lodgment under the right ear, where it was later reached by the probe.



HENRY C. FRICK.

At this instant Mr. Leishman threw himself on the would-be assassin and wrestled for possession of the revolver. Leishman clutched the barrel and turned the muzzle upward as the cartridge exploded, the ball entering the plastering near the glass partition. With agility the desperate man drew a dagger and attempted to stab Leishman, who was holding the assailant by the shoulder and body. Mr. Frick saw the gleam of the steel, and, although staggered by the shock of the wounds and bleeding profusely, jumped between the men and seized the man's arm. The latter freed himself from Leishman's grasp, and plunged the dagger into Frick's right side just above the hip, making an ugly wound three inches long. He made another lunge. This time the knife struck higher up, but the point struck a rib and glanced down without inflicting much of an injury. Twice again was the knife thrust at Frick, but he was merely scratched by these last attempts to kill him. By this time the office boys and Deputy Sheriff May, who entered the office just as the first shot was fired, threw themselves on the assassin. May had drawn his revolver and was about to shoot the fellow in the back when Frick cried out: "Don't kill him. We have got him all right. Leave him to the law." The man broke away and tried to escape, but was secured and taken to the Central Police Station. In five minutes a half-dozen surgeons were at hand. Mr. Frick was told to lie down on a lounge, and after his clothing had been removed the wounds were washed and the bleeding stopped. During all this time the wounded man was calm, had a perfect command of his faculties, and apparently was less excited than any other person in the room. From time to time he made suggestions as to how badly he was hurt and a half-hour after the shooting dictated a message to Andrew Carnegie about the assault, in which he told him that he thought he would be all right.

Bergmann is said to be unbalanced in mind. He refuses to talk to any one.

MINE GAS KILLS TEN.

Fatal Explosion in an Old Anthracite Colliery.

A frightful explosion occurred on the York Farm colliery, near Pottsville, Pa., by which eight men are known to have been killed outright, two have since died, and it is believed that three more have also suffered the same fate. The known killed are as follows: William Jones, Minersville; Thomas Jones, Minersville: George Kreiss, Middle Creek; Anthony Pultehlavage, Pottsville; William Wehman, Minersville; Herman Werner, St. Clair.

Three others are given up as dead. They are: John Harrison, Wadesville; James Hartzell, Llewellyn. Two others have since died from the effect of their injuries. They are: Henry Madata, Mount Hope, burned; Anthony Stack, boy, leg broken, body burned.

The injured are as follows: Robert Aliott, Pottsville, burned; J. Allott, son of Robert, burned; Edward Curran, Pottsville; Thomas Landish, Fishback, badly burned; George Stack, 23 years, married, leg broken and burned.

The explosion, it is believed, was caused by a strong feeder being broken into, and its force penetrated a safety lamp and ignited the gas.

SMALL-POX ON A TRAIN.

A Child Afflicted with the Disease Reaches Milwaukee—Quarantined the Car.

Milwaukee special: The passenger train which left Chicago over the Chicago and Northwestern Road for Milwaukee at 8 o'clock Sunday morning had on board a little girl suffering with small-pox. The child belonged to a family consisting of the mother and three children en route from Germany to join the husband and father, who has lived here for two years. Two Health Department physicians, who were at the depot on the arrival of the train, refused to allow any of the other thirty-five passengers to leave the infected car, which was ordered into quarantine. A switch-engine pulled the car on a side track and a police guard was kept over it. At first the passengers, who had not previously known of the presence of the small-pox patient in their midst, became indignant at their detention and threatened to force their way out.

GANTER'S MAGIC —CHICKEN— CHOLERA CURE!

Thousands of dollars worth of chickens are destroyed by Cholera every year. It is more fatal to them than all other diseases combined. But the discovery of a liquid remedy that positively destroys the Microbes has been made. Half of the young chickens are killed by Microbes before they are fryers. A 50-cent bottle is enough for 100 chickens. It is guaranteed. If, after using two thirds of a bottle, you are not satisfied with it as a cure for Cholera, return it to the druggist from whom you purchased it, and he will refund your money.

THE GREAT SOUTH AMERICAN

NERVINE TONIC

—AND—

Stomach AND Liver Cure

The Most Astonishing Medical Discovery of the Last One Hundred Years.

The Great South American Nervine Tonic

Which we now offer you, is the only absolutely unfailing remedy ever discovered for the cure of Indigestion, Dyspepsia, and the vast train of symptoms and horrors which are the result of disease and debility of the human stomach. No person can afford to pass by this jewel of incalculable value who is affected by disease of the stomach, because the experience and testimony of many go to prove that this is the ONE and ONLY ONE great cure in the world for this universal destroyer. There is no case of unmalignant disease of the stomach which can resist the wonderful curative powers of the South American Nervine Tonic.

HARRIET E. HALL, of Waynetown, Ind., says: "I owe my life to the Great South American Nervine. I had been in bed for five months from the effects of an exhausted stomach, Indigestion, Nervous Prostration, and a general shattered condition of my whole system. Had given up all hopes of getting well. Had tried three doctors, with no relief. The first bottle of the Nervine Tonic improved me so much that I was able to walk about, and a few bottles cured me entirely. I believe it is the best medicine in the world. I can not recommend it too highly."

MRS. ELLA A. BRATTON, of New Ross, Indiana, says: "I cannot express how much I owe to the Nervine Tonic. My system was completely shattered, appetite gone, was coughing and spitting up blood; am sure I was in the first stages of consumption, an inheritance handed down through several generations. I began taking the Nervine Tonic, and continued its use for about six months, and am entirely cured. It is the grandest remedy for nerves, stomach and lungs I have ever seen."

No remedy compares with SOUTH AMERICAN NERVINE as a cure for the Nerves. No remedy compares with South American Nervine as a wondrous cure for the Stomach. No remedy will at all compare with South American Nervine as a cure for all forms of failing health. It never fails to cure Indigestion and Dyspepsia. It never fails to cure Chorea or St. Vitus' Dance. Its powers to build up the whole system are wonderful in the extreme. It cures the old, the young, and the middle aged. It is a great friend to the aged and infirm. Do not neglect to use this precious boon; if you do, you may neglect the only remedy which will restore you to health. South American Nervine is perfectly safe, and very pleasant to the taste. Delicate ladies, do not fail to use this great cure, because it will put the bloom of freshness and beauty upon your lips and in your cheeks, and quickly drive away your disabilities and weaknesses.

There was a big railroad suit before 'Squire Smith last week Tuesday. L. S. Goodwin had sued the Lake Shore Co. for $200 damage caused by the company's recent changing a county ditch in such a way as to cause the water to flow into his cellar. Judge James I. Best now of Minneapolis, but acting as the company's attorney, represented the company, while Phillips and John F. Shuman had Mr. Goodwin's side of the case. Several witnesses were called and Mr. Goodwin was on the stand several times. Among the points brought out was that the trackmen had been told they were disturbing a county ditch, but they replied that they didn't care as the company was able to pay all damages. 'Squire Smith took a few days to study on the case.

BUTLER.

Romain C. Campbell has returned from the Angola Normal.

Clinton Ely, a former well known business man, was on our streets a few days ago.

Nearly all our younger men and boys are riding bicycles. Mervale and Orla Campbell have recently made purchases.

Mrs. Baily, living on West Ninth street, continues to decline in health and but meager hopes are entertained for her recovery.

Dr. Jones, a traveling medicine man, of Dakota, has been attracting crowds of from 1,000 to 2,000 people nightly to his free concerts and free shows on the street. The performances have been very creditable, mostly done by three small boys much above the ordinary.

Elias Strauss died last Tuesday after lingering many months and undergoing much suffering. He came to this country from Prussia, stopped with relatives in Butler and for a time clerked for Simon Stiefel, afterward married Miss Myers and for a few years was engaged in trade in Wawaka; returning to Butler he entered into partnership with Gustave Wolff. This business resulted in partial failure. After effecting a settlement Mr. Strauss and his only child, Joseph, engaged in the livery business, but the son soon after died, leaving the aged parent alone in the world. His grief was deep and enduring, and perhaps in a measure increased the malady that resulted in his death. Mr. Strauss was a man of unflinching integrity, a friend true to the core, a good citizen, an industrious and careful man, a member in good standing in the different grades of Oddfellowship, which order honored his memory by paying all due respect to his remains. The funeral rites were conducted by the Rabbi Eppstein, of Ligonier. His remains were interred in the Jewish cemetery at Ligonier. He leaves a wife, a sister, some distant relatives and one grandchild to mourn his departure.

Reported that Harry Stafford is looking at the B. & O. wishfully again.

R. E. Holler, B. & O. agent, who has been very sick for some time is improving.

A team owned by Fremont Smith broke loose and ran away Friday evening. No damage as yet heard of.

David Greenwald is filling agent Holler's place during the latters illness. He will relieve General Manager Odell as soon as Mr. Holler resumes duty.

O. C. Watterman, who has been with H. E. Parshall for some time, Wabash agent here, has been assigned work at Blakeslee, O., for the Wabash. Success, Ora.

A painful accident befell Miss Lillie Repp of this place Tuesday morning. The young lady was ironing some ribbon that she had cleaned with gasolene when they ignited from the heat of the iron burning her hands in a very shocking manner. The young lady is being taken care of at Mr. Oberholtzer's, her brother in-law, where every possible attention is being shown her. Although it will be some time before she will recover, we trust that nothing will prevent recovery soon.

The Commissioners Not to Blame.

No matter what the commissioners do, some one will find fault. If they build a bridge some one complains of extravagance. If they don't build it, some one will grumble about his neighborhood being neglected. And so it goes. Last week we heard a man say that in his section there were many ditches that needed cleaning but it could not be done, because there were no stakes set. Soon the time for cleaning them would be passed and nothing could then be done till next spring. In the meantime, the ditches choked up, and were liable to fill with water and ruin some fields. Again came the complaint against the commissioners. But it is not the commissioners' fault. It is hard to tell just who is to blame, but certainly not the commissioners. The surveyor could, and we presume would, do the work necessary to have the ditches cleaned. But he cannot do it alone. He cannot attend to the work in his office and be out in the country at the same time, no matter how willing he may be. And the commissioners have been sued, been "enjoined," etc. to prevent them from allowing the surveyor the proper number of helpers, till they have been forced to refuse any more assistance to the surveyor than is absolutely necessary to do the most pressing work of that department. They would have permitted the surveyor to have help enough to do the work, and the people would have had no cause to complain of their ditches not being cleaned. But the Alliance and others of their friends, brought suit against them, and work has stopped to a great extent. That is how the matter stands now. And if the commissioners go on and have the work done, a part of the people will kick. On the other hand if they don't have the work done, then another set would kick. We believe the commissioners are honest, and are anxious to have the work done and relieve the people from loss. But the moment they start to put more help into the surveyor's office, some one will object, and the work stops. So, in the name of reform, we are permitting a wasteful mismanagement, and in the name of economy, we are wasting the people's substance by allowing their ditches to go down. Gentlemen, place the blame where it belongs. The commissioners have tried hard to serve you, but you, or some of those among you, have stopped them. We believe if our people would stop to consider how this matter stands, they would put the blame where it belongs. There may be a doubt as to the powers the commissioners possess in this matter, but we believe the people at large will uphold them in any course that will prevent loss and make our ditch laws effective.

The Dispatch and the New Tax Law.

We had several times asked the Dispatch to come out plainly and say what especial points it disliked about the new tax law, against which in a general way it is always harping. Last week, while carefully avoiding any direct answer, it managed to go over the same old story that it has used so often. It begins by saying, "the law covers ninety-two pages, and they can't tackle all of it at once." Well, we never denied the ninety-two page part; nor have we asked them to draft a new bill. But we wanted them to answer definitely as to what portion of the law they did not like. That more money will be raised, no one denies. What we want is a comparison between the old law and the new, to see whether the old law is better as the Dispatch claims, or whether the new law is better, as we claim. It is easy to get down to business in this matter, if the Dispatch is willing to do so. And in order to help it get started clearly, we will give the following statement:

There are only two ways by which higher taxes can be raised. One is, by increasing the valuation of property, that is, the assessment; the other is, by increasing the rate levied on each $100. Now which of these is it that the Dispatch objects to? Is it the assessment, or the rate levied? We think this is plain enough to be understood, and easy enough to entitle it to a definite answer.

Some Plain, Good-Natured Talk.

"Not a single farmer delegate to either of the great national conventions" says an anonymous writer in the Waterloo Advocate of July 9. But fourteen miles west of Waterloo, near Kendallville, on the great Air Line road connecting the two towns, resides Nick Newnam, who served but a few weeks ago as a delegate to the national democratic convention at Chicago. We presume there are many similar cases. Comment is unnecessary. Then near the close of the article the writer advocates for commissioner J. I. Lowe, Lyman Lockwood and Wm. Wilson as men who will save so much money for the county. What qualities do Wilson and Lowe possess that are not possessed by Hoffelder and Henderson? As to Lockwood, he is the present republican member of the board, and we would like to hear what especial things he has done so far, except to work himself and party in with the Alliance folks. If anyone has an honest desire to save money for DeKalb county there is just one way to do it, and only one. It is to re-elect Hoffelder and Henderson, who have proved themselves honest and painstaking and have had the necessary experience to make them more valuable than any new man. Lowe and Wilson would go in as new men, with no experience, and would be not a whit better than any other men in their first term. But it is not a question as to the election of Lowe and Wilson. Their party has no ghost of a show, and will not elect a man in DeKalb county, and they know it. The only question that confronts the people is: Shall we elect Hoffelder and Henderson, with a valuable experience, or shall we elect Stonebreaker and Craun, the republican condidates, with no experience at all?

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."

DR. G. C. OSGOOD,
Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."

AUBURN AND VICINITY.

The building was completed, the machinery in place by the middle of summer and Bowers & Brother started their new flouring mill on Saturday July 23rd. The enterprise was materially helpful to the town in as much as it furnished a market for wheat ground for home use and flour for sale elsewhere.

About the first of December, Lewis Bowers sold his one-half interest to Henry W. Ford for $7,000, and a month later for some inexplicable defect, the boiler exploded, wrecking the plant, but the unfortunate proprietors undismayed energetically set to work and rebuilt the structure and soon again the Union Mills became a prominent feature of Auburn's early manufacturing enterprise.

Mr. Ford sold his interest to William R. Moore, by whom the mill was operated with Mr. Searight, miller, and William Crawford, engineer, until the evening of Dec. 18, 1866 when it was once more blown to pieces by the explosion of the boiler.

The report was teriffic. Glass was shivered, a crack to be seen to-day, opened over the west door of the court house, and the sound was heard miles away. A crowd of citizens hastened to the scene to see Mr. Moore and Mr. Searight injured but able to make their way from the ruins, while search resulted in finding the body of the ill-fated engineer beneath a mass of wreckage over the engine room.

The loss to the owners was mitigated by a partial insurance, but they had no heart to erect the mill a third time and the ruin lay for a time undisturbed.

Finally the debris of the wreck was cleared away and Phœnix like the Eagle Mills rebuilt by Isaac M. Thomas and Christian Buss, yet again crowned the slight eminence bounding building limits eastward on the north side of Seventh street and with Mr. Keagey as miller resumed and continued business.

Later, sale was made to W. W. Griswold, Richard Elson bought Griswold's interest and he and Thomas then disposed of their holding to Lewis Bowers one of the original proprietors who in turn sold to P. W. Silvers. I. O. Bachtel finally purchased the entire property and in keeping with the spirit of progress elsewhere displayed in milling, thoroughly refitted the mills, put in costly and scientific machinery and entered upon the manufacture of roller flour by a new process.

For years, a huge wood yard had of necessity cumbered the ground west of the mill, and cordwood of all kinds and quality was bought and piled in high long ranks for use of the furnace. The discovery of natural gas in this vicinity revolutionized this business. Gas replaced cordwood; the ground was cleared; an addition to the mills was built, an iron fence was constructed and marked improvement was made.

As an economic measure, a reservoir was conveniently placed and crude oil superseding gas, was supplied by which the furnace fires are now maintained at equal temperature.

The Eagle Mills have long received a substantial and well merited patronage and the character of milling wherever tested, has been pronounced indisputably excellent. The flour from this mill has no superior in this market. As a consequence of pains-taking and liberal outlay, Mr. Bachtel is recognized as a valuable and prosperous citizen, and his efforts having for many years been seconded by those of his trusty veteran engineer, Michael Douglas, this flouring mill in unbroken operation for a long period has been a help to Auburn, a convenience to farmers and a profitable investment.

The season during the year 1864, following a severe winter was favorable to the farmer. The weather during spring was remarkably pleasant. Sunshine was the rule and the atmosphere was invigorating. Crops later on were imperiled by a drouth which however was broken by timely rains preventing injury and, on June 28, Mr. Vinton, of Smithfield township, cut one hundred twelve dozen sheaves of red Mediterranean wheat fully ripened.

Wheat harvest was early, the crop was good and the price realized was an average of $2.00 a bushel in currency. A significant fact bearing upon the adverse market conditions of Auburn was the absence of prices then paid in what is now Butler. July 1st, corn and potatoes each brought $1.00 a bushel; wool was 80 to 90 cents a pound and eggs by the dozen, butter by the pound sold at 20 cents.

Early in May, a number of prominent democrats organized as a corporation to be known as "The DeKalb County Newspaper Company," for the purpose of publishing a newspaper which should be devoted "to the true interests of the people of our county and the sound principles of the National Union Democracy."

Among leading stockholders were Messrs. Sprott, Ralston, Waterman, Butt, John Ralston and Freeman Kelley. The executive committee was composed of S. W. Sprott, John Brandon, John Butt and S. W. Ralston.

The company was fortunate in effecting the purchase of a press and material nearly new and The DeKalb Democrat once more came into a term of existence to be destroyed in time by fire as had happened to the Democratic Messenger.

The office was located up stairs over Eldridge's, one of the block of framed buildings that till 1867, extended northward from Rhodes' brick store to J. D. Davis' hardware.

The motto of the Democrat was "The Union—it must be preserved." It advocated immediate stoppage of the war and supported what was known as the peace policy.

The services of Wm. H. Dills were engaged as editor and superintendent of the proposed paper and the initial number was issued from the press on Friday June 24th, its columns fairly filled with advertisements, legal, professional and mercantile.

As an editor, Mr. Dills was intensely personal and partisan, although his experience as a publisher was brief, it was not from lack of ability since for years subsequently he ranked high as a writer and was prominent among the attorneys comprising this judicial circuit.

Laudably ambitious of political preferment, he was in the race against Robert W. McBride, now of the state supreme court, for the office of circuit judge, and as one of the presidential electors for this state at the November election, 1884, had the rare satisfaction for a democrat, since the war, of casting an electoral ballot for Grover Cleveland for democratic president.

Mr. Dills was authority on pioneer subjects in which he was always interested and was author of a compendious treatise on railroad valuation and assessment. His death was sudden and occurred on Jan. 15, 1891 in his 57th year.

Joseph Loveland continued the publication of the new Era as the organ of the war democracy which was practically republican. He found uncertain support and little profit, and thus a second time, Auburn was represented by two newspapers, in politics radically opposite and vigorously pressing their respective views of administrative policy and the conduct of the war.

ALAS!

How wretched is the man who has fallen a victim to Biliousness, Indigestion, Sick Headache, or diseased Liver, with all the horrible attendants. Look upon the picture. Poor man, being tired of dragging out a miserable existence, he is the picture of despondency; altogether, he is rather a forlorn specimen. Do we pity him? Of course; but at the same time feel assured that in a measure he is to blame for the bad state into which he has fallen. A sure, safe, speedy and easy cure can be found in Simmons Liver Regulator—Nature's own remedy. No mercury or deleterious drugs, not unpleasant to the taste, and always reliable—just such a remedy as you can pin your faith to without a shadow of disappointment. Read the testimonial, don't take our word for it:

> "I have been subject to severe spells of Congestion of the Liver, and have been in the habit of taking from 15 to 20 grains of calomel, which generally laid me up for three or four days. Lately I have been taking Simmons Liver Regulator which gave me relief, without any interruption to business." J. Hugg, Middleport, Ohio.

The New Great South American Kidney Cure.

The acknowledged superior cure and immediate relief for all derangements, painfulness and decay of the kidneys or bladder, Bright's disease, diabetes or any complaint that hurts or despoils either of these delicate organs. This new remedy has been thoroughly tested by learned physicians and found far superior to any medicine yet discovered for quickly relieving all weaknesses, aches, pains and distresses arising from disease of any part of the urinary passages. It is a great relief for the old, middle aged and children, male or female. It relieves at once retention and pain in passing water, and it is very effective in relieving prostatic troubles in the old, and for nightly incontinence of water in children, or others, caused by weakness of the bladder. It may be worth to many a hundred times its cost. This is a remedy of great value to ladies, because they are very liable to weakness and pain peculiar to their sex. Sold by Robbins & McCord, druggists, Auburn, Ind. tf

A Gigantic Conspiracy to Defraud Chicago Banks — A Murderer Electrocuted — A Compromise on the World's Fair Appropriation — Blaine to Take the Stump—Private Iams Begins Action.

NIPPED IN THE BUD.

A Gigantic Conspiracy to Defraud Chicago Banks.

Chicago special: The dishonorable discharge of George Bartels, paying teller of the Central Trust and Savings Bank, and his subsequent flight with $3,000 of the firm's cash, has unearthed a gigantic conspiracy to defraud five Chicago banks. The scheme was partly successful, and over $50,000 was secured from Bartels' former employers, but was made good by reputable men who had vouched for the integrity and business ability of the young men who had engaged in the deal. Another bank is said to have lost $29,000, which amount was also made good by the same security.

Three of the men formerly connected with the Chicago Bank Note Company have been arrested, charged with conspiracy to defraud and the issuance of fraudulent paper. These mem are Wm. A. Forbes, N. W. Burnside, and Charles M. Anson. George Bartels, the fourth man who is wanted, has left the country. Justice Wheeler issued the warrants and the preliminary hearing is set for Thursday morning. Charles Nichols, a go-between, has made affidavit exposing the whole scheme as far as it is known to him. A bill in chancery asking for the appointment of a receiver for the bank note concern, filed by John B. Gribler, formerly of the company, also throws light upon the shady methods of the individuals under suspicion.

The plot is the most ingenious ever nipped in the financial arena of this city.

The plan was simple. Forbes was manager of the Chicago Bank Note Company; Burnside, a son of a well-known physician, was associated with Forbes. Anson was but an employe of the firm. These young men were vouched for by General Allen C. Fuller and numerous men of wealth and financial influence. They opened accounts with the Central Trust and Savings Bank, the Globe National Bank, the State Bank of Chicago, the First National Bank, and the Milwaukee Avenue State Bank. Immediately they deposit checks, drafts, etc., which have since been found to be fraudulent, and later drew out the cash.

By collusion with Bartels the great run of the paper was dumped on the Central Trust Savings Bank. The system that was developed was the work of months. The teller in the absence of the cashier, certified all paper and the forged drafts, checks, etc., were cashed.

Iams Begins Action.

Pittsburgh special: Ex-Private Iams has begun his promised legal action against the National Guard officers who hanged him by the thumbs, shaved his head and drummed him out of Camp Sam Black at Homestead. He, with one of his attorneys, called on Justice Reilly and made information against Colonel Hawkins, Lieut. Col. Streator and Assistant Surgeon William Simpson Grim. Warrants were at once placed in the hand of constables. There are two informations, one against Hawkins, Streator, and Grim, charging them with aggravated assault and battery on July 23, at which time Iams was strung up by the thumbs and suffered other indignities at the hands of the defendants; the other information charges Hawkins and Streator with assault and battery July 24, at which time his hair was cut and he was drummed out of camp. A civil suit will be brought and the attorneys feel confident of securing heavy damages for their client and also convicting the defendants on the charges made.

One Half of Five Millions.

A Washington special, dated the 4th inst., says: It is stated by a close friend of the World's fair that the advocates of the appropriation, who were in consultation until after midnight, have agreed to accept the compromise tendered by those who oppose the Senate amendment, reducing the amount by one-half. It is asserted that an appropriation of $2,500,000 which will be in the nature of a gift, has been agreed upon by all concerned as the basis of a settlement by which the dead-lock will be broken.

Owing to the lateness of the hour it has been impossible to confirm this statement, but the sources from which it is obtained are of a trustworthy character.

Cal Wood Electrocuted.

Clinton Prison, Dannemora (N. Y.) special: Joseph Wood was executed by electricity for murdering his father-in-law. Death was apparently painless and instantaneous. Three contacts were necessary, consuming thirty-five seconds in all. During the execution Mrs. Wood and her brother-in-law sat in the hotel parlor across from the prison entrance, and when the witnesses came out she burst into tears and buried her face in her hands.

Come In, You're Out.

Speaker Crisp has caused the following telegram to be sent the absent members of the house, which number 142:

"I urgently request your immediate attendance here. We cannot break the deadlock without a full attendance, and we cannot adjourn without disposing of the sundry civil bill. All leaves of absence revoked."

Fell from An Engine.

David Pletcher, son of ex-Marshall David Pletcher of Canton, Ohio, and a fireman on the Fort Wayne road, was seriously injured by falling from the train at Perrysville, Ohio.

Mr. Blaine Will Take the Stump.

Ex-Secretary Blaine will take the stump for the Republican national ticket. No definite statement can yet be made as to the number of speeches Mr. Blaine will make nor the place at which they will be delivered. The matters of detail are, however, being arranged.

Private cablegrams from Paris announce that a syndicate has been formed for the purpose of taking in hand work on the canal and pushing it at once along the route. These telegrams have caused great rejoicing at Panama, and further particulars have been requested by cable.

American Killed by an Avalanche.

A dispatch from Interlaken, Switzerland, states that an American named R. Ribbons has been killed by the fall of an avalanche from the upper Griudenwald glazier. The fall of an avalanche in that vicinity is a frequent spectacle, but seldom attended by danger unless the spectator is foolhardy.

FIGHT WITH A MADMAN.

Los Angeles special: Arthur Strobel, an insane German from New York, was shot and killed yesterday by Constable E. P. Hardie of Garvanza while resisting arrest. Strobel applied at the residence of Mrs. Ramson for lodging, and on being refused put the family to flight. From there he proceeded to the railroad crossing, and made an assault with a revolver on Thomas Wilson, a one-armed flagman. A bystander interfered and Strobel chased him down the street with a revolver at his head. Hardie was notified and found Strobel at the Ramson residence, whither he had returned and where he was demolishing the furniture. The officer called on him to surrender, but Strobel fled from the house, at the same time drawing his revolver on the officer who fired, the bullet taking effect in an artery of the right leg. Strobel bled to death in ten minutes. Hardie surrendered himself.

MORE TO BE PROSECUTED.

Those Who Assaulted the Pinkertons Will Be Arrested.

Those who participated in the disgrace at Homestead after the surrender of the Pinkertons on July 6 will be prosecuted for aggravated assault and battery, highway robbery, larceny, pocket-picking, and other crimes and misdemeanors. The work of securing the necessary evidence to convict those engaged in the assaults on the Pinkertons and the robbery of the surrendered men has been going on for some time, and it is now so far advanced that informations will be made in a few days and the persons arrested. Among them are several women who were particularly active and aggressive during the time the men ran the gantlet and after it in taking the property of the men and hiding it. Assault and battery and receiving stolen goods will be the charges against these women. The attorney for the prosecution is preparing informations in these cases, and as soon as they are completed the warrants will be issued.

ROASTED IN NAPHTHA.

Four Men Burned Fatally by an Explosion Resulting From a Train Wreck.

One of the worst wrecks the Big Four has experienced in recent years, occurred Monday afternoon at Cold Springs, four miles west of Springfield, Ohio, to the first section of west-bound freight No. 65, in charge of Conductor Mara and Engineer Smith. While the train was running at the rate of twenty-five miles per hour, a truck or some part of the running-gear of one of the cars broke. In an instant thirteen cars, all loaded, were piled up in indescribable confusion. The wreck occurred in the limekiln region where the road runs for a couple of miles in a small canyon and the track was completely blocked. Of the cars, four were loaded with naphtha, which caught fire, and soon the entire wreck was blazing. The financial loss is estimated at $75,000 or over. Four persons were burned fatally.

MURDER HIS PROFESSION.

Says He Had a Hand in Three Irish Political Assassinations.

A man who is confined in prison in Glasgow has confessed to the authorities that he was implicated in the murder of Lord Leitrim who was shot and killed on April 2, 1878, while driving near his residence in County Derry, Ireland. The prisoner also stated that he was concerned in the killing of Lord Montmorris at Rusheen, County Mayo, Ireland, Sept. 25, 1880. He further says he was hired to assist the man who killed the informer, James Carey. The prison commissioners are carefully investigating the story of the man, whom they have subjected to a most searching examination, and are endeavoring to secure proof of his statements.

IN THE SUN'S HARVEST.

No Diminution of the Fearful Death Rate in Chicago.

Another scorcher, another long list of heat victims to add to the mortality column and the prolongation of the misery that goes with a protracted season of equatorial heat in these latitudes. Such was the record of Chicago on Wednesday. Those who gave up their lives numbered thirty-four and the injured were sixty-seven. Other cities east and south had the same experience, but sections of the Northwest report a drop in temperature of from 20 to 40 degrees.

Killed by a Vicious Bull.

Martin H. Smith, a Schenectady, N. Y., farmer, aged 64, was gored to death by a vicious Durham bull. Smith had gone to the pasture to give the cattle some salt when the bull attacked him. The old farmer made a desperate fight, but was finally overcome by the animal. He was rescued while yet alive, but died two hours later.

Poor Crops Around Northfield.

The crops near Northfield, Minn., are in very poor condition. In many places the spring wheat is not more than eight inches high and will never be harvested. Well-matured grain cannot be cut with a machine because of the mud, and old-fashioned cradles are being used.

Deed of an Enraged Husband.

William Bushendorf, a well-to-do farmer residing at Clark Station, Ind., shot and fatally wounded Henry Werkmeister. Werkmeister was paying too much attention to Bushendorf's wife. Bushendorf is now in the county jail.

Many Die in the East.

New York reports ninety-four deaths from heat Friday, and Philadelphia twenty-eight. The mercury has fallen at both cities.

ACCEPTS THE CHARGE.

CHARACTERISTIC SPEECH BY MR. CLEVELAND.

He Accepts the Presidential Nomination by the Democracy—Sound on the Platform—Gen. Stevenson Also Accepts and Promises to Do His Duty.

Speech by Mr. Cleveland.

In reply to the formal notification by the National Committee in New York, Grover Cleveland said:

MR. CHAIRMAN AND GENTLEMEN: The message you deliver from the National Democracy arouses within me emotions which would be well nigh overwhelming if I did not recognize here assembled the representatives of a great party who must share with me the responsibility your mission invites. I find much relief in the reflection that I have been selected merely to stand for the principles and purposes to which my party is pledged and for the enforcement and supremacy of which all who have any right to claim Democratic fellowship must constantly and persistently labor.

Our party responsibility is indeed great. We assume a momentous obligation to our countrymen when, in return for their trust and confidence, we promise them a rectification of their wrongs and a better realization of the advantages which are due to them under our free and beneficent institutions. But if our responsibility is great our party is strong. It is strong in its sympathy with the needs of the people, in its insistence upon the exercise of governmental powers strictly within the constitutional permission the people have granted and in its willingness to risk its life and hope upon the people's intelligence and patriotism. Never has a great party, intent upon the promotion of right and justice, had better incentive for effort than is now presented to us.

Turning our eyes to the plain people of the land, we see them burdened as consumers with a tariff system that unjustly and relentlessly demands from them in the purchase of the necessaries and comforts of life an amount scarcely met by the wages of hard and steady toil, while the exactions thus wrung from them build up and increase the fortunes of those for whose benefit this injustice is perpetrated.

We see the farmer listening to a delusive story that fills his mind with visions of advantage, while his pocket is robbed by the stealthy hand of high protection. Our workingmen are still told the tale, oft repeated in spite of its demonstrated falsity, that the existing protective tariff is a boon to them and that under its beneficent operation their wages must increase, while as they listen scenes are enacted in the very abiding place of high protection that mock the hopes of toil and attest the tender mercy the workingman receives from those made selfish and sordid by unjust governmental favoritism.

We oppose earnestly and stubbornly the theory upon which our opponents seek to justify and uphold existing tariff laws. We need not base our attack upon questions of constitutional permission or legislative power. We denounce this theory upon the highest possible grounds when we contend that in present conditions its operation is unjust, and that laws enacted in accordance with it are inequitable and unfair.

Ours is not a destructive party. We are not at enmity with the rights of any of our citizens. All are our countrymen. We are not recklessly heedless of any American interests, nor will we abandon our regard for them; but, invoking the love of fairness and justice which belongs to true Americanism and upon which our constitution rests, we insist that no plan of tariff legislation shall be tolerated which has for its object and purpose a forced contribution from the earnings and income of the mass of our citizens to swell directly the accumulations of a favored few; nor will we permit a pretended solicitude for American labor or any other specious pretext of benevolent care for others to blind the eyes of the people to the selfish schemes of those who seek, through the aid of unequal tariff laws, to gain unearned and unreasonable advantage at the expense of their fellows.

We have also assumed, in our covenant with those whose support we invite, the duties of opposing to the death another avowed scheme of our adversaries, which, under the guise of protecting suffrage, covers, but does not conceal, a design thereby to perpetuate the power of a party afraid to trust its continuance to the untrammeled and intelligent votes of the American people.

We are pledged to resist the legislation intended to complete this scheme, because we have not forgotten the saturnalia of theft and brutal control which followed another Federal regulation of State suffrage, because we know that the managers of a party which did not scruple to rob the people of a President would not hesitate to use the machinery created by such legislation to revive corrupt instrumentalities for partisan purposes, because an attempt to enforce such legislation would rekindle animosities, ruin peace, and destroy the hopefulness that now reigns, because such an attempt would replace prosperous activity with discouragement and dread throughout a large section of our country, and menace everywhere in the land the rights reserved to the States and to the people which underlie the safeguards of American liberty.

I shall not attempt to specify at this time other objects and aims of Democratic endeavor which add inspiration to our mission. True to its history and its creed, our party will respond to the wants of the people within safe lines and guided by enlightened statesmanship. To the troubled and impatient within our membership we commend continued, unswerving allegiance to the party whose principles in all times past have been found sufficient for them and whose aggregate wisdom and patriotism, their experience teaches, can always be trusted.

In a tone of partisanship which befits the occasion, let me say to you as equal partners in the campaign upon which we to-day enter that the personal fortunes of those to whom you have intrusted your banners are only important as they are related to the fate of the principles they represent and to the party which leads. I cannot, therefore, forbear reminding you and all those attached to the Democratic party, or supporting the principles which we profess, that defeat in the impending campaign, followed by the consummation of the legislative schemes our opponents contemplate, and accompanied by such other incidents of their success as might more firmly fix their power, would present a most discouraging outlook for future Democratic supremacy and for the accomplishment of the objects we have at heart. Moreover, every sincere Democrat must believe that the interests of his country are deeply involved in the victory of our party in the struggle that awaits us. Thus patriotic solicitude exalts the hope of partisanship, and should intensify our determination to win success.

This success can only be achieved by systematic and intelligent effort on the part of all enlisted in our cause. Let us tell the people plainly and honestly what we believe and how we propose to serve the interests of the entire country, and then let us, after the manner of true Democracy, rely upon the thoughtfulness and patriotism of our fellow-countrymen.

It only remains for me to say to you, in advance of a more formal response to your message, that I obey the command of my party and confidently anticipate that an intelligent and earnest presentation of our cause will insure a popular indorsement of the action of the body you represent.

Gen. Stevenson Accepts.

General Stevenson in responding to the official notification of his nomination spoke as follows:

MR. CHAIRMAN AND GENTLEMEN OF THE COMMITTEE: I can not too earnestly express my appreciation of the honor conferred upon me by the great delegated assembly which you officially represent. To have been selected by the National Democratic Convention as its candidate for high office is a distinction of which any citizen might well be proud. I would do violence to your feelings, sir, should I fail to express my gratitude for the courteous terms in which you have advised me of the result of the deliberations of the convention.

Distrusting my capacity fully to meet the expectations of those who have honored me by their confidence I accept the nomination so generously tendered. Should the action of the Chicago convention receive the approval of the people I shall to the best of my humble ability discharge with fidelity the duties of the important trust confided in me.

Reference has been made in terms of commendation to the late Democratic administration. Identified in some measure in an important branch of the public service with that administration, I am gratified to know that it has in so marked a degree received the indorsement of the Democratic party in its national convention. I am persuaded that intelligent discussion of the issues involved in the pending contest for political supremacy will result in victory to the party which stands for honest methods in government, economy in public expenditures, and relief to the people from the burden of unjust taxation.

I am not unmindful, Mr. Chairman, of the grave responsibilities which attach to the great office for which I have been named. I may be pardoned for quoting in this connection the words of the honored patriot, Thomas A. Hendricks [cheers] when officially informed that he had been designated by his party for the vice-presidency in 1884. He said: "I know that sometimes it is understood that this particular office does not involve much responsibility, and as a general rule that is so. But sometimes it comes to represent very great responsibilities, and it may be so in the near future. The two parties in the Senate being so nearly evenly divided, the Vice President may have to decide upon questions of law by the exercise of a casting vote. The responsibility would then become very great. It would not then be the responsibility of representing a district or a State. It would be the responsibility of representing the whole country. And that vote when thus cast should be in obedience to the just expectations and requirement of the people of the United States."

Should it please my country men to call me to this office the high appreciation of its dignity and of its responsibilities as expressed in the utterances and illustrated in the life of the eminent statesman whom I have mentioned will be a light to my own pathway.

In the contest upon which we now enter we make no appeal to the passions, but to the sober judgment of the people. We believe that the welfare of the toiling millions of our countrymen is bound up in the success the Democratic party. Recent occurrences in a neighboring State have sadly emphasized the fact that a high protective tariff affords no protection, and tends in no way to better the condition of those who earn their bread by daily toil. Believing the right of every voter to cast his ballot unawed by power, the Democratic party will steadily oppose all legislation which threatens to imperil that right by the interposition of federal bayonets at the polls.

In a more formal manner hereafter, Mr. Chairman, I will indicated by letter my acceptance of the nomination tendered me by the National Democratic Convention, and will give expression to my views touching the important questions enunciated in its platform.

Hoosiers After Harrison.

Harrison's managers all over the country are in a disturbed state of mind, but in Indiana they are positively panic-stricken. It will be remembered that Millionaire McDonald, the electric light man of Fort Wayne, Ind., headed a big Blaine crowd from the Hoosier State, who made a gallant fight for the Plumed Knight at Minneapolis, contending to the very end that Harrison could never carry his own State. They went home disgusted, and seem bent on making good their doleful prophecy. McDonald and his friend, ex-Congressman J. B. White, have led a revolt, and the most frantic efforts of the President's friends have failed to check its course.

Harry G. Hanna, a prominent lawyer and influential Blaine Republican, has resigned his membership of the State Central Committee, because he cannot conscientiously support Harrison. Chairman Gaudy, chairman of that committee, went post haste to the scat of treason to patch up peace, but his presence only added fuel to the flames, and a majority of the Allen County Republican Committee, including its chairman, resigned. The feeling against Harrison is so strong at Fort Wayne that the business and professional element say they will ostracize any one accepting the county chairmanship thus made vacant.

White, who served in the Fiftieth Congress as a Republican, will stump the State for Cleveland, and the German vote, which before supported Harrison, is largely against him. The disappointed Blaine men openly declare that they will get even with Harrison, for his gag-law methods at Minneapolis by electing the Republican State ticket and beating the National ticket.

Here is another ugly nail for the President's political coffin. He cannot afford to lose Indiana, yet it seems impossible for him to carry it. Dudley is not to manipulate the blocks this year, the secret ballot checks the course of corruption. Harrison has made enemies, the Blaineites are after him, and Hoosierdom is in the hands of his foes.—Detroit Free Press.

Splitting the Northwest.

The majority against the Republicans in Minnesota in 1890 was 56,000.

Allowing the most extravagant claims of Republicanism, that majority is not less than 25,000 or 30,000 to-day.

What folly it would be for such a majority, by dividing its force, to let the Republican minority capture and count the electoral vote of the State!

The anti-Republican majority consists of Democrats and People's party men. Upon some points they are not agreed. But they are agreed in their hostility to McKinleyism—the one overshadowing issue of the campaign—and they are of one mind in their conviction that the supreme duty at present is to oust the Republican party and all that it stands for from power in the nation.

This they can accomplish by fusion upon a mixed electoral ticket. They can elect such a ticket, while neither side can elect a ticket of its own. Fusion is manifestly the dictate of policy and patriotism, and there is little doubt that a fusion will be made.

A closely similar state of things exists in Kansas, Nebraska and the two Dakotas, and in all these States successful fusion is now deemed probable.—New York World.

THE charge that Mr. Stevenson was a member of the Sons of Liberty during the war is an exploded cartridge. It was originally fired during the Congressional campaigns in the '70s when Mr. Stevenson carried the strong Republican district of which McLean County was the center. The people, who may best be supposed to know the truth, repudiated it then, and their verdict will stand.—St. Louis Republic.

THE banners and transparencies of Cleveland and Stevenson are flying all over New York, and there can be no mistake about the popular feeling in regard to the ticket. The bosses will be sick and sore for a little while, perhaps, but as time advances will realize more and more clearly the foolishness of fighting against the inevitable.

DEBATE THE TARIFF.

M'KINLEY, WARNER AND ST. JOHN AT MADISON, WIS.

Henry Watterson Compelled to Be Absent on Account of Sickness, and His Place Taken by the Tariff-Reform Advocate of New York.

All Three Talked.

Madison, Wis., special: Ten thousand persons gathered at the lakeside to hear the McKinley-Warner joint debate Friday afternoon. A message arrived in the morning that Henry Watterson would be unable to take part in the debate, and W. C. Warner, of the New York Tariff Reform Club, who is stumping the State for the Democratic committee, took his place.

Mr. Warner spoke first. He defined Democracy as being "Equal rights to all, and special privileges to none." The great question which had been raised by the adoption of the Democratic platform at Chicago, and which the people were to settle, was "Whether you could tax a nation into prosperity," and on this question he would chiefly dwell. The whole system of a protective tariff is founded on wrong and injustice. The system was instituted because we are a product of the feudal ages, a relic of the barbarous ages of the past. It was simply a means to compel the common people to bear the burdens which the rich should bear. If McKinley was rightly reported to have said that the people do not know whether they are taxed $1 or $1,000,000 by an indirect system, what, then, is the use of making such a fuss about it? If the place of collecting these taxes were only moved nearer home, there would be a revolution not excelled by that of Watt Tyler in England years ago. It is only the ignorance of the common people which allows the present system to exist. The Democrats propose to put the revenue taxes just as high as possible upon the things the wealthy use and as low as possible upon what the poor use. As a result of the McKinley bill we now have a Democratic majority in Congress of 150 (almost as much as the tariff on seal plush). This is simply a forecast of the mighty avalanche which will descend upon the Republicans next November. The aim of the Democrats, he said, was free trade.

Governor McKinley held the vast audience till supper time. Said he: "What is tariff reform, anyway? Who can tell? Cleveland said several years ago that he knew nothing about the tariff. In his Madison Garden speech he told his auditors naught to show that time had brought enlightenment to his mind. And the 150 majority in Congress, what definition has it given to the term tariff reform? It has passed a bill to untax wool for the sole benefit of the New England manufacturer and the injury of all farmers, while leaving the duty on all woolen articles that man is counted on to wear. Yes, and it has passed a bill to lift the tariff on cotton ties for the benefit of the South, while the almost identical iron bands used in many other callings still have upon them the old duty. This is tariff reform. This is the economic policy of the Democratic party, and it might better be called no policy at all, for it obviously represents no system and can produce no uniform result for good or bad."

The speaker then dwelt on the subject of taxation. "This country," he declared, "must raise $400,000,000 taxes annually to defray the expenses of the administration. We must obtain from some source or another $1,000,000 every twenty-four hours. There are only two ways possible—by levying a direct tax upon the people or an import duty on the products of foreign nations. The nation must adopt one or the other."

The speaker then dwelt on the disadvantage of the direct tax system and quoted Jefferson and Madison as earnest opponents of it in time of peace. In closing, he said that the United States had thirty years of protection, and the country has improved its financial position so that it is unrivaled among the nations, and $200,000,000 of the public debt has been paid. Thirty years ago 95 per cent. of the hardware of the country was of English make, but now 95 per cent. is American.

The tariff or free trade has nothing to do with strikes or lockouts. It has nothing to do with differences between employer and employe.

Gov. St. John spoke in behalf of the Prohibition party.

BOLD CRIME OF THE DALTONS

They Enter a Bank in Broad Daylight and Carry Off All the Money.

The boldest robbery of the notorious Daltons was committed at El Reno, Oklahoma, at about 10:30 Wednesday morning. At that hour people passing along the street, were startled by screams for help coming from the Bank of El Reno. The screams were from Mrs. S. W. Sawyer, wife of the President of the bank, who had just been held up by two robbers, who had also robbed the bank of $10,500.

At 10:30 a stranger entered the bank, stepped up to the cashier's window and made an inquiry about some town lots, and then stepped to a desk and commenced writing. In a moment another stranger stepped to the cashier's desk, and presenting a revolver at Mrs. Sawyer's head, demanded that she hand out all the money in the bank. The woman was so frightened that she could not move, but the robber threatened to shoot if she did not act quickly, and in a dazed way she went to the vault and handed to him all the packages of bills in the vault safe and what was in the daily change drawer, aggregating about $10,500, and less than $100 of it was in silver. The man who was writing at the desk turned quickly and grabbed the money as Mrs. Sawyer handed it through the wicket and disappeared out of the door, the one holding the revolver following quickly. Mrs. Sawyer screamed several times and fell over in a swoon. The robbers mounted horses that were standing at the edge of the pavement unhitched and rode out Rock Island avenue as fast as their horses could go. Mrs. Sawyer was the only person present in the bank, the President, her husband, being absent in Oklahoma. He arrived home about thirty minutes after the robbery. The robbery is believed to be the work of the Daltons on account of the manner of its execution.

HAS COST A MILLION.

Estimate of Losses by the Great Homestead Strike.

The great lock-out at Homestead is one month old, and has already cost over $1,000,000, besides the sacrifice of a half-score of human lives and serious injuries to many times that number. Of the loss in cash the military has cost in round figures $320,000, the workmen have lost in wages $180,000, and the Carnegie Company has lost and spent as much more in getting new workmen. The workmen at Beaver Falls, Duquesne, and the Union mills in Pittsburg have lost about $100,000 in wages by their sympathy strike, and the firm is out $100,000 by the idleness of these plants. Added to this will be the county expenses for deputy sheriffs and murder trials, the expense to the city for hunting anarchists, and to the nation for Congressional investigations.

DOINGS OF CONGRESS.

MEASURES CONSIDERED AND ACTED UPON.

At the Nation's Capital—What Is Being Done by the Senate and House—Old Matters Disposed Of and New Ones Considered.

The Senate and House.

On the 27th the House passed the $5,000,000 World's Fair appropriation bill by a vote of 117 to 105. Mr. Holman moved that the House non-concur in the Senate amendment increasing the appropriation for the Government's exhibit from $316,500 to $500,000 and demanded the previous question. The previous question was ordered and the motion to non-concur was carried by a viva voce vote. The same action was taken in all the Senate amendments for the government exhibit by viva voce vote. This means that there will be another conference and, unless the Senate conferees recede, another fight in the House. It is understood the Senate will recede.

The vote by which $5,000,000 was appropriated to the World's Fair was, upon motion of Mr. Holman, up for reconsideration on the 28th, and filibustering, led by Mr. Bailey, of Texas, was the order. Nothing else was done, except to pass a joint resolution to adjourn upon the 30th; this motion, it is freely stated, is but a part of the programme of the opponents of the appropriation to defeat it, and was made by Mr. Holman.

The time of the House, the 29th, was again taken up by the World's Fair bill, the filibusters successfully opposing a vote. An incident of the day was a tilt between Gen. Wheeler, of Alabama, and Mr. Watson, of Georgia, who had been carrying on a personal altercation for several days. Wheeler read from Mr Watson's campaign book a virulent attack upon the present House of Representatives, and Watson got up and declared that every word he had said in his book was true. Among other things, he charged that members had been drunk upon the floor during transaction of business. Mr. Boatner offered a resolution ordering an investigation. Nothing of interest occurred in the Senate.

On the 1st, action was taken by the House to supply funds to several departments which were at a standstill, and then filibustering was resumed upon the World's Fair bill. Mr. Holman endeavored to have the whole matter laid over until December, but failed. Both the friends and opponents of the bill are leaving the city rapidly, and it is an open question whether the matter will not be left with no quorum. At present the whole business of the present Congress is blocked by two men. No business of importance was transacted in the Senate.

KENTUCKY'S BLOODY TRAGEDY

Two Officers Shot and One Torn to Pieces by Dogs.

Lexington, Ky., special: Yesterday afternoon Kavanaugh Tipton, the jailer of Montgomery County; Thomas Howard, a Constable, George Rayburn, a special Deputy Sheriff, and two other men went to the mountains to capture John Sherrell, a horse-thief who stole a horse from Madison County last week. Tipton heard he was at the house of George Pipps, on Cedar Trace Creek. He arrived there this morning and upon the appearance of the posse two fierce dogs set up such a loud barking that Tipton concluded he would go in and make the arrest at once instead of waiting until daylight, as he first intended.

He went to the door, closely followed by the other members of the posse. He rapped and Pipps said "Come in." "Who is that?" he asked. "It is Kavanaugh Tipton and I am on on electioneering spree," was the reply. "All right," said Pipps, "I will get up and light the lamp." He struck a match and Tipton sat down on a chair and asked him who that was in bed with him.

Sherrell, who had been sleeping with Pipps, leveled his pistol on the footboard and before Pipps could reply to Tipton's question, shot the latter in the center of the forehead. He fell to the floor and died within two hours.

While the match was yet burning Howard entered the room only to receive a bullet in the temple from the horse thief's pistol, and he fell dead in his tracks. Rayburn was right behind him, and just before the match burned out Sherrell shot him through the right arm and shoulder.

In the darkness he made his escape through a back door, but Reyburn went out after him, only to be caught by dogs and almost torn to pieces. The animals wounded him so severely that he is not expected to live.

PLENTY AND CHEAP.

Dun Reports an Abundance of Money and Collections Good.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade follows: The weather has been extremely favorable for the growing crops, excepting in limited districts where damage has been done by violent storms, and the crop outlook is on the whole decidedly improved. Money has been abundant and cheap and collections generally good for the season, and there are no signs of threatened disturbance. Finished products of iron and steel are stronger and $3 to $5 per ton higher, but greater demoralization is expected in pig-iron unless more of the consuming works start speedily. Bar and sheet iron are very active and manufacturers of plate and structural iron have more orders than they can well handle, but no improvement is seen in rails. In woolens there is a better demand and more activity is seen in purchases of wool, while the cotton mills continue to do well. Boot and shoe shops are running, full of business, and shipments exceed last year's every week.

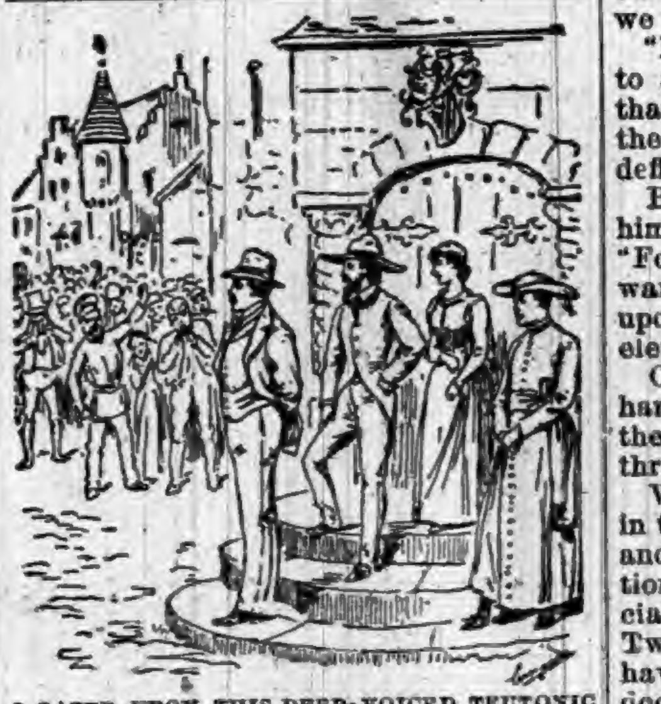
CHAPTER I.

The cause of the uproar proved to be simple enough.

Emerging into the Bischofsplatz from the side street that I had followed, I found a great crowd gathered before the Marmorhof, shouting "Death to Conrad!" and "Where is Mathilde?" with all the force of its collective lungs. The Marmorhof was the residence of Prince Conrad, brother to the reigning Grand Duke Otto—reigning, indeed, but now very old and ill and like to die. The legitimate successor to the throne would have been Otto's granddaughter Mathilde, the only surviving child of his eldest son, Franz Victor, who had been dead these ten years. But the Grand Duke's brother, Conrad, was covetous of her rights—covetous and, as her friends alleged, unscrupulous; and if she were but out of the way Conrad would come to reign. Rumor, indeed, whispered that he had made three actual attempts to compass her death: two by poison and one by the dagger, each, thanks to some miracle, unsuccessful. But a fortnight ago, upon the first outbreak of fatal symptoms in poor old Otto, Mathilde had mysteriously disappeared. Her whereabouts unknown, all the world was in a great commotion. "She has fled and is in hiding," surmised some people, "to escape the designs of her wicked uncle." "No," retorted others; "but he, the wicked uncle himself, has kidnaped her, sequestered her, perhaps made away with her. Who can tell?"



I GAZED UPON THIS DEEP-VOICED TEUTONIC MOB.

As an inquiring stranger, the situation interested me; and, from the top of a convenient doorstep, I gazed upon this deep-voiced Teutonic mob with a good deal of curiosity. It must have numbered upward of a thousand individuals, compact in its center and near the palace, but scattering toward its edges. "A sea of faces, a sea of pale, frowning faces," I thought, and I realized for the first time in my life what a perfect metaphor that is—a sea of faces. No other imaginable phrase could so exactly have hit off the scene before me; a sea of faces, a surging, troubled sea. Young men's faces, for the most part; many of them quite beardless.

"Students from the university," I guessed.

My own station was at the very outskirts of the assemblage, the station of a casual spectator. Sharing my friendly doorstep with me, there were a couple of sharp-faced priests, two or three prettyish young girls—bare-headed, presumably run out from some of the neighboring shops—and a young man with a pointed black beard, rather long black hair, and a broad-brimmed, soft felt hat, who looked as if he might be a member of that guild to which I myself belonged, the ancient and honorable company of artists.

To him I addressed a question:

"Students, I suppose?"

"Yes, their leaders are students. The students and the artisans of the town are of the Princess' party. The army, the clergy, and the country folk are for the Prince."

He had discerned from my accent that I was a foreigner; hence, doubtless, the fullness of his answer.

"It seems to be a harmless mob enough," I suggested. "They make a lot of noise, to be sure; but that breaks no bones."

"There's just the point," said he. "The Princess' friends fight only with with their throats. If she had some bone-breakers among them, the present complication could never have arisen."

But meanwhile the multitude continued to shout, in keys so diverse as to exhaust the chromatic scale:

"Give us our Princess!"

"Where is the Hereditary Grand Duchess?"

"Where is Mathilde?"

"Down with Conrad!"

"Shame on Conrad!"

"Hang Conrad!"

"Death to Conrad!"

And such like, so that for Conrad, on the whole, it must have been a bad quarter of an hour.

Presently, however, came the sound of a bugle winding in the distance. The sound drew nearer and nearer. Pretty soon the bugler in person appeared, gorgeous in uniform, mounted upon a beautiful white horse, advancing slowly up the Bishofsplatz, towards the crowd, trumpeting with all his might.

"What is the meaning of that?" I asked.

"That is the signal to disperse," answered my companion. "He looks like a Major General, doesn't he? But he's only a trumpet sergeant, and he's followed at a hundred yards by a battalion of infantry. His trumpet blast is by way of warning. Disperse quietly, it says, and all will be forgiven. Tarry and the soldiery will arrive and make things hot for you."

"His warning does not seem to pass unheeded," I remarked.

"Oh, they're a chicken-hearted lot, these friends of the Princess," he assented contemptuously.

Already the mob had begun to melt. Of mob, properly speaking, in a few minutes, nothing was left; only a few stragglers in knots here and there, among them my acquaintance and myself. He was a handsome young fellow, with a thin, dark face, bright brown eyes, and a voice so soft that if I had heard without seeing him, I should almost have supposed the speaker to be a woman.

"We too had better be off," he said.

"And prove ourselves also chicken-hearted?" queried I.

"Oh, discretion is the better part of valor," he returned.

"But I should immensely like to stop and see the advent of the military," I submitted.

"Ha! Like or not, I'm afraid you'll have to, now," he cried. "Here they come."

With a murdurous tramp-tramp, the soldiers were pouring into the Bischofsplatz from the side streets leading to it.

"We must take to our heels," said my young man.

"We were merely on-lookers," said I.

"Conscious innocence!" laughed he. "Nevertheless, we had better run for it." And with our fellow loiterers we began most ignominiously to run away. But before we had run far we were stopped by the voice of an officer.

"Halt! Halt! Halt, or we fire!"

As one man we halted.

The officer rode up to us, and with true military taciturnity vouchsafed not a word either in question or explanation, but formed us in ranks of four abreast, and surrounded us with his men at arms. Then he gave the command to march. We were perhaps two dozen captives all told, and a good quarter of our number were women.

"What are we in for now?" I wondered aloud.

"God knows," replied my friend. "A night in the Castle of St. Michael, at any rate." And he shrugged his shoulders.

"Ah, that will be romantic," said I, feeling like one launched upon a life of adventure.

CHAPTER II.

He was quite right. We were marched across the town, through its narrow thoroughfares, over its sharp paving-stones, and into the court-yard of the Castle of St. Michael. By the time we got there and the heavy oaken gates were shut behind us it was nearly dark.

"Here you pass the night," announced our officer. "In the morning—humph! we will see."

"Do you mean to say they are going to afford us no better accommodation than this?" I demanded, apostrophizing the powers of the air, rather than any definite personality.

But the dark young man took it upon him to reply. "So it seems," said he. "Fortunately, however, the night is warm, the skies are clear, and to gaze upon the stars is reputed to be most elevating for the spirit."

Our officer, his brief but pregnant harangue concluded, had vanished into the castle, leaving us a corporal and three privates for a guard of honor.

We, the prisoners, gathered together in the middle of the court-yard, all of us, and held a sort of impromptu indignation meeting. The women were especially eloquent in their complaints. Two of these women I recognized as having been among my neighbors of the door-step a half hour since, and we exchanged compassionate glances. The other four were oldish women, who wore caps and aprons and looked like domestic servants.

"Cooks," whispered my comrade. "Some good burghers will be kept waiting for their suppers. Oh, what a lark!"

Our convention finally broke up with an informal resolution to the effect that, though we had been most shabbily treated, there was nothing to be done.

"We must grin and bear it. But let us make ourselves comfortable as we may, and seek distraction in an interchange of ideas," proposed my mate. He seated himself upon a barrel that lay lengthwise against the castle wall, and motioned me to place myself beside him.

"You are English?" he inquired in an abrupt, German way.

"No, I am an American."

"Ah, it is the same thing. A tourist? Have you been long in X——?"

"Three days."

"For heaven's sake, what have you found to keep you here three days?"

"I am a painter, and the town is paintable."

"Still life! Nature morte!" he cried. "It is the dullest little town in Christendom. But I am glad you are a painter, I am a musician—a fiddler."

"I suspected we were of the same general clan," said I.

"Did you, though? How funny! But I also seemed to scent a kindred soul."

"Here is my card. If we're not beheaded in the morning, I hope we may see more of each other," I went on.

He took my card, and, by the light of the match he struck for the occasion, read aloud from it: "Mr. Arthur Wainwright," pronouncing the English name without difficulty. "I have no card, but my name is Sebastian Roch."

"You speak English?" was my inference.

"Oh, yes, I speak a kind of English!" he confessed, using the tongue in question. He had scarcely a trace of a foreign accent.

"You speak it uncommonly well," I declared.

"Oh, I learned it as a child, and then I have relatives in England," he explained.

"Do you suppose there would be any objection to our smoking?" I asked.

"Oh, no! let us smoke by all means."

I offered him my cigarette case. When we had our cigarettes afire we resumed our talk.

"Tell me, what, in your opinion, is the truth about Mathilde?" I began. "Is she in voluntary hiding? Or is her uncle at the bottom of it?"

"Ah, that is too hard a riddle!" he protested. "I know nothing about it, and I have scarcely an opinion. But I may say very frankly that I am not one of her partisans. She has no worse enemy than I."

"What! Really? I am surprised at that. I thought all the youth of X—— were devoted to her."

"She's a harmless enough little person in her way, perhaps, and I have nothing positive to charge against her. Only I don't think she is made of the proper stuff for a reigning monarch. She is too giddy, too light-headed, a sort of mad-cap hoyden. She thinks too little of her dignity. Court ceremonial is infinitely tiresome to her; and the slow, dead life of X—— she fairly hates. Harmless, necessary X—— she has been known to call it. She was never born to be the motionless figure-head of this tiny ship of state; and with such a crew! Oh, you should see the ministers and courtiers! Dry bones and parchment, puffed up with tedious German etiquette! She is too easily bored, too fond of amusement. She was born to be a Bohemian, an artist, like you or me. I pity her, poor thing,—I pity every one whose destiny is to inhabit this dreary principality—but I can't approve of her. She, too, by-the-by, is a fiddler. She is said to play the violin very well. My own thought is—beware of fiddling monarchs."

"You hint a Nero," said I.

"Yes. I've no doubt she'd fiddle over the ashes of X—— with the best will in the world. Say a Nero crossed with a Haroun-al-Raschid. I fear her reign would be marred by many a queer midnight escapade, like that of the merry caliph, only without his intermixture of wrong-righting. She'd seek her own amusement solely, though to seek that in X——, pshaw! You might as well seek for blood in a stone. Oh, she'd make no end of mischief. The devil hath no agent like a woman bored."

"That's rather true," I agreed, laughing. "And Conrad—what of him?"

"Oh, Conrad's a beast, a squint-eyed, calulating beast, there's no doubt of that. But a beast might make a good enough grand duke; and, anyhow, a beast is all that a beastly little grand duchy like this deserves. However, to tell you my own secret feeling, I don't believe he'll have the chance to prove it. Mathilde, for all her ennui, is described as most tenacious of her rights, and as a shrewd little body, too, down at the bottom. That is inconsistent, but there's the woman of it. Oh, she's inconsequential to a degree! I can't help suspecting somehow that unless her uncle has really killed and buried her she will contrive by hook or crook to come to her throne. For my part, I'm sorry. I should prefer to be ruled by Conrad. But I would not bet my money on him, all the same. Have you ever seen him? He has the funniest, ugliest squint in Europe."

That night was very long, though we accomplished a lot of talking; very cold it seemed, too, though we were in midsummer. I dozed a little, with the stone wall of the castle for a pillow. At daybreak our guards were changed. At six o'clock we were visited by a dapper little subaltern, a lieutenant, who looked us over, asked our names and sundry other personal questions, scratched his chin for a moment, reflectively, and finally, with an air of inspiration, bade us begone.

The gates were thrown open, and we issued from our prison free.

"It's been almost a sensation," said Sebastian Roch. "Well, so one can experience almost a sensation, even in X——! Live and learn."

"You are not a patriot," said I.

"My dear, dear sir, I am patriotism personified. I am identified with my country heart and soul. Only I find it dull. If that be treason, make the most of it. I could not love thee, dear, so well, loved I not dullness less. It is not every night that I am arrested and sit on a barrel smoking cigarettes with an enlightened foreigner. The English are not generally accounted a lively race, but by comparison with the inhabitants of X—— they shine like diamonds."

"I dare say so," I acquiesced. "But I'm not English. I'm American."

"So I perceive from your accent," answered he, impertinently. "But as I told you once before, it amounts to the same thing. You wear your rue with a difference, that is all."

"Speaking of sensations," said I, "I shall die if I don't drink a cup of coffee."

"You'll find no public house awake at this hour," said Sebastian.

"Then I'll wake one up," vowed I.

"What! and provoke a violation of the law? By law they're not allowed to be open between midnight and 7 o'clock."

"Oh, laws be hanged. I must have a cup of coffee."

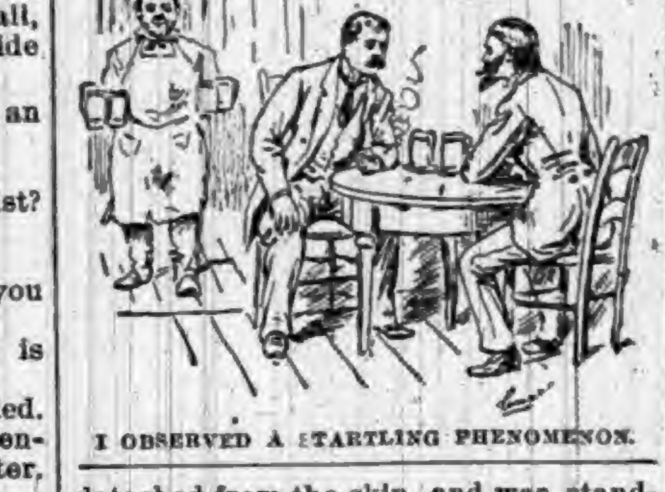
"Really, you are delightful," asserted Sebastian, putting his arm through mine.

Presently we came to a beer hall, at whose door I began vehemently to bang. My friend stood by, shaking with laughter, which seemed to me disproportionate to the humor of the event.

"You are easily amused," said I.

"Oh, no; far from it; but this is such a lark, you know," said he.

By and by we were seated opposite each other at a table, sipping hot coffee, served to us by a sleepy kellner in a soiled white apron.



I OBSERVED A STARTLING PHENOMENON.

As I looked at Sebastian Roch, I observed a startling phenomenon. The apex of his right whisker had become detached from the skin and was standing out half an inch aloof from his cheek. The sight sent a shiver down my spine. It was certainly most unnatural and eerie. His eyes were bright and honest; his voice was soft and refined; he spoke English like a man and a brother; and his character, so far as I had got at it through his talk, seemed whimsical and open; but his beard, his dashing, black, pointed beard, which I'm not sure I hadn't been envying him a little, was peculiar; and instinctively I felt for my watch. It was safe in its place, and so was my purse. Therefore at the door of the bierhaus, in due time, we bade each other a friendly good-by. He promised to look me up one of these days at my hotel.

"I have enjoyed your society more than you can think," he said. "Some of these days I'll drop in and see you, a l'improviste."

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

Shopping by System.

"But," says some woman, "we must 'shop'; we must get the things we want." Certainly. Bless your heart, shop all you want, but why not apply some kind of a system to the idea? Don't make a day of it. Give an occasional morning to the pleasure (?), and break it up in pieces. "Easy talking," says some one, "but we cannot always leave our homes when we want to, as you men can." My dear woman, God gives you just exactly the same amount of time as he does to men, and he hasn't given you a particle more to do within that period of time. The trouble is that women are not systematic enough. I played the part of eavesdropper in some of the stores, and was surprised to find how few women really knew just what they wanted. They knew in a general way, but not in a definite sense. Now, when a man goes shopping he knows precisely what he wants, asks for it, gets it, pays for it and goes away. Women's purchases are undoubtedly different, and such a simple system cannot, perhaps, be followed by them. But that women could simplify their shopping expeditions, numbers of their own sex have confessed to me within the last few days.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Estimate of Life.

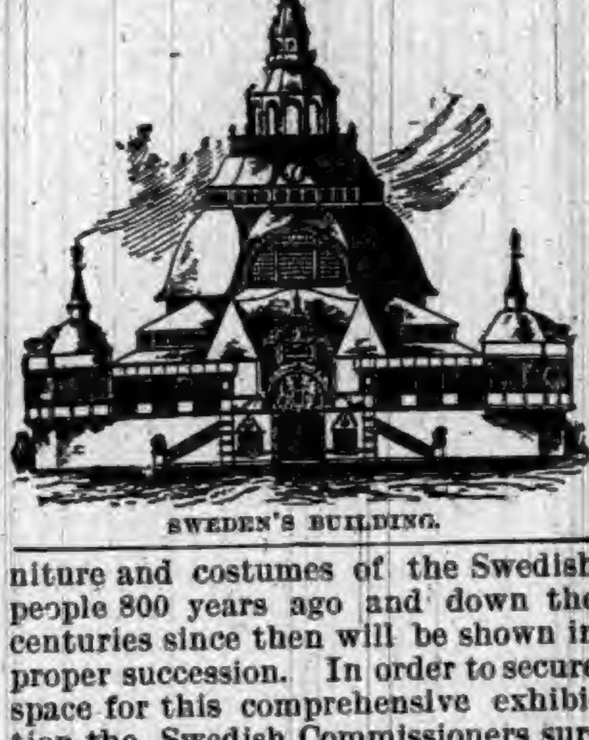
Measure not life by the hopes and enjoyments of this world so much as by the character you are forming and the influence you exert for good. Look rather to what is your moral and religious growth—what preparation you are making for what your life in the coming world is to be. Look well to the steps you are taking here, for the path in which you tread now you will be likely to walk forever.

EVERY desire is insatiable and therefore is always in want.

SWEDEN AT THE FAIR.

Special Historic and Agricultural Display by the Scandinavian Kingdom.

The Swedish World's Fair building will be located on a most eligible site opposite the Fisheries Department, on a triangular plat comprising 17,000 square feet. The building itself will cover 12,000 square feet, and be triangular in form to fit the space alotted. It will consist of a main floor and gallery, have a south front of 164 feet, and architecurally be patterned after the Swedish Cathedral style. Rising above the center of the front elevation will be a characteristic tower 200 feet in height. The structure will be of wood, made entirely in Sweden, and be shipped from Stockholm to Chicago in sections. The dwellings, furniture and costumes of the Swedish people 800 years ago and down the centuries since then will be shown in proper succession. In order to secure space for this comprehensive exhibition the Swedish Commissioners surrendered spaces alotted to them in the Manufacturing, Mining and Liberal Arts Buildings. Sweden will make no exhibit in the Fisheries Department, but her neighbor, Norway, will make up for the omission. Sweden, will, however, make fine agricultural and dairy exhibits, paying special attention to the latter.



SWEDEN'S BUILDING.

The King of Siam's Wives.

"The Chinese do all the menial labor in Siam. They also keep all the pawnshops and gambling houses, and teach the Siamese how to gamble," said Lieut L. N. Rasmussen at the Grand Pacific yesterday. He is a young Danish officer, who went to Siam six years ago at the solicitation of the king, to assist in drilling the royal troops in European fashion.

"The king has not a very large army—only 3,000 or 4,000 men—although the name of every male subject is on either the army or naval roll. But they are never called into service, as the king cannot stand the expense of feeding a large army. Moreover, it is not needed, as there are few outbreaks or disturbances.

"The king's army is larger than his family, but the latter is of pretty fair size. Nobody dares to give the exact figures, but at last accounts he had 100 wives and 105 children. The present king is a man about 38 years old, I think, and he is popular. He is the highest power, owns the whole country, and does about as he pleases, but he is well liked. His eldest son is the crown prince. Just now that youth is a member of the Buddhist priesthood. All the princes and nobles have to go through the priesthood before they are fully fledged."

"How does the king get all his wives?"

"They are presents to him from the nobles. They offer him their daughters. Of course, no one would dare to offer him one that was not fairly good-looking, and he seldom refuses to accept them. Should he refuse, the parents might as well move out of Siam, as the refusal would simply mean that the parents were in royal disfavor."

"How do the other people get their wives over there?"

"Oh, buy them. Many of the nobles have numerous wives. If a girl strikes their fancy they negotiate for her purchase, but not generally until they have paid her proper suit. Some of them buy their wives from the ranks of the actresses in the Siamese theaters. Prices vary from $1,000 to $80. It costs more to marry into a rich family. Sometimes young couples elope, just as they do in other countries. But the groom has to settle just the same. There is a rate fixed for elopements—400 ticals, or about $240."—San Franciso Chronicle.

Ancestors of the Horse.

Some interesting facts about the geological ancestors of the horse have recently been made known by Professor Marsh. Various forms of horse-like animals that lived in America in those remote times known to the geologists as the eocene, miocene, and pliocene epochs, and which may have occurred millions of years ago, have been unearthed, and science has not shrunk from the task of reconstructing these animals from their fragmentary remains.

The curiously interesting statement is made by Professor Marsh, that "the oldest ancestor of the horse—as yet undiscovered—undoubtedly had five toes on each foot, and probably was not larger than a rabbit, perhaps much smaller." He even ventures to predict in which of the geological strata the animal will probably be found, and suggests that it be named "Hippops."

In modern times a horse is occasionally seen which possesses extra toes, thus showing the existence of a slight tendency, under certain circumstances, to revert to the peculiarities of its remote ancestors.

This tendency is one of the proofs which science has to offer that the noble and beautiful animal, whose services add so much to the powers and the enjoyments of man, has really been developed from those queer beasts of ancient times to which the geologists have given such names as eohippus, orohippus, protohippus, miohippus, and pliohippus.

Very Interesting.

It is interesting to learn that we live a distance of only twenty trillion miles from the nearest of the so-called "fixed" stars.

SOME people lose their temper when another states what they did not know before, forgetting that if we learn anything we must learn from those who know what we do not know. If we get mad, we close the door; if we listen, we learn.

THE GREAT SOUTH AMERICAN
NERVINE TONIC
—AND—
Stomach AND Liver Cure
The Most Astonishing Medical Discovery of the Last One Hundred Years.
The Great South American Nervine Tonic
Which we now offer you, is the only absolutely unfailing remedy ever discovered for the cure of Indigestion, Dyspepsia, and the vast train of symptoms and horrors which are the result of disease and debility of the human stomach. No person can afford to pass by this jewel of incalculable value who is affected by disease of the stomach, because the experience and testimony of many go to prove that this is the ONE and ONLY ONE great cure in the world for this universal destroyer. There is no case of unmalignant disease of the stomach which can resist the wonderful curative powers of the South American Nervine Tonic.
HARRIET E. HALL, of Waynetown, Ind., says: "I owe my life to the Great South American Nervine. I had been in bed for five months from the effects of an exhausted stomach, Indigestion, Nervous Prostration, and a general shattered condition of my whole system. Had given up all hopes of getting well. Had tried three doctors, with no relief. The first bottle of the Nervine Tonic improved me so much that I was able to walk about, and a few bottles cured me entirely. I believe it is the best medicine in the world. I can not recommend it too highly."
MRS. ELLA A. BRATTON, of New Ross, Indiana, says: "I cannot express how much I owe to the Nervine Tonic. My system was completely shattered, appetite gone, was coughing and spitting up blood; am sure I was in the first stages of consumption, an inheritance handed down through several generations. I began taking the Nervine Tonic, and continued its use for about six months, and am entirely cured. It is the grandest remedy for nerves, stomach and lungs I have ever seen."
No remedy compares with SOUTH AMERICAN NERVINE as a cure for the Nerves. No remedy compares with South American Nervine as a wondrous cure for the Stomach. No remedy will at all compare with South American Nervine as a cure for all forms of failing health. It never fails to cure Indigestion and Dyspepsia. It never fails to cure Chorea or St. Vitus' Dance. Its powers to build up the whole system are wonderful in the extreme. It cures the old, the young, and the middle aged. It is a great friend to the aged and infirm. Do not neglect to use this precious boon: if you do, you may neglect the only remedy which will restore you to health. South American Nervine is perfectly safe, and very pleasant to the taste. Delicate ladies, do not fail to use this great cure, because it will put the bloom of freshness and beauty upon your lips and in your cheeks, and quickly drive away your disabilities and weaknesses.

Grand Pole Raising,

At Auburn, Saturday, August 13th, 1892.

The democrats of Auburn, and vicinity, will put up a large hickory pole on the date above mentioned, on Saturday afternoon, of next week, at 4 o'clock p. m. Let everyone who can attend, do so. There will be a rousing speech, by our candidate for Congress, who will come up here for that purpose. The speech will be at 8 in the evening. It is the first meeting of the campaign, and let us make it a good one. We hope to see our friends from all over the county, and of all parties, for the democrats believe in a fair and open discussion of all questions. Other speakers may also be present.

Hon. W. F. McNagny,

County Committee Meeting.

The democratic county committee will meet at their room in Auburn on Saturday, of this week,

August 6, at 10:30 a. m.

for the transaction of such business as may come before them. It is to be hoped that every committeeman will be present.

BEEKS ERICK, Chairman.

N. J. SHOOK, Sec.

THE only hope of the republican party is in the sweet buy and buy, says an exchange.

IN MICHIGAN, the people's party refuse to join with either party, and have nominated a full state ticket.

ALABAMA state election Monday gave the democratic candidate for governor about 30,000 majority over the combined Alliance and republicans. This will be poor comfort for those republican editors who have been claiming they would carry several southern states. It also shows a weakening of the Alliance down there.

REPUBLICAN papers are telling old soldiers the great number of pension bills Cleveland vetoed. But they don't give the reasons he vetoed them, because they dare not. We venture to say that Cleveland never vetoed a bill that had merit in it. Let them name one. Cleveland signed more pension bills than Harrison, and more than all the other presidents put together.

THE Butler Record says we can't name an article that has been made higher in price by the McKinley Bill. But only a week or two ago the Indianapolis Journal, from which all the country republican editors borrow their politics, said that tin plate was $4.20 per 100 in 1889; $4.40 in 1890; $5.60 in 1891: $5.20 in 1892. So of course all things made of tin would be dearer, unless the protected boss reduced the wages of his men as Carnegie did. Hundreds of other articles sell higher.

THE Kendallville News again changes hands. Brook H. Bowman and John H. Baughman, who have been editors in charge since Mr. Sheffer sold out to them, now retire, and Dr. Parker again takes the helm, to be assisted by a partner, T. A. Redmond. Dr. Parker is a well known newspaper man, and Mr. Redmond has been a prominent teacher in Lagrange county for some years. The COURIER wishes the new firm all possible prosperity, and the News a continuance of its respectable career.

HOUSE passed a bill the other day against the importation of over $100 worth of wearing apparel free of duty. Wealthy men, some of whom favored a high tariff on other people, have been in the habit of going abroad, and on their return, bring several trunks full of wearing apparel, which under the present laws, was free. It has been said for some time, that on Blaine's return from Europe, three years ago, he had seven big trunks full, and that W. W. Astor lately brought over 84 pairs of trousers free.

HON. C. G. CONN, of Elkhart, who once represented this county, Noble and Elkhart in the legislature, was last Wednesday nominated for congressman by the democrats of the Thirteenth district. The meeting was at Michigan City. Mr. H. E. Wadsworth, of the Laporte Argus, received 40 votes, while Conn received 60. Wadsworth, however was not a candidate, and did not know his name was to be presented. Conn is not a great statesman, but is an able business man, the proprietor of the great factory at Elkhart for making band instruments. He will probably be elected.

Auburn Rifles at Home.

The Auburn Rifles reached home Sunday morning about three o'clock, somewhat dusty, tired and sun burned, for they had had a hot week, and the state officers were strict in requiring full duty of them. The Waterloo boys got off at the Junction, and marched home. The Angola company came on up town and in the morning hired teams to take them to Angola. Both companies had expected a train to meet them at the Junction, but were disappointed. The Auburn Rifles come back in good spirits, having made a record they may well be proud of. They stand second now, having only the South Bend company ahead of them. Geo. Clark overheard some flattering remarks from citizens of Frankfort, and visitors, about Co. K., our boys, and many declared they were the best drilled company in camp. Besides, the boys took pains to have their clothes neat and tidy, giving them a dressy appearance. We predict that they will get the first place by next year.

Obituary.

Mrs. Lovicy Crew, wife of Benjamin Crew, was born in Noble county, Ind., July 20th, 1842, and died July 29, 1892, aged 50 years and 9 days. She was married to Benjamin Crew, in October, 1858. They resided in Stark county, Ohio, and in 1883, moved to Auburn, DeKalb county, Indiana. Mrs. Crew was the mother of fourteen children, six boys and eight girls; one boy and four girls having preceded her to the spirit world. Her last illness continued about six months, the latter weeks being weeks of extreme suffering. But she bore it patiently. Mrs. Crew was a faithful wife, a devoted mother and a respected neighbor. As a companion she proved herself true and steadfast during all the various hardships and changes of life. While her companion was fighting for his country beneath the stars and stripes, she faithfully kept the family together and carried on the domestic affairs at home. She leaves a husband, nine children and a host of friends, to mourn her departure. Before her death, she expressed a strong faith in Christ, and said, "All is well." She was baptized in infancy, and at one time, was a member of the Methodist church. Our loss is her eternal gain.

Oh, weep not for this mother,
Her gentle spirit has fled;
She sweetly sleeps with Jesus,
'Mong the silent and the dead.

The funeral services were conducted from the Lutheran church, and interment took place in Evergreen cemetery.

Rev. J. D. BROSY, officiating.

DR. PRICE'S BAKING POWDER.

Supplying the Army, Navy and Indian Department.

The purchasing agents of the United States Government have ordered nearly one hundred thousand pounds of Dr. Price's Baking Powders in the first five months of this year, 1892 The government exercises great care in selecting its supplies of all kinds, rejecting everything that is not of the best, and the very fact that it has adopted Dr. Price's Baking Powder is proof that it has found the best of all the baking powders. Dr. Price's is peculiarly adapted for export, as neither long sea voyages nor climatic changes affect it, this brand keeping fresh and sweet for years while other baking powders deteriorate rapidly. It is guaranteed to the government to be a pure cream of tartar powder, free from ammonia, alum, or other harmful substances, and it is also the only baking powder prepared by a physician of high standing.

CALIFORNIA.

California is the most attractive and delightful section of the United States, if not of the world, and many beautiful resorts will be crowded by the best families of the east during the entire winter. It offers to the investor the best open opportunity for safe and large returns from its fruit lands. It offers the kindest climate in the world to the feeble and debilitated; and it is reached in the most comfortable manner over the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe railroad. Pullman Vestibule Sleeping Cars leave Chicago by this line every day in the year and go without change or transfer through to San Francisco, Los Angeles and San Diego. This is a feature not offered by any other line. Write to John J. Byrne, 621 Rialto Building, Chicago, Ill., if you desire any further information as to the country and accommodations for reaching it.

Prof. David P. Todd, of Amherst College, will describe in the August Century an ascent of Fuji san, the sacred mountain of Japan. His expedition was one of several which have been made possible by the bequest of a wealthy and eccentric Boston gentleman who left a fortune of $200,000 to a Board of Trustees, with discretionary power to employ it in establishing and maintaining an astronomical observatory on some mountain peak. The fund is now managed by the Harvard College Observatory, and experimental research has been conducted at high altitudes in different parts of the globe in order to show the precise nature of the improved condition of vision, and to ascertain the best location for the mountain observatory.

County Teachers' Institute.

The DeKalb county teachers' institute meets in Auburn, Aug. 22, for the regular annual session of five days. A corps of excellent instructors has been secured, which assures good work, and an interesting session.

The instructors are: Cyrus W. Hodgin, of Earham College, and Arnold Tompkins, of the State Normal at Terre Haute.

The teachers are to take up Civil Government in their reading circle work this year, and the work of Mr. Hodgin will be valuable, as he is one of the best instructors in that branch, in the country.

Mr. Tompkins is one of the most thoroughly posted instructors on educational subjects, in the state. His work will probably include History of Education, Mental Science, Pedagogy, and kindred subjects. He is an eloquent and forcible speaker.

Monday evening, will be the annual institute sermon.

Tuesday evening, lecture by Miss Henrietta G. Moore, of Springfield, O.

Wednesday evening, lecture by the renowned Dr. Nourse, of Washington, D. C.

The lecture for Thursday evening, will be announced next week.

Rev. Henrietta G. Moore, who speaks Tuesday evening, is one of the ablest lady lecturers in the country. Such well known persons as Miss Frances Willard, and Rev. H. A. Tompson, ex-president of Otterbein University, speak of her in the highest terms. Altogether the institute work bids fair to be of the most interesting character.

"The Rocky Mountain Limited" And "The Big 5."

Two Grand Trains Daily Between the World's Fair City and the Foothills.

One Night Out, or One Day Out. Take Your Choice. Business Demands It, and the People Must Have it.

The popularity of "The Great Rock Island Route" as a Colorado line—it having long time since taken first place as the people's favorite between the Lakes and the Mountains—has compelled the management to increase its present splendid service by the addition of a train that is one night on the road from Chicago to Denver, Colorado Springs or Pueblo. This train will be known as the "ROCKY MOUNTAIN LIMITED," and will be put in service May first. Leaves Chicago daily at 10:45 a. m., arriving at above cities in the afternoon of the next day, earlier than any of its competitors Especial equipment has been built for this train, with the view of making it a limited in every sense of the word, and best of all, there will be no extra charge. The route of this exceedingly fast train is by the Rock Island Short Line, and a few of the large cities through which it passes, are Davenport, DesMoines, Council Bluffs, Omaha, Lincoln, Beatrice, Fairbury, Belleville, Phillipsburg, Smith Center, Colby and Goodland. This makes it a most desirable route, and particularly interesting to the traveler. Another point: The popularity of our dining-car service is still on the increase, and no money spared to make this service what our patrons always say, "the best."

Our "Big 5" will continued as usual, leaving Chicago at 10 p. m. and arriving at Denver, Colorado Springs and Pueblo, the second morning, being but one day out, and this fast and popular train goes through Omaha.

Our No. 11 will leave as heretofore at 6 p. m., arrive at Kansas City at 9:00 a. m., and will reach Denver, Colorado Springs and Pueblo the second morning.

Our Colorado service is made perfect by this new "Rocky Mountain Limited" and the "Big 5," and gives to the traveling public two flyers daily.

Manitou passengers should consult the map and time tables of our line, to fully appreciate the advantages in time saved by taking this route, when on their summer vacation.

Low Rate Harvest Excursion.

The announcement that the North-Western Line, comprising over 8,000 miles of thoroughly equipped railways, has arranged to run two low rate Harvest Excursions during the months of August and September, will be gladly received by those who are interested in the development of the great West and Northwest, as by those who desire to visit this wonderfull productive region at a season of the year when exact demonstration can be made of the merits and advantages it offers to home-seekers and those in search of safe and profitable investments These excursions will leave Chicago on August 30th and Sept. 27th, and tickets can be purchased at the very low rate of one fare for the round trip to points in Iowa, Minnesota, North and South Dakota, Nebraska, Wyoming, Colorado, Utah, Idaho and Montana. They will be strickly first-class in every particular and will be good for return passage at any time within twenty days from date of purchase. Full information concerning rates and arrangments for these excursions can be obtained upon application to any coupon ticket agent, or to W. A. Thrall, G. P. T. A., Chicago & North Western R'y, Chicago.

Yellowstone National Park.

Have you ever seen this world's wonderland? If not and you contemplate a trip to it the coming summer, it is well to bear in mind that the Wisconsin Central Lines is the through car route from Chicago and Milwaukee, via the Northern Pacific R. R., running through Pullman vestibuled and tourist sleepers without change. Meals served enroute in dining cars. The Wisconsin Central lines is also the best route from Chicago, to all the delightfully cool summer resorts in Wisconsin and the northwest. Pamphlets containing valuable information will be sent free upon application to D. W. Janowitz, D. P. A., Indianapolis, Ind., or Jas. C. Pond, General Passenger and ticket agent, Chicago, Ill.

Don't smother your better judgment through the influence of an erroneous pride, in thinking there is no difference between the prices of the same articles when sold by different dealers, but call on J. Beuret, and learn for yourself.

Willie Campbell started for Linden, Michigan Tuesday, where he has a job in a carriage factory. He will work at his trade, trimming carriages. Willie is a bright young man, and has done well for one of his years. We hope to hear a good report from him.

George Chapman, the South Side barber, has moved his shop from the Watson building to the room in Kuhlman's office, formerly occupied by B. F. Stahl, and his successor, D. F. Boston. He has a good trade and enjoys the consideration of a conscientious neighborhood.

Owing to Supt. Merica's severe illness the regular examination last Saturday was in charge of Prof. H. E. Coe of the High school. It was an examination that could not be delayed, for the country schools begin early and it is necessary that a full corps be ready to take charge of them.

Charles Schaab and wife returned last Friday from their long stay at Clear Lake in Steuben county. They enjoyed the trip greatly. Charles' nose has quite a blossom on it which is due, no doubt to the fierceness of the sun's rays, and such a complexion as he had when he reached here!

A new sidewalk was laid along the north side of the Kiblinger hardware store Tuesday. A number of silver coins were found under the old walk. But that is not strange, as the COURIER printing office is just upstairs on that side, and the cash was, no doubt, thrown out by the office boy with the floor sweepings.

Rev. Mr. Keller, of Racine, Wis., will be installed as pastor of the German Lutheran church, Sunday, August 14th, 1892. He is just from college and takes the place of Rev. C. B. Price, who preached his closing sermon last Sunday. A cordial invitation is extended to all German-speaking people to attend this meeting.

The Epworth League will give a parlor social at Miss Minnie Zimmerman's home on West Seventh St., tomorrow evening at 7.30. Each member will be expected to give a declamation, sing a song, tell a story, or if they fail in these, must pay ten cents. They will have a pleasant time anyway, and no one can afford to miss it.

Miss Etta Fretz, sister of L. B. Fretz of this office, went to Syracuse Saturday where she expects to stay, in the family of J. T. Howard, postmaster of that place, as nurse to Mrs. Howard who has been an invalid for several years. Miss Fretz has had considerable experience in that line, and this call evidences the fact that still another native of Old DeKalb has taken a front seat in the field of usefulness abroad.

Laporte Argus: Sixty-nine out of the seventy-three professors of Harvard university are supporters of Cleveland. The percentage of tariff reformers among the professors of Ann Arbor, Yale and all the other noted institutions of learning in America is about as great. It has come to a time when every well informed person expects an educated man to be a free trader, because there is no other ground for him to accuse and be in touch with the progress and philosophy of the times.

Coroner Miser has received two affidavits from Beaver Dam, Wisc., in regard to Joseph Mathias, the shears grinder, killed near the Junction a short time ago. One is the testimony of Mrs. Mathias, in which she states she was married to Mathias about 28 years ago He was a blacksmith, but for some time, had been wandering about. He was not a drinking man, was not deaf nor nearsighted. Deceased was 65 years old, and was born at Chemnitz in Bavaria, Germany. The other was by Mathias' son, in-law, who testified that the tools wheel, etc., and the clothes, the description of the body found on the track proved that Mathias was the unfortunate man, run down by the train. He had wandered a long way from his home.

The Midsummer Holiday Century will contain a number of complete stories, including "The Philosophy of Relative Existences," a ghost story which is said to reverse some of the old traditions, by Frank R. Stockton, and "The Colonel's Last Campaign," by the author of "Mr. Cutting, the Night Editor," and with illustrations by Charles Dana Gibson.

The Ashley room on West Seventh street has been refitted, and a restaurant goes in. It will be conducted by W. R. Hidy, who comes here from North Manchester. He is fitting the rooms up in excellent shape, and will make it a first class restaurant. He intended to open up on Saturday of this week, but the room will not likely be ready till the fore part of next week.

If any of our housekeepers are troubled with those little pests—red ants—the following may be of vast importance if added to their store of knowledge: Little red ants cannot travel over wool or rag carpet. Cover the shelf in a closet or pantry with flannels, set whatever you wish to keep from the ants on it, and they will at once disappear. They may be caught also in sponges into which sugar has been sprinkled: then drop the sponges into hot water. Ex.

Geo. T. Weeks, who has been for some time foreman of the COURIER office, left Monday noon for the northwest, Duluth being his objective point at present. He will stop a day or two at Chicago to see the city, and then proceed to Duluth, where he expects to have a position in a newspaper office. His uncle, Col. Lounsberry lives there, we believe, or at least is connected with the Duluth newspaper interest, and talks some of starting a paper of his own at Grand Forks, Dakota. In that case, Mr. Weeks will go with him. The few years he has been in Auburn have secured him many friends and the esteem of all who knew him. He is a young man of the best habits and strictest integrity. Such a man cannot help but succeed. The COURIER has only the best wishes for his future.

Nellie Barns received a letter last week from her friend Miss Gertie Wilson, who is now at Little Rock visiting her sister Mrs. Minnie Schaffer. The latter has been quite sick of some malarial fever. Miss Gertie writes that they have had no hotter weather there than we have here, though so far south.

Postmaster Gordon soon starts out on a second trip over the county to inspect the postoffices. There are in all twenty one offices, of which Auburn shows the highest receipts, Butler next, then Garrett, and Waterloo fourth, while Mt. Hope is the smallest. These inspections in the county, will likely be productive of good.

Miss Caroline A. Creevey's articles on "Botany as a Recreation" now being published in Harper's Bazar, are attracting deserved attention on account of the popular and very attractive character of the information which they contain. The chapter on "Orchids," which appears in the number for July 16, is of special value on account of the rapidly growing interest which is being taken in the cultivation of these plants.

Bro. Campbell of the Dispatch, was beautifully snubbed at the senatorial convention at Garrett last week. He only got six and three-fifths votes out of a total of 50; 25 being from this county. And this was only an informal ballot. James Graves of Kendallville had twenty-seven and one-fifteenth, and J. D. Leighty of St. Joe, had sixteen and one-fifteenth. Campbell then withdrew and the first formal vote showed: Graves 26 and Leighty 24. So Graves is the man that J. E. McDonald, the democratic candidate will have the pleasure of defeating.

The COURIER, last week, said that Will Kruger had become the chief clerk at the store of John Kruger, since the resignation of H. J. Mossey, which was a mistake. It should have stated that John Kruger, jr., who was so long the underclerk, has been promoted to the highly important office of chief counter-jumper and package marker.

The commissioners were in session Monday to receive the annual reports of the trustees. They also let the contract for the remaining bridge, the one across Cedar Creek, east of St. John. It will be a combination of iron and wood and will cost much less than iron with stone abutments. The commissioners are very properly trying to save money.

Trustee's Office Days.

I will be at my office for the transaction of public business on Tuesday of each week till further notice.

Base Ball Game.

The Pleasant Lake and Waterloo base ball clubs will play on the club grounds at Auburn to-morrow, Friday afternoon, begining at two o'clock. Admittance to grounds, 15 cents. Ladies free.

Prohibition Rally.

The great prohibition campaign opening will be in Auburn to-morrow when Hon. J. S. Hughes, who was their candidate for governor in 1888, will address the people. He is a speaker of great force and ability, and should have a good audience. All the people of all parties are earnestly invited to come and hear him.

Garrett Steam Laundry.

Peter Young has the agency for the Model Steam Laundry at Garrett, an establishment that has a reputation equal to the best, and has been in operation for the past two years with marked success. Parties should call on Mr. Young when they want any work in this line. Fine work and prompt delivery a specialty. Laundry will be sent over by Mr. Young Tuesday and be returned Saturday.

Annual Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Disciples of Christ will be held at Newville, beginning August 26, and ending August 29. The orator of the occasion will be A. I. Hobbs, president of the Christian convention, DesMoines, Iowa. He is a very able speaker and extensively known. There will be other men of broad experience present. A good time is expected. Ample provisions will be made to accommodate all who besire to remain during the meeting.

The Rose Reunion Association.

The Rose family have a reunion at Linwood Park, Vermillion, Ohio, August 24, and 25. The place is about thirty miles west of Cleveland, and a large attendance is expected, for the family is a numerous one. Last year they held a meeting at the same place and several hundred were present. All the relatives of the "Roses" are invited. For information, address Mrs. E. N. Rose Linwood Park, Vermillion, Ohio, or J. E. Rose, Sec., Auburn, Ind.

Governor's Day, Rome City.

August 11, is Governor's Day at Island Park. The programme should call out all the people. It is: 11 a. m., Hon. Claude Mathews, democratic candidate for Governor; 1.30 p. m., Rev. Aaron Worth; 2.30 p. m. Gov. Chase, republican candidate; 4 p. m. Mr. Templeton. This is not to be a discussion, but each one will speak on the political situation from his party's standpoint. The success of this summer's meeting at Island Park has been great so far, and the interest increases as the time goes on. Let all come and hear the governors.

Took Possession.

J. A. Landis, the man who purchased the City Photograph Gallery of J. G. Clapp, came down from Angola, Tuesday, and took possession. He will not make any reduction from the now firmly established standard of prices, but expects to adhere strictly to the principles inaugurated by his predecessor, namely, to charge three dollars for three-dollar pictures, and thereby be enabled to give the people what they pay for,—good work. He is a very gentlemanly appearing fellow, and we believe our people will find it to their interest to call and see for themselves just what his manner of doing business is.

Beautiful.

On Monday evening, of last week, quite a number of the Pythian Sisters assembled at the home and photograph gallery of J. G. Clapp, and completely surprised him and his estimable wife, who were afterwards made the happy recipients of a beautifully gotten up, handsomely engraved and costly silver fruit stand, with the names of the donors attached. This emblematic memento of respect was given in remembrance of of the friendship and kindly acts for which Mr. and Mrs. C., are so justly popular in this vicinity. We regret to lose them as citizens from our little town, but hope that wherever they may locate, success will crown their efforts.

The Cool Road Cart Factory.

We took a brief view of this new factory this week, and found it a scene of bustle and activity. Road carts in all stages of advancement are to be seen, and workmen are busily engaged in putting them together and finishing up for shipment. The buildings used are those of the Grogg & Kandel planing mill, later used by the Auburn windmill company. The works are but recently started, but already the shipments are considerable, and the vehicles are becoming popular. The novel feature about these road carts is the adjustable or easily fitted canopy top, an improvement that enables one to put on or take off the canopy top without trouble, It is a decided improvement and is bound to assist greatly in extending the sale of these popular vehicles. Mr. Cool, the proprietor, has had a good deal of valuable experience in vehicles, and is giving his attention wholly to the work of making the best road cart ever put on the market. Those who contemplate buying one of these light vehicles should call on him at the factory, near the Lake Shore depot.

NOTICE.

The Auburn Mining Company will run the incandescent lights all night, commencing with the week of the fair.

For President,
GROVER CLEVELAND,
OF NEW YORK.
For Vice President,
ADLAI E. STEVENSON,
OF ILLINOIS.

McKinley meditates and looks
Decidedly abashed:
This Homestead battle to the ground
His theories has dashed.

Let us explain.—Republican party.

Pennsylvania furnishes the most eloquent lesson in protection.

In the latest engagement Tom Reed may be classed among the "missing."

The obnoxious and infamous force bill hangs about the President's neck like a millstone.

Protection taxes the American people $10,000,000 for the privilege of using tin plate.

Higher prices and lower wages—these are the results of the infamous McKinley bill to date.

Gov. McKinley will probably not be requested to make any speeches in Pennsylvania this year.

Carnegie, being a consistent Republican, thought he would put in operation a force bill on his private account.

Has Mr. John W. Foster got the gout? Oh, no. He has to wrap his feet up that way in order to fill Blaine's shoes.

The result of the scenes at Homestead, when commented on by voters next November, may furnish Pecksniff Carnegie with a new reading of "Triumphant Democracy."

Many contemporaries are remarking, "There will be no troops at the polls this year." Certainly not. Most of them will be busy guarding the mills of protected manufacturers.

The work Dudley and Quay did in 1888 will be managed directly from the White House in 1892, but the little man with the large hat will have a good deal of trouble this year in seeing that "none escape and that all vote our ticket."

With the Republicans explaining their silver plank, explaining Mr. Reid's relations with labor, explaining the force bill plank, and explaining the McKinley bill, this promises to be a campaign of explanation entirely for that party.

In one breath the McKinley organs assert that protection does not raise prices, and in the next cry out that the removal of protection would subject our manufacturers to the foreign competition from which the tariff shields them. The organs err in supposing that the American people are idiots.

A Western branch of the Democratic National Committee, with headquarters at Chicago, will probably be established. The active work for Democracy projected by the Northwestern States will be an interesting feature of the coming campaign, and it should be directly cared for by representatives of the National Committee, stationed on the immediate field of operations.

The talk about breaking the solid South is all moonshine. If Republican success did not clearly menace the South with another force bill, and the consequent revival of the race question, one or two of the Southern States might possibly be fighting ground. As it is there is not the least likelihood that Mr. Harrison will get a single electoral vote from that part of the country.

St. Louis Republic: While Protectionists are bearing down workingmen's wages in Pennsylvania they are energetically forcing up the price of binder twine to the farmers in Iowa. The farmers up there make vigorous protest against the advance of two cents a pound on twine. Have they no gratitude? Are they not blessed with a high protective tax on seed wheat?
